WAR POWERS UNDER THE CONSTITUTION

Analyzed by Charles Evans Hughes

Distinguished Jurist in an Exhaustive Discussion of the Province of Congress and the President, Treats of Conscription, the Militia, Personal and Property Rights, Taxation and the Power Over the Production and Distribution of Food.

> BEFORE the American Bar Association, convened in annual session at Saratoga, N. Y., Charles Evans Hughes, former Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, on Wednesday delivered an address on "War Powers Under the Constitution." It was an occasion eminently fitting for such an address, and Mr. Hughes, perhaps better than any other in the distinguished and learned assembly, because of the fullness of his experience on the bench of the court which gives interpretation to the Constitution, was the man to give to the subject the touch of authority.
> "The powers to wage war," said the former Justice, 'is the power to wage war successfully," for a "nation which could not fight would be powerless to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity." Thus the framers of the Constitution did not "contrive an imposing spectacle of impotency," but in the unusual circumstances of war a "fighting Constitution."

By CHARLES E. HUGHES.

IN the unusual circumstances of war it is natural that there should be some confusion with respect to the constitutional warrant for extraordinary action taken or contemplated. Some altogether misconceived the Constitution. Others vaguely fear that we are serving temporary exigency at the expense of our fundamental law, and that we are thus breeding a lawless nstitution ignoring spirit which is a serious enace to our future. Others seek to raise ubts of power in order to embarrass the prose- tion of the war. And there seems to be still ers who in their zeal impatiently and without ught put the Constitution aside as having no tion to these times.

nstitutional Government in War.

Vhile we are at war, we are no in revolution. are making war as a nation organized under Constitution, from which the established na- nal authorities derive all their powers either war or in peace. The Constitution is as effec- ve today as it ever was and the oath to sup- ort it is just as binding. But the framers of he Constitution did not contrive an imposing spectacle of impotency. One of the objects of "a more perfect union" was to "provide for the common defense." A nation which could not would be powerless to secure the "blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity." Self preservation is the first law of national life and the Constitution itself provides the necessary powers in order to defend and preserve the United States. Otherwise, as Mr. Justice Story said, "the country would be in danger of losing both its liberty and its sovereignty from its dread of investing the public councils with the power of defending it. It would be more willing to submit to foreign conquest than to domestic rule.'

The war powers under the Constitution are carefully distributed. To Congress is given the power "to declare war." The proposal to add "to make peace" found no favor, as this was deemed to belong to the treaty making power vested in the President and the Senate. To the President was given the direction of war as the commander in chief of the army and navy. It was not in the contemplation of the Constitution that the command of forces and the conduct of campaigns should be in charge of a council or that as to this there should be a division of authority or responsibility. The prosecution of war demands in the highest degree the promptness, directness and unity of action in military operations which alone can proceed from the executive. This exclusive power to command the army and navy and thus direct and control campaigns exhibits not autocracy but democracy fighting effectively through its chosen instruments and in accordance with the established organic law.

Plenary Power to Wage War.

WHILE the President is commander in chief, in the Congress resides the authority "to raise and support armies" and 'to provide and maintain a navy," and to make rules for the 'government and regulation of the land and naval forces;' and as a safeguard against military domination the power to raise and support armies is qualified by the provision that 'no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years," otherwise the power is unlimited. The Congress is to prescribe the military organization and provide the equipment, afford maintenance, and for these purposes appropriate such amounts of money as it thinks necessary.

Upon every citizen lies the duty of aiding in the common defense. In exercising its Constitutional power to raise armies, the Congress may enforce this duty. The Congress may call anyone to service who is able to serve. The question who may be called or in what order is simply one for the judgment of the national legislature. The power vested in Congress is not to raise armies simply by calling for volunteers, but to raise armies by whatever method Congress deems best and hence be deemed to embrace conscription. To the framers of the Constitution, the draft was a familiar mode of raising armies, as it has been resorted to by the colonies to fill up their quota in the revolutionary war. It is true that the proposal in 1814 of Monroe as Secretary of War to resort to conscription was vigorously opposed as unconstitutional. But the draft was put in force both by the Union and by the Confederacy during the Civil War and its validity was sustained by the courts in both North and South. "The power of coercing the citizen," said Judge Robertson of Virginia in Burrough vs Peyton, 16 Gratt 470 (1864) "to render military service is indeed a transcendent power in the hands of any government; but so far from being inconsistent with liberty it is essential to its preservation."

Lincoln's Opinion.

PERMIT me to quote upon the question the opinion prepared (although not published) by President Lincoln, which sets forth admirably the ground for sustaining the power of Congress to pass a conscription act.

"In this case, those who desire the rebellion to succeed, and others who seek reward in a different way, are very active in accommodating us with this class of arguments. They tell us the law is unconstitutional. It is the first instance, I believe, in which the power of Congress to do a thing has ever been questioned in a case when the power is given by the Constitution in express terms. Whether a power can be implied when it is not expressed has often been the subject of controversy; but this is the case in which the degree of effrontery has been ventured on of denying a power which is plainly and distinctly written down in the Constitution. The Constitution declares that 'the Congress shall have power * * * * to raise and support armies; but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years.' The whole scope of the conscription act is 'to raise and support armies,' There is nothing else in it. * * * Do you admit that the power is given to raise and support armies, and yet insist that by this act Congress has not exercised the power in a constitutional mode? Has not done the thing in the right way? Who is to judge of this? The Constitution gives Congress the power but it does not prescribe the more or expressly declare who shall prescribe it. In such case Congress must prescribe the more, or relinquish the power. There is no alternative. * * * * The power is given fully, completely, unconditionally. It is not a power to raise armies if state authorities consent; nor if the men to compose the armies are entirely willing; but it is a power to raise and support armies given to Congress by the Constitution and without any 'if.' * * * * The principle of the draft, which simply is involuntary or enforced service, is not new. It has been practiced in all ages of the world. It was well known at the time they placed in that instrument the provision that 'the Congress shall have power to raise and support armies.' * * * * Wherein is the peculiar hardship now? Shall we shrink from the necessary means to maintain our free Government which our grandfathers employed to establish it and our own fathers have already employed once to maintain it? Are we degenerate? Has the manhood of the race run out?

These are the words of Lincoln, penned in the midst of the Civil War in which conscription was enforced and his reasoning is conclusive. And while the question was not presented to the United States Supreme Court, the power of Congress was explicitly recognized in Tarbele's case (13 Wall, p. 407) and in later opinions.

Conscientious Objectors.

THE constitutional authority thus vested in Congress is not limited by any qualification arising from religious beliefs or conscientious objections. These are matters not affecting power, but policy. As M. Justice Harlan said, in delivering the opinion of the Supreme Court in Jacobson vs. Masssachusetts (197 U. S. p. 29) one "may be compelled by force if need be, against his will and without regard to his personal wishes or his pecuniary interests, or even his religious or political convictions, to take his place in the ranks of the army of his country and risk the chance of being shot down in its defense. It is, however, in my judgment, a sound policy on the part of Congress to provide for the discharge from the draft of conscientious objectors. Nothing, I believe is gained for the country by overriding the claims of conscience in such cases; but it is obviously necesary that they should be such definitions and restrictions as will prevent imposture and evasion by those who have as little conscience as they have stomach for war.

It is contended in some quarters that this power, which undoubtedly Congress had, has been restricted or abolished by the thirteenth amendment, provides that "neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted shall exist within the United States or any place subject to their jurisdiction." It has been said by the United States Supreme Court that the plain intention "was to abolish slavery of whatever name and form and all its badges and incidents; to render impossible any state of bondage; to make labor free by prohibiting that control by which the personal service of one man is disposed of or coerced for another's benefit, which is the essence of involuntary servitude. It hits not only slavery but peonage. But the language of the amendment was not new. It reproduced the historic words of the Ordinance of 1787 for the government of the Northwest Territory, and its terms, construed in the light of its history and plain purpose, afford no basis whatever for the conclusion that it interfered in the slightest degree with the power of Congress to raise and support armies.

In the case of Robertson vs Baldwin (165 U. S. 275) it was argued that the Thirteenth Amendment invalidated certain provisions of the Revised Statutes authorizing Justices of the Peace to issue warrants for deserting seamen. In denying the claim, the court said:

"It is clear, however, that the amendment was not intended to introduce any novel doctrine with respect to certain descriptions of service which have always been treated as exceptions, such as miltary and naval enlistments." The soldier drafted under Act of Congress is performing the duty which he owes of aiding in the common defense and the constitutional amendment contemplates no escape from the duty to defend and preserve the United States.

Power Over the Militia.

THE power "to raise and support armies" should not be confused with the power given to Congress "to provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections and repel invasions;" and "to provide for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the states respectively the appointment of the officers and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress." The President is Commander in Chief not alone of the "army and navy of the United States," but also "of the militia of the several states, when called into the actual service of the United States." The militia within the meaning of these provisions of the Constitution, is distinct from the army of the United States. "Remember always," said Daniel Webster, "that the great principle of the Constitution on that subject is that the militia is the militia of the states and not of the general Government, and being thus the militia of the states there is no part of the Constitution worded with greater care and with a more scrupulous jealousy, than that which grants and limits the power of Congress over it."

In order to execute the laws of the Union, to suppress insurrection and to repel invasions, it would be necessary to employ regular troops or to employ the militia. And the power given to Congress with respect to the militia was manifestly to make a large standing army unnecessary. But as the service of the organized militia can only be required by the national Government for the limited purpose specified in the Constitution, it follows) as Attorney-General Wickersham advised President Taft) that the organized militia, as such, cannot be employed for offensive warfare outside the limits of the United States.

This, however, is apart from the power of Congress to raise and support a Federal army. Congress may be content with a small standing army in ordinary times, but Congress may create and equip such army as it pleases, subject to the qualification with respect to appropriations. It can equip an army in preparation for war, and of course it may furnish whatever army is required for the prosecution of war. The organization and service of an army raised by Congress are not subject to the limitations governing its control of the militia. The power to use an army is coextensive with the power to make war; and the army may be used wherever the war is carried on, here or elsewhere. There is no limitation upon the authority of Congress to create an army and it is for the President as Commander in Chief to direct the campaigns of that army wherever he may think they should be carried on. As Chief Justice Taney, speaking for the Supreme Court in Fleming v. Page (9 How, p. 615), said: "As Commander in Chief, he is authorized to direct the movements of the naval and military forces placed by law at his command, and to employ them in the manner he may deem most effectual to harass and conquer and subdue the enemy. He may invade the hostile country and subject it to the sovereignty and authority of the United States."

We employed our arms in Canada in the War of 1812; our troops were again sent to foreign soil in the Mexican War and in the war with Spain, and more recently have been employed in China and Mexico. There is no doubt of the constitutional authority to employ our forces on the battlefields of Europe in the war that we are now waging for the safety of the United States and to conquer an enduring peace that the liberties of free peoples throughout the world may forever be secured from the aggressions of unscrupulous military power.

Power to Wage War Successfully.

THE power to wage war is the power to wage war successfully. The framers of the Constitution were under no illusions as to war. They had emerged from a long war, which had taught them the weakness of a mere confederation, and they had no hope that they hold what they had won save as they established a union which could fight with the strength of one people, under one government intrusted with the common defense. In equipping the national Government with the needed authority in war, they tolerated no limitations inconsistent with that object, as they realized that the very existence of the nation might be at stake and that every resource of the people must be at command. Said Madison in the Federalist, "Security against foreign danger is one of the primitive objects of civil authority. It is an avowed and essential object of the American Union. The powers requisite for attaining it must be effectually confided to the Federal councils." And Hamilton said: "The idea of restraining the legislative authority, in the means of providing for the national defense, is one of those refinements which owe their origin to a zeal for liberty more ardent than enlightened." He again emphasized the same ideas in these words: "The circumstances that endanger the safety of nations are infinite, and for this reason no constitutional shackles can wisely be imposed on the power to which the care of it is committed. This power ought to be co-exclusive with all the possible combinations of such circumstances; and ought to be under the direction of the same councils which are appointed to preside over the common defense."

It was in this view that plenary power was given to Congress to wage war and raise armies. It is also in the light of this conception of national exigencies that we must read subdivision 18 of section 8 of article 1 of the Constitution (following the enumeration of powers), which gives Congress the authority "to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by the Constitution in the Government of the United States or in any department or office thereof.

"It must also be remembered that it is of the essence of national power where it exists it dominates. There is no room in our scheme of government for the assertion in hostility to the exercise of Federal power. The power of the national Government to carry on war is explicit and supreme, and the authority thus resides in Congress in the event of war is confined the power to effect whatever legislation is necessary to prosecute the war with vigor and success, and this power is to be exercised without impairment of the authority committed to the President as Commander in Chief to direct military operations.

Power of the President.

EACH of these powers, that of Congress and of the President, is the subject of a distinct grant, each is the complement of the other, and together they furnish the adequate equipment of authority for war. There is no more impressive spectacle than that of the President of the republic in time of war when in addition to the other great powers of his office he acts in supreme command of the armed forces of the nation and conducts its military campaigns. It was under this power that President Lincoln defended the Proclamation of Emancipation. It related to those held as slaves in the states in rebellion, and he regarded it as it recited, as a necessary act of war within his authority as commander in chief. He thus expressed this point of view: "You say it is unconstitution-

Queen Marie of Rumania Records the Agonies of Her War-Shattered Land

> THERE is not yet enough dying, enough sorrow, enough sacrifice—each woman must learn to give up what she loves, must weep, must hide her head in the dust. . . . Our prayers, our efforts, the spilling of our blood are in vain.

> AS one but half conscious, I traveled through many parts of my land. . . . The cries of the wounded were the cries of the child I had lost, and when bending over the beds of the dying, I knew no more if it was for their woe I was weeping or for my own."

DRIVEN into exile with her many subjects, who had to retreat before the Hun just as the Belgians and Serbians were forced out of their peaceful homes in the debacle of war, Queen Marie of Rumania has turned to the pen, and with it is picturing the horrors that have engulfed the pretty little Balkan kingdom.

Queen Marie was married to King Ferdinand in 1893, and was then the Princess Marie of Edinburgh, the daughter of Alfred I, Duke of Saxe Coburg and Gotha, Prince of Great Britain and Ireland. Noted for her beauty, idolized by her people, she has devoted herself to Red Cross work and the care of her stricken people ever since the entry of Rumania into the war.

In devoting her pen to the cause of her adopted country, Queen Marie has followed the example of her husband's aunt, the late Queen Elizabeth (Carmen Sylva), whose charming books of poetry and prose deal almost entirely with the customs and folklore of Rumania. In this article Queen Marie gives a graphic picture of war-torn Rumania.

By the Queen of Rumania.

DEATH is sweeping over the earth—in all lands, beneath many suns, thousands of brave boys are giving their lives, mothers are crying, the earth is drinking nothing but blood.

And because Death has become master, he stretches out his hand and wants also to pluck the buds that were to have flowered in the days to come—he stretches out his hand and tries to seize hold of my own treasure, of my last born, of the child of my heart!

There is not yet enough dying, enough sorrow, enough sacrifice—each woman must learn to give up what she loves, must weep, must hide her head in the dust.

In these days the sons of Queens are not allowed to throw away their lives in battle, but so that better I should understand the tears of every mother, Death has stolen into my house and stands there waiting, ready to tear from me my youngest, the most innocent, the one most without defense.

There he lies on the narrow whiteness of his bed, fighting back some invisible terror which is too big. I seem to be struggling with him, yet all my love cannot help him, I am powerless before his suffering, my anguish cannot lessen it, my tears cannot cool the fever in his blood.

All around me the sons of mothers are dying and here within the walls of this guarded chamber my child is dying * * * and I cannot hold him back * * * He becomes the symbol of my country's tragedy; he is wrestling against an enemy he is unable to overcome, whilst not far off, on all our frontiers, our armies are struggling against invading forces that inch by inch are tearing the holy soil of home from beneath our feet!

My child is powerless as my country is powerless, our love, our prayers, our efforts, the spilling of our blood are in vain, for indeed there are hours that belong not to the will of man, but that belong to Fate!

Death Stands Waiting

IT is my birthday. A day set apart for national rejoicing—and Death stands waiting, waiting at the side of my child's bed. * * *

Others are also waiting for me; my wounded are waiting; they, too, are my children; for days I have neglected them; because of my cruel anxiety I have not been able to go to them, but they need me, their voices call me—too many need me! Sometimes I feel as though it were too much, as though it would drive me mad. * * *

Yet on this day all have a right over me. I must forsake no one; the most humble must be able to reach my heart.

Flowers have been brought to me in fragrant profusion, the floor is strewn with them, they lie on the tables, they are massed on every chair, the air is filled with their perfume!

What is the meaning of all these flowers? Have they been brought to me for a day of rejoicing or for a day of—death?

Filling my arms with them I hurry to the beds of my wounded—there is so little time * * * my child is dying! His voice is calling me back—but, oh! there are so many beds, so many! Will I ever reach the last!

What are they saying to me as they bend to kiss my hands? I cannot clearly see their faces, for my eyes are full of tears. I cannot clearly hear their voices because of the throbbing of my anguished heart—what are they saying? One name is on every lip—Mircea! Mircea! They are wishing health and recovery to the child of my heart! But he is dying! Know ye not that he is dying? * * * My heart cries out the awful certainty, and I bury each bed under my flowers as though in some dream ritual I were decking with them the beds of the dead. * * *

No Time for Idle Weeping

MIRCEA is resting * * * Mircea's struggle is over * * * Mircea is at peace * * * Mircea is dead. * * *

Now the chamber of suffering is silent, the screams are a thing of the past. * * * They belonged to earthly terrors * * * for Mircea all earthly terrors are passed.

Like a little light that flickers and goes out, thus did he die—no more screams, hardly a sigh. He was tired, his heart could bear the strain no longer * * * he was too small a fighter, so God let him die * * * like a little light that goes out * * * thus did God let him die. * * *

Mircea is dead. * * *

All Souls' day! The leaves are falling, the heavens are weeping tears of regret, like a veil of mourning, mist covering the earth.

* * * * * * * *

It is over. * * *

The grave is closed, a heavy stone is over your face, the tapers have been put out, the solemn chants have died away, the flowers are tired, shadow fills the church.

It is over. * * *

Neither my prayer nor my tears, neither my despair nor my suffering can bring you back to me, Mircea, my child.

I saw how they lowered your tiny coffin into a hole that was full of night, so that less somber should be that night I filled the gaping hole with flowers, flowers, flowers * * * and all the flowers were white.

Then I left you, my Mircea. I turned my foot away from your place of rest. I turned it toward the emptiness, toward the unfathomable void of the days that are to know you no more. I turned it back toward the house where your bed stands empty, whilst you lie so small and forsaken in your coffin under the ground. * * *

And yet I know, Mircea, that is only your poor little body that lies there under the ground! * * * This is not a time for mourning in darkened chambers, not a time for idle weeping, not a time for rest.

My own sorrow must not separate me from others' sorrows; it must be but an added link between me and my people; not keep me from them at a time when they need me most.

Listen to Voice of Country

MY country is calling, although darkness has descended like a pall on my soul once more must I take up my burden and walk!

Whither shall I turn my saddened face? To what beds of suffering, to what homes of woe? Better far awhile to listen to voices that awake no memory, to wander toward regions where he has never been amongst strangers, who did not know him, who saw not his hours of agony, who heard not his screams of pain.

Better go away! Whilst my wound is still bleeding, so that it should not be touched—go there where my pity is most needed, where my tears can flow freely, where it is no shame to weep!

Therefore, I left the daily routine and went to many places, carrying my own grief amongst the most miserable and forsaken, carrying my breaking heart to those who needed no words, only caresses and gestures of love.

As one but half conscious I traveled through many parts of my land, motoring miles and miles along endless stretches at the dying season of the year; I passed through peaceful valleys; neath frowning mountain sides, over plains where the fields were at rest, and my soul was one with this country, its agony was the agony of my heart, the cries of the wounded were the cries of the child I had lost, and when bending over the beds of the dying, I knew no more of it was for their woe I was weeping or for my own!

From those dark corners of suffering, where the wounded lay huddled together, their marred and bleeding visages turned to the wall, from the land itself, from its invaded frontiers, from its fields, its villages, its towns and forests a mighty groan of anguish seemed rising toward the skies. I felt as though I must bend down and lift up all that anguish, lift it with both my hands and carry it away with me so as to relieve those less able to bear such a weight.

Yet what could I do? With the greatness of my love could I save my country? Had I with my love been able to save the life of my child?

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Let the Plutocrats Pay.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

On the third page of Monday's Post-Dispatch is an article "Reichstag Should Negotiate Peace, Vorwaerts Says," from from which I quote: "The American Government repeatedly declared it does not harbor enmity against the German people, but proof of this assertion has not been furnished."

I know for many years the intellectual obtuseness of the German Socialists who deceived their people and Socialists of other countries; now it seems that the experiences of the last three years have not broadened their comprehension. The President's note to the Pope could not be more explicit. Why do not the Socialists of the Vorwaerts read it as follows: The autocrats and plutocrats of Germany should sacrifice their fortunes and vast estates in order to refund the millions extorted from Belgium and elsewhere and make compensation for the destruction caused by their war, and thus redeem themselves, without having the German laboring people be taxed for it. Thoughts at Lincoln's Tomb.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The other day I took my 10-year-old son to see Lincoln's tomb in Springfield, Ill. He asked me about the tombs of Washington and other men of whom he had read, and it occurred to me to say to him, "Son, perhaps you may sometime be taking a boy of your own to see the tomb of Woodrow Wilson. You can tell him that, when you were a boy, Wilson led us into the great war, and I hope you can say he led us through it. But whatever else there is to tell, I know you will be able to say that he was wise, loyal, courageous. But you will not have any occasion to visit the tomb of Stone, or LaFollette, or any man in public life today who has failed to stand by Wilson. People will not be visiting these men's tombs, any more than they now visit the tomb of Vallandigham, who tried to make Lincoln's work a failure." H.

Defends the Menace.

On my return from a visit to our Free Press Defense League, headquarters at Fort Scott, Kan., my attention was called to an article which appeared in your widely circulated and influential journal of Aug. 27th, which is well calculated to do great injury. The article in question was incorporated in a report of the Federation of the Catholic Societies, and the passage to which we refer is as follows:

> "It may be deserving of passing mention at least, that the Menace, quite a number of Socialist publications, have fallen foul of the law; that old arch-bigot, Tom Watson, has been journalistically suppressed."

The above statement as it relates to the Menace is absolutely false and without any shadow of foundation. We wish to say the Government has no stronger advocate or supporter than the Menace in all its attempts to make the world and our republic safe for democracy. We have strongly indorsed and upheld President Wilson's utterances in behalf of the larger freedom, which marks all liberal democracies, in his efforts to make the world safe by curbing autocracy and militarism. Traffic Policeman Needed.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Is it not possible for the Police Department to put a traffic policeman on the corner of Twelfth and Washington? This is without doubt one of the busiest corners in the City of St. Louis. It is almost an impossibility to cross from the south to the north from the north to the south side of Washington avenue. There is almost a continuous string of automobiles, and besides this, the street cars on Washington avenue, when a car is going over Twelfth, do not stop at the west corner, but creep up to the Twelfth street car so as to probably lose no time, but a pedestrian, apparently speaking, has no rightaway at all. I am employed, and, figuratively speaking, place my life in my hands every morning and evening trying to cross at this corner.
A WOMAN PEDESTRIAN.

Wilson's Message.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The world can't go on half free and half slave. That is why America's coming in is so significant. The wise saying has broadened from a continent to the world, from Lincoln to Wilson.

Either autocracy—the selfish use of money for the power of a few—or democracy—the use, through selection, by some, of the power of all for the welfare of all, must prevail. This is why Wilson's affectionate words—the mighty words of a man lifted up by us before the world—to the national army touch us all. We, the people, acclaim him our selected man.

Iron Crosses.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I propose, providing that the censor will second the motion, that Kaiser Bill Hohenzollern be allowed to send Bill Thompson and Bill Stone the much coveted iron cross.
THOMAS McGRATH.

MORE THAN A REVENUE BILL.

The advocates of fewer exemptions in the conscription of wealth for war service lost their fight in the Senate. But the exemptions authorized are fewer than they were when they began their struggle.

The war profits section of the tax bill is somewhat complicated, but it prescribes a tax of 12 per cent on excess profits figured at not more than 15 per cent greater than the average profits in 1911, 1912 and 1913. The rate of taxation increases steadily, according to the percentage of unusual profits, up to a 60 per cent tax on profits so abnormal as to be 300 per cent greater than those formerly earned.

That the decision in the Senate does not end the battle is shown by Speaker Clark's speech in the House, urging 80 per cent on the last classification. What this means can be seen from the estimates of the amount of revenue from the different classifications.

War profits of 300 per cent above the average of peace, or three times greater than peace profits, are being made by so many firms and in such volume that it is estimated that if the Government taxes only 60 per cent of the amount in excess of 300 per cent, the yield in revenue will be no less than $462,990,000. If the tax on this classification is increased in the House or in conference to 70 or 80 per cent and the tax on other classifications is increased in like proportion, it will produce a tremendous amount of more revenue.

It must be remembered, in considering the merits of the bill, that those firms that will make the enormous profits subjecting them to taxation at the higher rates will almost all of them obtain their gains from the Government. These profits will represent the velvet on purchases of munitions and various materials and equipment for carrying on the war.

So, in a sense, the demand for the conscription of wealth is more than a revenue measure. It is a measure to discourage the more brazen forms of robbery by Government contractors. For if, after extortion has passed all limits in reason, most of the money has to be given back to the Government, why practice the higher extortion?

But if it is practiced, the tax will make the Government the larger beneficiary from its own payments and if the enormous profits left to the contractors—enough to satisfy the greed of a Midas—do not provide a sufficient incentive for production, then no profits of any amount would furnish an incentive.

JUSTICE FOR NEGROES.

The Mississippi Council of National Defense believes that it has found a solution of the acute negro problem and in a resolution to the forthcoming special session of the Legislature sets forth certain things that must be done at once to check the migration that is threatening the industries of the State. The question came up unexpectedly in a council session, but the business men and educators present found that they agreed perfectly.

The primary demands are: Justice of the Peace court reforms that will check the present system of fining negroes by petty officials to get the costs; a State-wide system of schools for negroes and truancy laws that will be enforced; the employment of negro farm and domestic demonstration agents and assurance of equal wage to the negro for equal work.

In addition to these demands upon the Legislature the council is organizing a corps of "four-minute orators" who will speak at picture shows and other public gatherings in an appeal to white persons to see that negro property rights are in every way respected and that they shall refuse to conduct business with persons who impose upon negro labor or customers.

MEXICO, THE FORGOTTEN.

In a forceful book entitled "The Mexican Problem," C. W. Barron of the Boston News Bureau gives his conclusions on a recent examination of the situation in Mexico, especially with regard to the Tampico oil fields. Dr. Talcott Williams, in a preface to the book, says of it that the articles comprising it are "a clear and wise economic picture of Mexico, beyond any others that I have read."

Since the United States went to war with Germany, Mexico seems to have been forgotten. Today, according to Mr. Barron, the situation is disunited and hopeless. "Seventeen million people, on the richest mineral territory of the world, that can grow anything in the world and produce food in abundance every month of the year, use cartridges for currency."

Barron does not advocate intervention. He does not think it is necessary. Since Uncle Sam aimed his guns at Germany and started to place a huge army behind them, the Mexican generals of the different factions "have suddenly become very polite to foreigners, especially Americans. All the threatening from German sources in Mexico likewise suddenly became nonexplosive." Financial aid, in the way of development by capital of Mexico's resources, with proper protection, will solve the problem.

In order to receive this protection, Mr. Barron asserts, certain popular fallacies must be removed. These are that the natural wealth of Mexico, especially mineral oil, has been or is used as a basis for furthering Mexican political quarrels. Second, that the land question is at the bottom of the Mexican troubles. He finds that, without capital and leadership, division and subdivision of land among the Mexican people will accomplish little. The native Mexican "is the same childlike, trusting fellow, whether at work, play or revolution. He is simply in need of a strong helping hand."

It is a wonderful picture that Mr. Barron draws of the apparently inexhaustible capacity of the Tampico oil fields. But pipe lines are needed, transportation is ridiculously inadequate. And, according to him, our turning our back upon Mexico has, for the time being at least, stopped all development, to the very great loss of everybody concerned.

In urging that the United States do for Mexico what it did for Cuba in the way of insuring order and safety, Dr. Williams says: "Mexico is today like the great oil wells of which Mr. Barron gives so vivid a picture—a fathomless resource for the light and power of the world, and needing only the mechanism which will enable it to set a thousand keels and a thousand wheels in motion and light millions of happy homes." Give the Mexican people the same chance as we gave the Cubans, he says, and they will show the same marvel of progress.

TROLLEY SERVICE ON THE BRIDGE.

A company which has applied for a trolley permit on the free bridge is opposed by Mayor Kiel on the ground that it is a "one-man" company. To what extent must a company be manned to expedite action on the part of the Mayor for utilizing the trolley tracks on the wagon deck of the bridge? Would it help any if a five-man company applied for permit or a 10-man company or a 20-man company?

Would a 100-man company assist any in getting action on the bridge loop which has been the most urgent city question since the opening of the bridge more than seven months ago, but on which the municipality with the mill tax money in its treasury has made absolutely no progress?

THE INCOME-TAX YIELD.

According to the preliminary report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, individuals and corporations paid the Government, $359,681,228 in income taxes during the last fiscal year. This is $25,000,000 more than the customs revenue for 1910, the year of greatest income from tariff taxes. It is $37,000,000 in excess of the maximum yearly internal revenue previous to the inclusion of income taxes in that category.

The returns are interesting from many angles. The amounts derived from corporations and individuals are almost equal, being respectively $179,372,888 and $180,108,340. New York led all the states with payments of $46,566,952 in corporation taxes and $81,495,783 on individual incomes. Nevada, for all its mining resources, paid least, yielding but $75,423 in corporation taxes and $15,425 from individual incomes; no doubt its gold and silver help swell the tax returns of the effete East. Do the same conditions obtain for $3 wheat? North and South Dakota, which express a lively concern about the burden of war taxes, paid but $74,159 and $49,164 respectively on individual incomes.

But the fact of outstanding interest is the large proportion of the total contributed by individual incomes of less than $20,000. These furnished $55,742,281, or one-third of all, and constitute the largest return of any single class. This amount was five times as great as the yield from incomes between $100,000 and $150,000, and compares with the $7,531,894 derived from incomes between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000. At least there is no need to conscript moderate wealth.

BOMBING HOSPITALS.

From both French and British headquarters the news comes that German airmen are persistently bombing hospitals. The latest is that an American hospital established at the front by Harvard University was bombed. One member of the Harvard medical until was killed and others severely wounded. A member of a St. Louis medical unit was wounded.

The suggestion that these acts are among the unforeseen accidents of routine of the war cannot be accepted, in view of the fact that the German aerial forces take photographs of the country where these hospitals are situated and must be well aware of their location. German airplanes dropping bombs around or on hospital buildings back of Verdun at intervals of 20 minutes for over six hours was an exhibition of calculated barbarism which is in a class with other acts for which the world has unanimously condemned the German military leaders.

Have German aviators finally abandoned the last of their ideals? Have they forgotten or renounced those feelings of chivalry which they showed earlier in the war? Have they consented to a policy that will mean slaughter of the helpless wounded back of the ranks, wherever they may find them? If so, they may look for no more consideration than is given to other brutal murderers.

THREE ANTI-WAR SENATORS.

In Mississippi the Democratic leaders are casting about to determine which of their number shall oppose Senator Vardaman in the next election.

The usual self-seeking, purely selfish motives do not appear on the surface of this effort. The men suggested for the candidacy explain this by saying that only one question must be allowed to enter into the campaign: Is the State supporting the Government in the war, or is it supporting Vardaman's personal position?

The leaders there realize that they have a real fight on their hands because of Vardaman's strong personal following, which will influence some voters taking the view that they should place friendship first. Vardaman will furnish one of the strongest tests of the anti-war Senators. But already the press of the State is opposing him for re-election.

A similar situation applies in Georgia, where determined opposition is developing to Senator Hardwick, who was elected to fill an unexpired term because he was thought to be the choice of the President. His personality will be much less of a factor than Vardaman's, so the issue for or against the conduct of the war will there be cleaner cut.

In Oklahoma the tide is turning very strongly against Senator Gore, whose personal standing formerly was so strong that many of his friends expected him to be a candidate for President. This idea never spread beyond Oklahoma, however, and does not exist there now. Indeed, a few days ago at Enid the name of a city park was changed from "Gore Park" to "Wilson Park," by a vote of the City Assembly.

A newspaper poll just completed shows that out of 255 Oklahoma papers, 112 are openly opposing Senator Gore, 108 avoid the discussion and five are apologists. None are supporting the Senator.

IN the hazy smoke of a fairy fire
My soul is drifting away;
While the fairies chant
Their strange, sweet songs
Altho no words they say.
My soul is a fairy's soul;
In a fairy's form it dwells;
And the music of unknown worlds
In my heart now rises and swells.
The mem'ries of other years
In the smoke soon vanish away
And the ache of earth's bitter tears
The smoke will heal and allay.

It looks as if the Kaiser would go down at last still shouting that the war was forced upon him. However, it does seem that it would not have been forced upon him, even if anyone beside himself believed that, if he had not terrorized Europe with militarism. Nothing that has come out in the three years Europe has been fighting removes the conviction that it would be today the quiet and unexciting place Evelyn Thaw found it had it not been for the ogre of Prussian militarism.

TRAFFIC RULES FOR PEDESTRIANS.

1. In alighting from a street car on a busy corner, don't let the traffic cop have to tell you to keep out of the way of the machines. He is too busy to watch both, and it is his business to see that the machines get past without injury.

2. Try to keep inside the chalk lines at crossings. Unless you do keep within them, you very soon have the drivers of machines chasing you all over the street, which makes confusion. You are supposed to be inside of certain bounds, and if an automobile goes through there without any regard for the speed law, it is supposed to get you.

3. When machines are running both ways on the street, the best way to get across is to first find a gap in the machines on your side and dash to the center of the street, from which you can dash to the sidewalk when an opening comes in the other line. Be careful not to make the first dash carry you over to the next line, where your well-laid plans will only result in an automobile race to see who gets you first.

4. In stepping behind a cross-town car downtown, look out for a truck loaded with vinegar barrels on the one-way streets.

5. Don't run. The automobiles are already going fast, and their one danger of missing you lies in the difference in speed with which two moving objects can approach one another. It is one of the most difficult things in mathematics, and the great mass of motor drivers simply aren't up to the calculation.

BY HIS OWN HAND.

FUNERAL faces of childhood days,
Serious, stiff-necked, straight-laced folk,
Solemn voices in prayer and praise,
Sermons on sin and its iron yoke,
Haunt him now like a Hell-made joke—
Now on the brink of the mystic deeps—
Waiting the nerve for the final stroke;
"As a man sows, he reaps!"

Boyhood bliss in the old home town,
The innocent lure of sweet Maybelle,
Then hot youth, and the journey down
To the city's pit with vampire Nell;
Manhood's wreck, and the debts that swell
From squandered years when conscience sleeps
Mingle in memory's maddening spell;
"As a man sows, he reaps!"

True love spurning, he chose instead
The devil's seething substitute;
Open-eyed he made his bed
And shared his heart with the human brute;
Open-eyed he followed suit
Where the wanton leads and wastrel steeps;
Open-eyed he will aim and shoot;
"As a man sows, he reaps!"

The text returns but never the faith
In a living God he knew of yore;
Gone the fear of the wrath and wraith,
Gone belief in the sacred lore,
Gone the hope of a happy door
For the harried soul that outward leaps,
Gone—he is prone on the crimsoned floor;

BEAUTY CULTURE.

GEORGE—Once that distressing pimply condition so common in young men and women, was the subject of the March prize essays in the New York Medical Journal, and Dr. Isadore Dyer of New York won the first prize. Dr. Dyer says the treatment must be both local and general. Acne is a disorganization of the sebaceous glands, the ducts of which become plugged and form blackheads; infection turns these into pustules that sometimes are almost boils. These pustules must be opened and drained, after which equal parts of carbolic acid and iodine are applied. After freely cleaning the face with benzine on cotton pledgets, the blackheads are extracted. Between visits the patient keeps the skin soft with an ointment prepared as follows: Salicyclic acid 2 parts; sulphur precipitate, 4 parts; tincture of benzoin, 1 part; adipis benzoinati, 30 parts. If there be dandruff, a little 3 to 5 per cent resorcin is added. With the subsidence of the pustules an astringent lotion may be used, such as this; Sulphate of zinc 8 parts and rose water 60 parts. This is applied freely and allowed to dry on. Alternative treatments are the use of short exposure to the X-ray; compresses of bichloride of mercury, 1 to 1000 solution; the use of a thermocautery and free rapid sparking with the high frequency current. When the pustules predominate there are vaccines that often prove effective. The bowels must be kept open and the skin active by internal treatment. Dr. Dyer suggests this as a medicine: Chlorate of potash, 3 grains; lactate of iron, 3 grains; extract of nux vomica, ½ grain; extract of cascara, ¼ grain, taken in a capsule or pill after meals. All pastry and excess of sweets are excluded; fruits and green vegetables are eaten freely. Exercise is necessary and the free use of soap and water is to be commended.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

Leave alone three days or more, wh put over the fire in the brine, and bri to a boil. Take out the onions with a ski mer and drop into iced fresh water. L them lie in this 24 hours, changing o for fresh and cold water during that ti Drain once more; pack the onions into p jars and cover with boiling vinegar, sp with blades of mace and white pep corns, adding a spoonful of white su to each jar. Set away in a dark place six weeks before using.

E. G. R.—Pimentos may be canned by moving seeds, cutting peppers themsel in strips with kitchen scissors, then co with boiling water and set on back stove 10 minutes, but do not allow to bo Drain, cover with ice water 10 minute then drain again, cover with boiling wate bringing this to boiling point after peppers have been put in it, and fill into sterilized jars, filling each jar to overflowing with boiling water after packing full with peppers. Keep in cool place. Pimentos will also keep well from one season to another if hung in a dry, cool place.

MUSTARD PICKLE.—Wash 150 gherkins and put into crock or large porcelain kettle. Break 2 heads cauliflower into flowerets, shred one large head cabbage, slice four large green peppers, add one quart small white onions, one quart young string beans and one small root horseradish grated. Cover these prepared vegetables with strong brine and let remain over night. In morning drain thoroughly and pack in jar with two ounces black mustard seed and teaspoon cayenne pepper. Put into preserving kettle gallon vinegar, and add tablespoon ground white pepper and a half tablespoon turmeric. Moisten spices with a little of the vinegar before stirring into the whole. Bring vinegar to a good scald, then pour over vegetables. Cover and when cold stir in cup ground mustard.

THE FIRST SCHOOLS.

TEACHER—Among the Hebrews the Law was expounded by teachers in the porches of the Temple. Children were taught in synagogues during the week. From being merely an oral teaching of the Law, the instruction grew until it involved letters and arithmetic. In Athens there were 2 classes of schools for boys; one, the musical or literary, was taught by a grammatist; a citharist gave instruction in the non-literary phases of music. The other was a gymnastic school for boys. The hours of daylight were all consumed at school. In Rome reading, writing and sometimes arithmetic were taught. Pebbles were used in figuring and the stylus and wax tablet in writing. The books were rolls of manuscript carried in wooden boxes. The schools were private ventures, sometimes held in the open air. Usually they were in mean and sparsely furnished rooms. The children sat on the floor. In Greek schools, children sat on benches. During the middle ages elementary schools existed in connection with monasteries, the cathedrals or collegiate churches, the hospitals and the guilds. The origin of the public school system of America dates back to the time of the settlement of Massachusetts and Connecticut. In the very beginning of their history these colonists made provision for the establishment of schools in every town, and parents were required to send their children to them or educate them otherwise. At first these schools were not entirely free, that is, those who could afford to pay were required to do so, but the evil of separating the children into paupers and ratepayers soon became apparent, and shortly after the colonies became states the school taxes were increased and the schools were made free. The example of these colonists was quickly followed by other New England colonies, but in other sections of the country schools were either private of parochial for many years, except in cases where a free school was established and supported by private beneficence. When the vast territories west of the Alleghany mountains came into the possession of the United States, every 16th section in each congressional township was set aside by the Government as the nucleus of a public school fund; later this was increased to two sections for the benefit of the newer states. The southern states were the last to embrace the free school system, having done so in its entirety only since the civil war.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHARLEY—Don't send us problems.

ANONYMOUS—Send us envelope stamped, bearing your address, and we will direct you to correct advice that will cost nothing.

MRS. E. P.—Damprag the shining garment. That is, roll it up, the "shiny" surface inside and upon a wet cloth long enough to cover the coat entirely. Roll it quite tightly, and leave it thus some hours. Then shake out and dry. Finally, cover with a thick muslin cloth—very damp—and press through this with a warm iron. A slight luster may be removed by sponging with household ammonia.

PATSEY—Shower: Invite guests to spend the evening and to provide refreshments, such as cake, coffee, sandwiches, salads and ice cream. In one of the parlors a table is decorated with flowers and evergreens, and upon this are arranged in daintily decorated parcels or baskets the offerings of linen brought by the bride's well wishers. At the appointed time she (or the bridemaid) open them. Or the linen is disposed tastefully upon the table. Usually at a "shower" of any kind there is no special program. At one shower each comer was asked to bring a verse along with the aritcle given, and these were read aloud—without the names of the authors—by a sort of leader of the entertainment, a young girl friend of the bride-to-be. You may decorate rooms with handkerchiefs and have tables to show the centerpieces, cloths, doilies, etc., on as they arrive. A musical program of ballads, or something very light, would not be amiss, but the shower must be the central feature.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Let the Plutocrats Pay.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

On the third page of Monday's Post-Dispatch is an article "Reichstag Should Negotiate Peace, Vorwaerts Says," from from which I quote: "The American Government repeatedly declared it does not harbor enmity against the German people, but proof of this assertion has not been furnished."

I know for many years the intellectual obtuseness of the German Socialists who deceived their people and Socialists of other countries; now it seems that the experiences of the last three years have not broadened their comprehension. The President's note to the Pope could not be more explicit. Why do not the Socialists of the Vorwaerts read it as follows: The autocrats and plutocrats of Germany should sacrifice their fortunes and vast estates in order to refund the millions extorted from Belgium and elsewhere and make compensation for the destruction caused by their war, and thus redeem themselves, without having the German laboring people be taxed for it. Thoughts at Lincoln's Tomb.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The other day I took my 10-year-old son to see Lincoln's tomb in Springfield, Ill. He asked me about the tombs of Washington and other men of whom he had read, and it occurred to me to say to him, "Son, perhaps you may sometime be taking a boy of your own to see the tomb of Woodrow Wilson. You can tell him that, when you were a boy, Wilson led us into the great war, and I hope you can say he led us through it. But whatever else there is to tell, I know you will be able to say that he was wise, loyal, courageous. But you will not have any occasion to visit the tomb of Stone, or LaFollette, or any man in public life today who has failed to stand by Wilson. People will not be visiting these men's tombs, any more than they now visit the tomb of Vallandigham, who tried to make Lincoln's work a failure." H.

Defends the Menace.

On my return from a visit to our Free Press Defense League, headquarters at Fort Scott, Kan., my attention was called to an article which appeared in your widely circulated and influential journal of Aug. 27th, which is well calculated to do great injury. The article in question was incorporated in a report of the Federation of the Catholic Societies, and the passage to which we refer is as follows:

> "It may be deserving of passing mention at least, that the Menace, quite a number of Socialist publications, have fallen foul of the law; that old arch-bigot. Tom Watson, has been journalistically suppressed."

The above statement as it relates to the Menace is absolutely false and without any shadow of foundation. We wish to say the Government has no stronger advocate or supporter than the Menace in all its attempts to make the world and our republic safe for democracy. We have strongly indorsed and upheld President Wilson's utterances in behalf of the larger freedom, which marks all liberal democracies, in his efforts to make the world safe by curbing autocracy and militarism. Traffic Policeman Needed.

Is it not possible for the Police Department to put a traffic policeman on the corner of Twelfth and Washington? This is without doubt one of the busiest corners in the City of St. Louis. It is almost an impossibility to cross from the south to the north from the north to the south side of Washington avenue. There is almost a continuous string of automobiles, and besides this, the street cars on Washington avenue, when a car is going over Twelfth, do not stop at the west corner, but creep up to the Twelfth street car so as to probably lose no time, but a pedestrian, apparently speaking, has no rightaway at all. I am employed, and, figuratively speaking, place my life in my hands every morning and evening trying to cross at this corner.

Wilson's Message.

The world can't go on half free and half slave. That is why America's coming in is so significant. The wise saying has broadened from a continent to the world, from Lincoln to Wilson.

Either autocracy—the selfish use of money for the power of a few—or democracy—the use, through selection, by some, of the power of all for the welfare of all, must prevail. This is why Wilson's affectionate words—the mighty words of a man lifted up by us before the world—to the national army touch us all. We, the people, acclaim him our selected man.

MORE THAN A REVENUE BILL.

The advocates of fewer exemptions in the conscription of wealth for war service lost their fight in the Senate. But the exemptions authorized are fewer than they were when they began their struggle.

The war profits section of the tax bill is somewhat complicated, but it prescribes a tax of 12 per cent on excess profits figured at not more than 15 per cent greater than the average profits in 1911, 1912 and 1913. The rate of taxation increases steadily, according to the percentage of unusual profits, up to a 60 per cent tax on profits so abnormal as to be 300 per cent greater than those formerly earned.

That the decision in the Senate does not end the battle is shown by Speaker Clark's speech in the House, urging 80 per cent on the last classification. What this means can be seen from the estimates of the amount of revenue from the different classifications.

War profits of 300 per cent above the average of peace, or three times greater than peace profits, are being made by so many firms and in such volume that it is estimated that if the Government taxes only 60 per cent of the amount in excess of 300 per cent, the yield in revenue will be no less than $462,990,000. If the tax on this classification is increased in the House or in conference to 70 or 80 per cent and the tax on other classifications is increased in like proportion, it will produce a tremendous amount of more revenue.

It must be remembered, in considering the merits of the bill, that those firms that will make the enormous profits subjecting them to taxation at the higher rates will almost all of them obtain their gains from the Government. These profits will represent the velvet on purchases of munitions and various materials and equipment for carrying on the war.

So, in a sense, the demand for the conscription of wealth is more than a revenue measure. It is a measure to discourage the more brazen forms of robbery by Government contractors. For if, after extortion has passed all limits in reason, most of the money has to be given back to the Government, why practice the higher extortion?

But if it is practiced, the tax will make the Government the larger beneficiary from its own payments and if the enormous profits left to the contractors—enough to satisfy the greed of a Midas—do not provide a sufficient incentive for production, then no profits of any amount would furnish an incentive.

MEXICO, THE FORGOTTEN.

In a forceful book entitled "The Mexican Problem," C. W. Barron of the Boston News Bureau gives his conclusions on a recent examination of the situation in Mexico, especially with regard to the Tampico oil fields. Dr. Talcott Williams, in a preface to the book, says of it that the articles comprising it are "a clear and wise economic picture of Mexico, beyond any others that I have read."

Since the United States went to war with Germany, Mexico seems to have been forgotten. Today, according to Mr. Barron, the situation is disunited and hopeless. "Seventeen million people, one the richest mineral territory of the world, that can grow anything in the world and produce food in abundance every month of the year, use cartridges for currency."

Barron does not advocate intervention. He does not think it is necessary. Since Uncle Sam aimed his guns at Germany and started to place a huge army behind them, the Mexican generals of the different factions "have suddenly become very polite to foreigners, especially Americans. All the threatening from German sources in Mexico likewise suddenly became nonexplosive." Financial aid, in the way of development by capital of Mexico's resources, with proper protection, will solve the problem.

In order to receive this protection, Mr. Barron asserts, certain popular fallacies must be removed. These are that the natural wealth of Mexico, especially mineral oil, has been or is used as a basis for furthering Mexican political quarrels. Second, that the land question is at the bottom of the Mexican troubles. He finds that, without capital and leadership, division and subdivision of land among the Mexican people will accomplish little. The native Mexican "is the same childlike, trusting fellow, whether at work, play or revolution. He is simply in need of a strong helping hand."

It is a wonderful picture that Mr. Barron draws of the apparently inexhaustible capacity of the Tampico oil fields. But pipe lines are needed, transportation is ridiculously inadequate. And, according to him, our turning our back upon Mexico has, for the time being at least, stopped all development, to the very great loss of everybody concerned.

In urging that the United States do for Mexico what it did for Cuba in the way of insuring order and safety, Dr. Williams says: "Mexico is today like the great oil wells of which Mr. Barron gives so vivid a picture—a fathomless resource for the light and power of the world, and needing only the mechanism which will enable it to set a thousand keels and a thousand wheels in motion and light millions of happy homes." Give the Mexican people the same chance as we gave the Cubans, he says, and they will show the same marvel of progress.

TROLLEY SERVICE ON THE BRIDGE.

A company which has applied for a trolley permit on the free bridge is opposed by Mayor Kiel on the ground that it is a "one-man" company. To what extent must a company be manned to expedite action on the part of the Mayor for utilizing the trolley tracks on the wagon deck of the bridge? Would it help any if a five-man company applied for permit or a 10-man company or a 20-man company?

Would a 100-man company assist any in getting action on the bridge loop which has been the most urgent city question since the opening of the bridge more than seven months ago, but on which the municipality with the mill tax money in its treasury has made absolutely no progress?

THE INCOME-TAX YIELD.

According to the preliminary report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, individuals and corporations paid the Government, $359,681,228 in income taxes during the last fiscal year. This is $25,000,000 more than the customs revenue for 1910, the year of greatest income from tariff taxes. It is $37,000,000 in excess of the maximum yearly internal revenue previous to the inclusion of income taxes in that category.

The returns are interesting from many angles. The amounts derived from corporations and individuals are almost equal, being respectively $179,372,888 and $180,108,340. New York led all the states with payments of $46,566,952 in corporation taxes and $81,495,783 on individual incomes. Nevada, for all its mining resources, paid least, yielding but $75,423 in corporation taxes and $15,425 from individual incomes; no doubt its gold and silver help swell the tax returns of the effete East. Do the same conditions obtain for $3 wheat? North and South Dakota, which express a lively concern about the burden of war taxes, paid but $74,159 and $49,164 respectively on individual incomes.

But the fact of outstanding interest is the large proportion of the total contributed by individual incomes of less than $20,000. These furnished $55,742,281, or one-third of all, and constitute the largest return of any single class. This amount was five times as great as the yield from incomes between $100,000 and $150,000, and compares with the $7,531,894 derived from incomes between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000. At least there is no need to conscript moderate wealth.

BOMBING HOSPITALS.

From both French and British headquarters the news comes that German airmen are persistently bombing hospitals. The latest is that an American hospital established at the front by Harvard University was bombed. One member of the Harvard medical until was killed and others severely wounded. A member of a St. Louis medical unit was wounded.

The suggestion that these acts are among the unforeseen accidents of routine of the war cannot be accepted, in view of the fact that the German aerial forces take photographs of the country where these hospitals are situated and must be well aware of their location. German airplanes dropping bombs around or on hospital buildings back of Verdun at intervals of 20 minutes for over six hours was an exhibition of calculated barbarism which is in a class with other acts for which the world has unanimously condemned the German military leaders.

Have German aviators finally abandoned the last of their ideals? Have they forgotten or renounced those feelings of chivalry which they showed earlier in the war? Have they consented to a policy that will mean slaughter of the helpless wounded back of the ranks, wherever they may find them? If so, they may look for no more consideration than is given to other brutal murderers.

THREE ANTI-WAR SENATORS.

In Mississippi the Democratic leaders are casting about to determine which of their number shall oppose Senator Vardaman in the next election.

The usual self-seeking, purely selfish motives do not appear on the surface of this effort. The men suggested for the candidacy explain this by saying that only one question must be allowed to enter into the campaign: Is the State supporting the Government in the war, or is it supporting Vardaman's personal position?

The leaders there realize that they have a real fight on their hands because of Vardaman's strong personal following, which will influence some voters taking the view that they should place friendship first. Vardaman will furnish one of the strongest tests of the anti-war Senators. But already the press of the State is opposing him for re-election.

A similar situation applies in Georgia, where determined opposition is developing to Senator Hardwick, who was elected to fill an unexpired term because he was thought to be the choice of the President. His personality will be much less of a factor than Vardaman's, so the issue for or against the conduct of the war will there be cleaner cut.

In Oklahoma the tide is turning very strongly against Senator Gore, whose personal standing formerly was so strong that many of his friends expected him to be a candidate for President. This idea never spread beyond Oklahoma, however, and does not exist there now. Indeed, a few days ago at Enid the name of a city park was changed from "Gore Park" to "Wilson Park," by a vote of the City Assembly.

A newspaper poll just completed shows that out of 255 Oklahoma papers, 112 are openly opposing Senator Gore, 108 avoid the discussion and five are apologists. None are supporting the Senator.

THE CHANGELING.

My soul is drifting away;
While the fairies chant
Their strange, sweet songs
Altho no words they say.
My soul is a fairy's soul;
In a fairy's form it dwells;
And the music of unknown worlds
In my heart now rises and swells.
The mem'ries of other years
In the smoke soon vanish away
And the ache of earth's bitter tears
The smoke will heal and allay.

It looks as if the Kaiser would go down at last still shouting that the war was forced upon him. However, it does seem that it would not have been forced upon him, even if anyone beside himself believed that, if he had not terrorized Europe with militarism. Nothing that has come out in the three years Europe has been fighting removes the conviction that it would be today the quiet and unexciting place Evelyn Thaw found it had it not been for the ogre of Prussian militarism.

TRAFFIC RULES FOR PEDESTRIANS.

1. In alighting from a street car on a busy corner, don't let the traffic cop have to tell you to keep out of the way of the machines. He is too busy to watch both, and it is his business to see that the machines get past without injury.

2. Try to keep inside the chalk lines at crossings. Unless you do keep within them, you very soon have the drivers of machines chasing you all over the street, which makes confusion. You are supposed to be inside of certain bounds, and if an automobile goes through there without any regard for the speed law, it is supposed to get you.

3. When machines are running both ways on the street, the best way to get across is to first find a gap in the machines on your side and dash to the center of the street, from which you can dash to the sidewalk when an opening comes in the other line. Be careful not to make the first dash carry you over to the next line, where your well-laid plans will only result in an automobile race to see who gets you first.

4. In stepping behind a cross-town car downtown, look out for a truck loaded with vinegar barrels on the one-way streets.

5. Don't run. The automobiles are already going fast, and their one danger of missing you lies in the difference in speed with which two moving objects can approach one another. It is one of the most difficult things in mathematics, and the great mass of motor drivers simply aren't up to the calculation.

BY HIS OWN HAND.

FUNERAL faces of childhood days,
Serious, stiff-necked, straight-laced folk,
Solemn voices in prayer and praise,
Sermons on sin and its iron yoke,
Haunt him now like a Hell-made joke—
Now on the brink of the mystic deeps—
Waiting the nerve for the final stroke;
"As a man sows, he reaps!"

Boyhood bliss in the old home town,
The innocent lure of sweet Maybelle,
Then hot youth, and the journey down
To the city's pit with vampire Nell;
Manhood's wreck, and the debts that swell
From squandered years when conscience sleeps
Mingle in memory's maddening spell;
"As a man sows, he reaps!"

True love spurning, he chose instead
The devil's seething substitute;
Open-eyed he made his bed
And shared his heart with the human brute;
Open-eyed he followed suit
Where the wanton leads and wastrel steeps;
Open-eyed he will aim and shoot;
"As a man sows, he reaps!"

The text returns but never the faith
In a living God he knew of yore;
Gone the fear of the wrath and wraith,
Gone belief in the sacred lore,
Gone the hope of a happy door
For the harried soul that outward leaps,
Gone—he is prone on the crimsoned floor;

BEAUTY CULTURE.

GEORGE—Once that distressing pimply condition so common in young men and women, was the subject of the March prize essays in the New York Medical Journal, and Dr. Isadore Dyer of New York won the first prize. Dr. Dyer says the treatment must be both local and general. Acne is a disorganization of the sebaceous glands, the ducts of which become plugged and form blackheads; infection turns these into pustules that sometimes are almost boils. These pustules must be opened and drained, after which equal parts of carbolic acid and iodine are applied. After freely cleaning the face with benzine on cotton pledgets, the blackheads are extracted. Between visits the patient keeps the skin soft with an ointment prepared as follows: Salicylic acid 2 parts; sulphur precipitate, 4 parts; tincture of benzoin, 1 part; adipis benzoinati, 30 parts. If there be dandruff, a little 3 to 5 per cent resorcin is added. With the subsidence of the pustules an astringent lotion may be used, such as this: Sulphate of zinc 8 parts and rose water 60 parts. This is applied freely and allowed to dry on. Alternative treatments are the use of short exposure to the X-ray; compresses of bichloride of mercury, 1 to 1000 solution; the use of a thermocautery and free rapid sparking with the high frequency current. When the pustules predominate there are vaccines that often prove effective. The bowels must be kept open and the skin active by internal treatment. Dr. Dyer suggests this as a medicine: Chlorate of potash, 3 grains; lactate of iron, 3 grains; extract of nux vomica, ½ grain; extract of cascara, ¼ grain, taken in a capsule or pill after meals. All pastry and excess of sweets are excluded; fruits and green vegetables are eaten freely. Exercise is necessary and the free use of soap and water is to be commended.

THE FIRST SCHOOLS.

TEACHER—Among the Hebrews the Law was expounded by teachers in the porches of the Temple. Children were taught in synagogues during the week. From being merely an oral teaching of the Law, the instruction grew until it involved letters and arithmetic. In Athens there were 2 classes of schools for boys; one, the musical or literary, was taught by a grammatist; a citharist gave instruction in the non-literary phases of music. The other was a gymnastic school for boys. The hours of daylight were all consumed at school. In Rome reading, writing and sometimes arithmetic were taught. Pebbles were used in figuring and the stylus and wax tablet in writing. The books were rolls of manuscript carried in wooden boxes. The schools were private ventures, sometimes held in the open air. Usually they were in mean and sparsely furnished rooms. The children sat on the floor. In Greek schools, children sat on benches. During the middle ages elementary schools existed in connection with monasteries, the cathedrals or collegiate churches, the hospitals and the guilds. The origin of the public school system of America dates back to the time of the settlement of Massachusetts and Connecticut. In the very beginning of their history these colonists made provision for the establishment of schools in every town, and parents were required to send their children to them or educate them otherwise. At first these schools were not entirely free, that is, those who could afford to pay were required to do so, but the evil of separating the children into paupers and ratepayers soon became apparent, and shortly after the colonies became states the school taxes were increased and the schools were made free. The example of these colonists was quickly followed by other New England colonies, but in other sections of the country schools were either private of parochial for many years, except in cases where a free school was established and supported by private beneficence. When the vast territories west of the Alleghany mountains came into the possession of the United States, every 16th section in each congressional township was set aside by the Government as the nucleus of a public school fund; later this was increased to two sections for the benefit of the newer states. The southern states were the last to embrace the free school system, having done so in its entirety only since the civil war.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHARLEY—Don't send us problems.

ANONYMOUS—Send us envelope stamped, bearing your address, and we will direct you to correct advice that will cost nothing.

MRS. E. P.—Damprag the shining garment. That is, roll it up, the "shiny" surface inside and upon a wet cloth long enough to cover the coat entirely. Roll it quite tightly, and leave it thus some hours. Then shake out and dry. Finally, cover with a thick muslin cloth—very damp—and press through this with a warm iron. A slight luster may be removed by sponging with household ammonia.

PATSEY—Shower: Invite guests to spend the evening and to provide refreshments, such as cake, coffee, sandwiches, salads and ice cream. In one of the parlors a table is decorated with flowers and evergreens, and upon this are arranged in daintily decorated parcels or baskets the offerings of linen brought by the bride's well wishers. At the appointed time she (or the bridemaid) open them. Or the linen is disposed tastefully upon the table. Usually at a "shower" of any kind there is no special program. At one shower each comer was asked to bring a verse along with the aritcle given, and these were read aloud—without the names of the authors—by a sort of leader of the entertainment, a young girl friend of the bride-to-be. You may decorate rooms with handkerchiefs and have tables to show the centerpieces, cloths, doilies, etc., on as they arrive. A musical program of ballads, or something very light, would not be amiss, but the shower must be the central feature.

RANSOM!

ARTHUR SOMERS ROCHE

CHAPTER I.

WARING was bored. The pretty dancer who had, without so much as by-your-leave, dropped into the chair opposite him, yawned flagrantly in his face.

"M'sieur should have brought his breviary," she said.

"Eh?" Waring started; his eyes twinkled and he smiled at the dancer. "Madamoiselle will honor me by drinking another glass of wine?"

"Zut! M'sieur is as entertaining as a saint's confession!" She shrugged her bare shoulders; a man at the next table eyed her, and she smiled provocatively. Waring watched them glide off together, unresentful at the impertinent moue she made at him over her new-found partner's shoulder. Then he forgot all about her.

He sipped his wine, looking about him with vague eyes. It was the usual sort of thing in this sort of place. The same sort of thing that might be found in any of a dozen Montmatre cafes at this hour—midnight. Officers home on leave, bright-eyed Parisiennes, a sprinkling of Russians, English and Americans. It was quieter than before the great war and there was less extravagance. The fact that the French were not spending their money on such entertainment as this might perhaps be one reason why Waring had attracted the attention of the little dancer.

Waring wished that he had stayed at his hotel and got a good night's rest against tomorrow's railway journey to Cherbourg. For at least the dozenth time he cursed the breakdown of the Paris express—from the Riviera—that had made him miss connections for Liverpool and the White Star liner that sailed tomorrow morning. Even though it didn't matter that the liner sailing from Cherbourg tomorrow afternoon would land him in New York two days later than his planned sailing, even though by rare good fortune he had secured at the booking office this afternoon excellent accommodations on the French liner, he was irritated.

He had wanted to sail on a White Star liner; he wanted to land in New York seven days from now. It was a nuisance that one couldn't do exactly as one wanted. He had not intended to spend a night in Paris; he resented savagely the railway accident that interfered with his intentions.

The little dancer who had so frankly forced her acquaintance upon him and as frankly left him, circled, with her more complaisant friend, close to Waring's table. She lifted one shoulder in affected fright at him. Waring knew that he had been scowling, and at the girl's mockery he grinned infectiously. The dancer felt sorry that she had so early decided that Waring was uninteresting; the grin justified her first opinion: that blue-eyed, red-haired men are by no means dull.

But Waring's grin disappeared quickly. It was a tiresome world and Paris was not the least tiresome of places in it. There had been a time, six or eight years ago, when Waring had loved Paris. Well, he loved the city now, but he didn't wish it forced upon him. Paris was like a rare and heady vintage: one must be exactly in the right mood to appreciate it, to desire it.

And Waring was not in the right mood. He wished that he were; Paris, when one felt right, was so gay. But tonight all the gayety seemed artificial, forced. This was the fourth cabaret he'd been in since leaving the hotel. * * * He wondered if he were growing old. Thirty-one! Where did middle-age begin, anyway? Had he lost his capacity for enjoyment? What meant all this late restlessness?

He caught his waitress' eye. "L'addition," he said.

He paid his check, tipped the waitress and rose from his chair. He faced the entrance and stood, half-straddling his chair, for a moment. Then he sank back into it.

"Bring me coffee—with cognac," he told the waitress.

With a shrug of her shoulders—but incomprehensible, these Americans were!—the waitress departed to fulfill the order.

A moment ago Waring had wondered if he were growing old. Now he knew that he was not—at least not so old but that the sight of a pretty girl stirred his pulses. And she was pretty, this girl who had just entered the cafe. More, she was lovely! The long coat that half veiled the outlines of her figure could not disguise the supple, delicious youth of her; and beneath the jaunty hat tendrils of brown hair, shot with gold, peeped tantalizingly out. Here eyes were dark, but Waring could not tell their exact color. Her face was oval, with a short, straight nose, perhaps the least bit tilted, with an adorable chin and sweetly curving mouth. A lovely face, and despite its intense femininity a strong face. And mischievous, too! There was the promise of raillery in those dimples.

Waring was frankly entranced—and bewildered! So evidently a lady, what on earth was she doing, alone, in a Montmartre restaurant at midnight? It needed no second glance to tell him that she belonged to a class far remote from that of the pretty dancer who had so vainly tried to intrigue him. Waring had not knocked around the world 31 years without learning to tell, at a glance, the demimondaine. But this girl——

She sat down at a table near him; he heard her order: lithia water. He noted the color in her cheeks, and, now that she was closer, the sparkle in her eyes. They were not so dark as he had thought; the long lashes had created that effect; they were hazel.

Waring found himself looking right into those eyes, with a queer impression similar to that which he had often experienced when staring over the side of a small boat into deep water—one pierces a shadow and thinks that the secrets of the deep are solved, when one discovers that it is another shadow one sees; mystery lurks beyond.

Then he noticed that her color had risen, and he himself flushed. He had been rude, though unintentionally. He half lifted his hand to signal the waiter; then he dropped it to the table. Without the slightest flirtatious intention, he did not propose to leave the cafe just yet.

From the table about him sounded hand-clapping. Waring looked toward the low stage at one end of the room. Upon it had just appeared a couple, shabbily attired. They began to dance. It was the usual Apache dance. The woman was slim, graceful, clever. But the man—degrading as Waring thought the dance to be, he yet was forced to involuntary admiration of the man.

A little above the average height—he would scale within an inch of Waring's 5 feet 11—well built, the man was not only a graceful dancer, but was a wonderful actor. He threw himself into the spirit of the dance; he was pantherish, savage, ruthless, barbaric—Waring could not help himself; he found himself applauding.

He ceased clapping his hands as he looked at the girl at the near table. Had he been in any doubt as to her being in a place where she distinctly did not belong, that doubt would have dissolved now. For there was disgust on her face, her face that had been white and that suddenly became crimson. Waring was ashamed that he had applauded. He felt suddenly angry with the young girl. What right had she to come to such a place as this and witness this dance that glorified the baser, animal passions? She ought to be spanked! Serve her jolly well right to blush, to be mortified! If he were her brother he'd give her a tongue lashing that——

He ceased wondering just what his fraternal words would be. The dancers had left the stage. A man at a front table had smiled at the dansuesse; sher had sat down with him. The male dancer was swaggering among the tables, bowing to acquaintances who hailed him as "Raoul the Red."

His red hair, of course! That was the origin of the nickname. Waring conceived a violent dislike for the dancer. Red-haired men ought to be in better business than dancing. He felt that, having red hair himself somehow declassed him.

Then his violent dislike became cold anger. The dancer, bowing nodding, had reached the table where sat the recently arrived girl. He smirked at her; he twirled the faint indications of a mustache. Waring saw the girl shrink in her chair. The dancer spoke to her and sat down beside her; the girl's eyes appealed to Waring. And Waring walked over to her table.

"Mademoiselle is annoyed?" he asked.

He was conscious of a dead silence about him; the orchestra, which had been playing an American ragtime tune, grew still. The dancer leaped to his feet.

"M'sieur intrudes," he stated.

Waring eyed the man coldly, He turned to the girl again.

"Mademoiselle is annoyed?" he asked again.

To his surprise she replied in English.

"Please," she said, "take me out of here."

Waring placed a 5-franc piece on the table. "For the waitress," he said.

The dancer picked up the coin—flipped it in the air, caught it, dropped it on the table.

"M'sieur purchases his pleasures cheaply," he said.

His strong white teeth gleamed as he leered. Waring aimed for the exact center of the smile; he had a large, capable fist and a boxer's eye. The dancer went down with a crash. It was Waring's left that had struck him. Waring's right reached for his coat and hat, on a chair by his own table. He got only the hat. A glance at the angry faces about him told him that he had done more than strike a nauseous male flirt; he had struck a favorite of the cabaret, a favorite with many friends.

One's skin is more valuable than one's coat. Moreover, there was the girl. Waring seized her by one arm. Rapidly he propelled her to the door. The blow he had just struck "Raoul the Red" awed those in his path. They were content to curse him and afraid to molest him. But behind him—Waring glanced over his shoulder as they reached the door. The dancer was being assisted to his feet; his mouth streamed blood, oaths and threats. He reeled after Waring and the girl, urged on by the cries of his outraged admirers. Waring wondered whether to send the girl on by herself and stand and meet the rush or continue with her. Which was the better for her? Paris, at night, was—as had just been proved—no place for an unescorted young girl. He saw the little dancer who had tried to flirt with him climb upon a chair by the stage; the restaurant was suddenly dark. He did not know that "Raoul the Red" had repulsed the little dancer's affection and that she gloried in the blow that Waring had dealt him. He only knew that there was confusion in the darkness behind him and that a cabby who might have parleyed with an unescorted girl, delaying her to find out if there might be more in hindrance than in aid of her escape, whipped up his nag the moment they had climbed inside his carriage.

A nasty mess! Why on earth hadn't he controlled himself? A disgraceful cafe brawl that might have led to heaven knew what! But they were out of it, and now that they were safe, that no harm had come to the girl, Waring rejoiced in his skinned knuckles. He had taught one ruffian that a lady may not be insulted with impunity.

The girl was huddled in one corner of the carriage. Waring could hear muffled sobs. The heat of the fight left him as suddenly as it had come; he remembered now how appealing and frightened had been her eyes, how lovely, even in her alarm, she had been. A queer chokiness that had possessed him when he first glimpsed her possessed him again.

"You mustn't cry about it,' 'he said. "It's all over. Where do you wish me to take you?"

She named a hotel—a very fashionable and expensive hotel. Waring called the address to the cabby.

"I'd better ride along with you—if you don't mind," he said.

"Th-thank you," she replied. She said no more. Sulkiness came to Waring. Of course, he didn't expect her to fall on his neck, but after all—he sat up very stiffly in the carriage, looking straight ahead.

More sounds came from the huddled figure beside him. He looked at her suspiciously. Of course, women often got hysteria after scenes like the one they had just passed through, but—this sounded like healthy giggling.

"I don't see anything funny," he said.

"You didn't see yourself—in the light we just passed," she answered. "You look so stern and—and—was that a left hook or a jab that you knocked that man down with?"

"You're American," charged Waring.

"Of course. And I read the sporting pages—when the sisters let me see a New York paper. You're American, too."

"How'd you know?" demanded Waring.

"Would a Frenchman—or even an Englishman—have interfered and helped me? No, indeed, Mr. Waring."

"Eh?" He was genuinely surprised. "How'd you know my name?"

"I read the society pages, too, and look at the pictures—when the sisters let me."

"What sisters? Where are they tonight? How'd they let you out alone? What were you doing in that cafe? Don't you know any better? If I were your brother I'd"——

"Yes, what would you do, Mr. Waring?"

Waring blushed. He remembered the punishment that he had thought suitable for her a little while ago.

"Well, I'd talk to you," he said feebly.

"How dreadful!" she exclaimed.

Ill-humor never held Waring very long. It was briefer than ever now. Though he could not distinguish her face in the gloom of the cab, he had not forgotten how lovely it was. He laughed; and his laugh was as likable as his grin. Yet he tried to be stern.

"What were your people up to, to let you out alone, anyway? And how'd you happen to go to that restaurant, and how"——

"Well," she said defiantly, "suppose you'd been in a French convent since you were 5 years old, and spent your vacations there, too, except sometimes when girls invited you to their homes. Suppose you never been in Paris in your life? Suppose that your uncle, who was your guardian, had telegraphed the sisters to send you to Paris, and that when you got there your uncle was terribly busy and didn't have any time to take you anywhere, and spent all his evenings out? Suppose all that! Wouldn't you be bored and want to go out and see Paris, and finally, wouldn't you go ahead and do it?"

"There's merit in your contentions," he said. "But—don't you know that it isn't safe?"

"I do now," she said, "but—I'm glad!"

"Well, so am I!" he laughed. "And perhaps your uncle won't mind my showing you the shops and the Bois and"——

"But we haven't been properly introduced," she said with a mocking primness.

"Oh, " he said blankly. "But I can call on your uncle and explain, and"——

"Have him discover that I was out tonight? Indeed, no, Mr. Waring."

Waring pursed his lips. "Well, I have an acquaintance that's fairly wide in Paris. Suppose you tell me your uncle's name—and your own—and I'll see"——

"Do you really want to see me again?" she asked.

In any other woman, almost, Waring would have decided that the question was flirtatious. But somehow there was in this girl's tones a boyish frankness different from anything he had ever experienced. He answered her honestly.

"Indeed I do!"

"Then my uncle's name is Randall—Peter Randall."

"And your own?"

She laughed. "Oh, it'll be much more fun if you don't know my name, if when you come to call, we really are introduced and it isn't a make-believe."

"Oh, I say!" he protested.

But the carriage stopped before her hotel.

"I'll just get out; don't you," she said. "It wouldn't look"——

"Very well," said Waring.

He leaned across to open the door on her side. His hand brushed hers. She gripped his hand with firm fingers.

"You are just as nice and brave as you can be, Mr. Waring, and—I'm ever so much obliged."

Then she was gone. Waring laughed tenderly to himself as the cabby drove him to his hotel. "Ever so much obliged!" Like a boy! In his room, undressed, he bathed his bruised knuckles with witchhazel. What a delightful acquaintance! Well worth far more than bruised knuckles. He didn't blame her a bit. Her uncle must be a hard-hearted brute! Well, if he could secure an introduction—and it would be mighty funny if he couldn't, with his wide circle of friends in Paris—he would show the girl a good time. After all, he could easily cancel his booking on the French liner. There was no hurry about returning to America.

Poor little girl! All cooped up in a convent, and then denied the delights of Paris by a surly old curmudgeon of an uncle! What treats were in store for her! Mrs. Willy Sinsabaugh was in town, he happened to know. And he and Mrs. Willy had been pals for ever so many years. Mrs. Willy would invite the girl to things, and would chaperon them, and—he chuckled to himself as he dropped off to sleep. He wasn't so old, after all. Thirty-one marked the real youth of a man, not the beginning of middle age. * * *

Only a very young and enthusiastic person whistles in the midst of shaving; yet Waring attempted—with very fair success—"Listen to the Mockingbird." A mouthful of lather cut short a roulade. He frowned at himself in the glass and then grinned delightfully. What a pretty girl she was!

He dressed with scrupulous care, yet with rapidity. Downstairs, in the hotel restaurant, he ordered fruit, omelette, coffee and rolls. Awaiting their arrival, he opened his Paris Herald. A headline struck him with almost the effect of a physical blow:

CAREY HAIG KILLS HIMSELF.

Prominent New York Broker Discovered in Defalcation and Commits Suicide.

Waring read the brief cable from New York that followed. Then he put the paper down and mechanically ate his breakfast. But he tasted nothing. Carey Haig had been his trustee; every cent of the Waring fortune had been in his control. The cable held out little hope that there would be any salvage at all from the wreck.

Waring must go to New York at once, after all. The inchoate plans of last night and the early morning must be abandoned. The girl—Philip Waring had no right to bother with girls just now—not while he was, so far as he knew, practically a pauper. And as he went upstairs to attend to his hasty packing he thought little of the girl. Tragedy banished romance.

"Poor Carey," he said, over and over again.

CHAPTER II.

THE Montania had docked. Waring had come down to meet Mrs. Willy Sinsabaugh and her maid; he had helped the vivacious lady through the formalities of the customs, and now the maid and several suitcases and handbags were in one taxi, while Waring and the pretty young matron were in another.

Mrs. Willy leaned back and sighed. "There, thank heaven, that's over. Philip Waring, you're a dear, and if I weren't just mad about my husband I'd kiss you."

"These husbands," growled Waring; "they're always in the way."

"Not today," said Mrs. Willy. "The brute! Running off to Chicago the night before I land! I'll make him pay!"

"But it was very important business, Madge," expostulated Waring mildly.

"And if I didn't defend him?" countered Waring.

"I'd stop this taxi and make you walk," declared Mrs. Willy viciously.

"William Patterson Sinsabaugh is the pink paragon of perfection," announced Waring.

"Exactly," said Mrs. Willy, dimpling. "You are a great reader of character, Phil—though in the Carey Haig affair you weren't, were you?"

"Oh, Carey was a good fellow," said Waring evasively.

"A good fellow! When he robbed you of—Philip Waring, how can you say such a thing?"

"Well, I don't think Carey was quite himself. He—there's a lot of mystery about that matter, Madge."

"Tell me," she commanded.

He smiled at her. "If I don't, I suppose Mr. Bill Husband will, eh?"

Mrs. Willy nodded. "Mr. Bill Husband tells Mrs. William Wife everything."

"Well, in that case—to tell you the truth, Madge, I'm puzzled about Carey. I've been over his books. Carey killed himself on the 28th of January. On Jan. 1 all his investments, personal and trustee, were in the best of shape. He held something like $400,000 for me; he'd been trustee during my minority, you know, and after I came of age I let him continue. It was less bother."

"There was about $800,000 that he held in trust for others—personal property, I mean. Well, on Jan. 17 he began selling. By the 24th he had turned all his trustee investments into cash. And his own personal investments, amounting to a quarter of a million, he had sold also. He held one parcel of real estate for me—that is, collected the rent and all that sort of thing; he couldn't sell that. And there were three or four other bits of property that he didn't realize on—couldn't, I guess. Well, he killed himself on the 28th. He left a confession on his desk stating that he had embezzled all the funds left in his care."

"But what had he done with all that cash?" demanded Mrs. Willy.

"That's the point that is so queer," said Waring. "On the 26th he drew from various banks every cent he had, both his own and the trustee money. It came to almost a million and a half. And that money has disappeared."

"Impossible!" ejaculated Mrs. Willy.

"But true," said Waring.

"But can't you tell—find out? Isn't there any way"——

"Oh, I've got detectives looking into the matter," said Waring, "but—I don't look for much."

"But didn't he leave any clew at all?"

"W-e-ll, I don't know that you could call it a clew, exactly. It hasn't led to much."

"What was it?"

"Why, his stenographer—she rushed into his office at the sound of the shot that killed poor Carey—says that he lived for 10 seconds or so, and that he repeated over and over the name 'Bergson.'

"And in his papers I found some notes made two days before he died—made on the 26th. Not much—simply a record of having paid one Simon Bergson $1,450,000."

Waring forestalled her query. "Can't be located."

"But aren't there any other papers that would, maybe, tell"——

"Not a thing. Carey Haig kept fewer personal memoranda than any business man I ever heard of. But perhaps he burned them before he died. Anyway, there's nothing."

"And what are you doing?" demanded Mrs. Willy.

Waring shrugged his shoulders. "Me? Oh, I've got that piece of property that Carey couldn't sell. I'm acting as my own agent, rent collector and that sort of thing. It brings me in about $40 a week.

Mrs. Willy gasped. Forty dollars sometimes paid for one of Mrs. Willy's hats.

"But you can't live on that, Phil! You aren't a slacker, Phil? You aren't lying down, are you? You aren't afraid to work?"

"Oh, no. Bill Husband offered me a job, but"——

"Why didn't you take it?"

Waring's voice grew bitter. "Well, Madge, what good am I? Your husband offered me a job, but—what experience have I had? I wouldn't be worth a fourth the money he offered me, and I'd feel like a beggar taking it."

"But what are you doing?" persisted Mrs. Willy.

"Well, woman, if I must tell you, I'm doing my darndest to find this Simon Bergson."

"Had any success?"

"Not a bit."

"Expect to?"

"Hope dies hard in the Warings."

Mrs. Willy eyed him speculatively. "I don't know what sort of a business man you'd make, Phil. But I do know one thing about you."

"I entreat you, Mrs. William Wife of old Bill Husband—tell me what you know about me."

"You'd make a dandy husband, Phil."

"Eh?" He grinned his infectious grin. "You aren't thinking—Madge, it isn't possible that you're going to turn Bill Husband loose and"——

"Philip Waring, you're—you're immoral! I—maybe I won't introduce you to her, now."

Waring put his hands up over his head. "Help!" he groaned. "I thought that being a pauper would protect me from"——

"Well, it won't," declared Mrs. Willy decisively. "And you're being poor—well, my Bill Husband lost every penny in the panic seven years ago, and look at the old dear now. And he didn't have any business experience or—or anything."

"No, not a thing in the world except a wife who came to him and offered him the hundred thousand that her father had left her."

Mrs. Willy colored. "Well, he didn't take it."

"And you expect me to take from some woman"——

"Oh, you go ahead too fast," said Mrs. Willy. "She—well, Bill Husband will find something else for you, and this girl—Phil, she's a beauty, and her uncle is immensely rich—everyone says so, anyway—and she's his only heir—or should I say heiress? Anyway, you're going to meet her—tomorrow night, if I can locate her so soon. She's stopping at the Plutonia, I believe, and—I'll bet you'll discover this Bergson person and get your money back, and—I'm home at last! Oh, Phil, look at old John smile at me. I'm a bad wife and housekeeper, running off for three months at a time."

At the Waldorf, he stopped in for a cocktail. It was while drinking it slowly that he became conscious that he was being followed. He looked about him, with seeming carelessness but with eyes that took in everything. Yet he could see no one who seemed at all out of place here, no one whose manner was furtive or slinking.

Waring paid his check at the desk and walked out into Thirty,fourth street. He tried to shake off the sensation that had made him scrutinize the faces about him at the bar, but it would not be shaken off.

It was an old-fashioned apartment house, only four stories tall, devoted, for the most part, to artists and writers. There was no elevator. And as it was a warm spring day, the door leading from the vestibule into the hall was swung wide. As he listened, Waring heard the sound of feet on the marble flagging of the vestibule.

The steps ceased. Waring opened his door the least bit and glanced through. Someone was bending over, staring at the name cards above the letter boxes. There was something vaguely familiar about the man—also something strange: his apparel, which was French in cut. Waring now recollected what had not struck him as important when drinking his cocktail: that as he looked up, a man dressed somewhat oddly for New York had sauntered to the free lunch table, his back to Waring.

"Well, if the man had been following him, it was a simple matter to accost him and ask his reasons. Waring stepped through the door, very softly, and was in the vestibule before the man looked up. And Waring recognized him at once. It was the dancer, Raoul the Red, whom he had thrashed last January in the cafe in Montmarte.

There was no time to ask questions. As Waring looked, the man sprang. There was a struggle for a moment; the knife that had flashed in the dancer's hand dropped to the floor as Waring's grip crushed his wrist. Agile, slippery, the man broke from Waring's grasp and burst through the open outside door into the street. Waring dashed after him. A touring car was rolling rapidly down the street. Waring stopped; his anger evaporated in pity; he cried aloud, but it was too late. Heedless of everything save the man pursuing him, Rauol the Red had not seen the on-coming machine. Its front wheels knocked him down, hurled him against the curbstone.

MISS VIRGINIA B LONGSTRETH
WHOSE ENGAGEMENT TO MR HARRY AMES RICHARDS OF STAMFORD, CONN., WAS ONE OF THE INTERESTING ANNOUNCEMENTS OF THE WEEK

THREE announcements the past week were of special interest to the social world.

The unexpected wedding of Miss Grace Allen to Lieut. Dudley French came as a surprise to her friends and relatives in St. Louis, for her engagement had not been announced and like most "war" weddings of today took place on the eve of the bridegroom's departure to serve his country. It was a quiet affair and took place in New York where Lieut. French is awaiting a transport to France. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clafflin Allen of Westminster place and has been popular since her debut two years ago, although she has devoted most of her time to more serious pursuits. Both Mr. and Mrs. Allen and the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. French, were in New York at the marriage.

The engagement of Miss Virginia Longstreth to Harry Ames Richards of Stamford, Conn., was announced from New York, where Miss Longstreth has been for some time with her mother, but the wedding will take place in St. Louis.

Miss Longstreth is the daughter of Mrs. Florence B. Longstreth, a niece of Mrs. G. Lacy Crawford and also of Mrs. Lida Bevis. The wedding will be the latter part of the month and will take place at Mrs. Crawford's home, 5635 Waterman avenue.

Miss Longstreth and her mother will arrive next week and the details will then be completed.

The wedding of Miss Elise Lammert Smith, daughter of H. T. T. Smith of 55 Kingsbury place, to Arnold Morrow will be a home affair, on Oct. 3. The bride-elect's sister, Mrs. John S. Fraser, arrived last week from Panama, where her husband, Capt. Fraser, who has recently been promoted, is stationed. She will be matron of honor. Miss Irene Smith, a younger sister, will be maid of honor, and Miss Mignon Morrow and Mildred McDonald of New York will be bridemaids. The bridegroom's attendants will be W. Gus Haenschen, Briggs Hoffman, Charles Becker and Moulton Green, formerly of St. Louis but now residing in Kansas City.

Each day brings movements among women, either in conservation or relief work. One local chapter of one of the most widely known patriotic societies conceived the idea of both food conservation and war relief combined. It was unanimously voted at one of the meetings that the serving of refreshments at the chapter meetings be discontinued as long as the war lasted and the money be used for war relief work.

It may be that this winter will inaugurate a new fashion in teas, receptions and card parties, and when an invitation is accepted one need only expect a "feast of reason and a flow of soul" instead of the various forms of cakes, ices, salads and sandwiches which heretofore has gone to make up an important part of most social affairs.

At the different summer colonies where women are supposed to forget their cares and spend the time in frolic and recreation, the custom was changed this year and "Patriotism" was the watchword of the hour. The St. Louis women who were among the summer residents and visitors at the various resorts were not lacking in doing their part. Ninety St. Louis women at Wequetonsing worked every spare moment in the Red Cross Unit formed there. At Estes Park and Glenwood Springs one found the same spirit, at Alexandria, Minn., at White Sulphur and the Hot Springs of Virginia, at Douglas and Harbor Point, Mich., all loyal and patriotic St. Louis women were rolling bandages, knitting sweaters, mufflers, wristlets and helmets and helping in every way to do their part in the great work allotted to women in the world struggle of today.

Yesterday two weddings of note and of interest to many St. Louisans were solemnized in the east. The wedding of Miss Helen Le Roy Lane to Wells Blanchard of Concord, Mass., and that of Miss Jane Taylor to Boyle Price, both of St. Louis. The former wedding took place at Magnolia, Mass. Miss Janet Elliot of Boston and Misses Eleanor Scott and Catherine McCreery of St. Louis were members of the bridal party. Mrs. Blanchard has spent much of her time away from St. Louis since her debut two years ago when she was a member of the "Imperial" set. She is a daughter of Mrs. Nathaniel Tyler Lane.

Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard will be in Washington, D. C. for the present, as Mr. Blanchard is connected with the Red Cross Commission there.

Miss Taylor's wedding took place at the home of her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William Ewing, at Greenwich, Conn., and was quiet on account of the death of Mr. Price's mother. After a wedding journey, Mr. and Mrs. Price will return to St. Louis and be at home in the Duplex Apartments.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Niedringhaus of Vandeventer place, who are at their sumemr home at Biddeford Pool, Me., are entertaining their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Clement R. D. Meier.

Mrs. Newton R. Wilson of the Devonshire apartments, has purchased the home of the late John D. Davis, in Brentmoor and expects to take immediate possession.

Mrs. Alfred Carr is at Atlantic City.

Mrs. Alcee Stewart, of 6249 Waterman avenue, with her little daughter, Mary Elizabeth, returned last Thursday from a two months' visit at Geneva Lake, Wis.

Miss Isabel Capen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel D. Capen, has selected Oct. 4 for her wedding to John Anderson Scudder II. The ceremony will take place at the country home of Miss Capen's parents, "Wentworth Terrace," on the Clayton road. The wedding will include Miss Lucille Capen as maid of honor, and Misses Marie Church, Marie Wight, Grace Taylor and Mary Francis Joy, as bridemaids. Two little cousins of Miss Capen, Marjory Capen and Frances Armstrong, will be flower girls. Mr. Scudder is on a patrol boat with the "Mosquito Fleet," and has asked the men of his boat to act as groomsmen, but it is uncertain if they can serve, on account of the difficulty in obtaining leave at that time.

Madame de Bernard, who is in New York attending the fall openings of the leading importers, will return this week to reopen Maison de Bernard. —ADV.

Word has been received from Boston of the marriage there last Friday of Francis Grover Cleveland O'Neill, son of former Congressman John J. O'Neill of St. Louis, and Miss Catherine Gray Porter, daughter of Mrs. George J. Porter of Medford, Mass. Mr. O'Neill is a Harvard graduate of the class of '16 and is at present training for the aviation service. Eugene O'Neill, a brother of the bridegroom, served as best man for his brother, and Miss Corinna Ely of Boston, the bride's cousin, was the only other attendant.

CHURCH SEEKS $2,000,000 FUND

"Men and Millions" Committee Makes Plans for Fall Campaign.

The Executive Committee "Men and Millions Movement" of the Christian Church, met at the Marquette Hotel today to outline plans for a fall and winter campaign for raising the final $2,000,000 of a $6,000,000 fund for use in missionary work and in schools and colleges founded by the church.

When the campaign for funds was started three years ago, R. A. Long, millionaire lumber dealer of Kansas City pledged $1,000,000 provided an additional $5,000,000 is raised by the church. Of this amount $3,000,000 has been pledged.

A meeting in the afternoon was attended by representatives of the colleges, other beneficiaries and persons interested in the movement.

The first performance of the combined moving picture and vaudeville show to be given at the Victoria Theater during the present week for the benefit of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund will be tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock. The pictures will be shown each evening at the same hour up to and including Saturday, and at a Saturday matinee, at 2:30 o'clock. A vaudeville show will be given at each presentation, with six entire changes of program. No vaudeville performance will be repeated even in part except the one which will be given both Saturday afternoon and night. Each vaudeville program will be made up of about 15 numbers, selected from among the best which have been given at various milk and ice fund entertainments this season. There will be a total of more than 100 performers.

Three Reels of Pictures.

The pictures will be shown in three reels. The first will be a feature which already has been exhibited in many St. Louis moving picture theaters. It shows several interesting phases of the work which is carried on through the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund and as a sidelight on how the work is supported shows a group of children at a rehearsal for a benefit entertainment.

The second reel will show individual pictures of a large number of this season's workers for the fund, including many of the dancers, in costumes.

The third and chief reel is the allegorical photoplay "Truth," for which several hundred milk and ice fund workers were the actors. The scenes were made in Forest Park by the Historical-Industrial Motion Picture Co., which has charge of the production of the photoplay and the management of the other features of the performances. The photoplay tells a pretty story charmingly and the pictures are splendid.

About 20 minutes will be required to "run" each reel of pictures, and the vaudeville program at each performance will be given immediately after the presentation of the photoplay.

Five children in the neighborhood gave a show at 3650 Castleman avenue, which added $5 to the Milk and Ice Fund. The children participating were Jeannette Lantz, Walter Lantz, Charles Valier, Robert Valier and Edward Valier.

FARMERS SELL OUT EARLY AT FIRST STREET MARKET

BIG SAVING ON PRICES

Band Plays Lively Airs During Session, Giving Holiday Character to Event

The first municipal street market in St. Louis was opened yesterday morning at Broadway and Chippewa street, when wagons filled with produce extended along the curbs from that point to Alberta street, two blocks south.

This market, which will be known as the "Wild Hunters' Market," brought together farmers from many sections of the county and attracted a large number of housewives, some of whom were on hand at daybreak to get their choice of the produce offered for sale.

In the early morning hours about 75 wagons were in the new market place. Some of the farmers "sold out" early and by 10 a. m. all of the wagons were empty and many South St. Louis larders were filled with good things.

Open Three Days a Week.

The opening of a street market was first suggested by President Aloe of the Board of Aldermen. The idea was enthusiastically taken up by the Tenth Ward Improvement Association and the Civic League. An ordinance recently was passed authorizing Street and Sewer Commissioner Talbert to issue permits for the use of streets for market purposes on certain days. The Wild Hunters' Market will be operated on Saturday, Tuesday and Thursday mornings, when any farmer with a permit may sell his produce direct to the consumer.

Farmers who were at the market yesterday came from distances of five to 20 miles and some arrived as early as 8 p. m. Friday, to be sure of obtaining good positions.

The market on its opening day was inspected by Mr. Aloe and E. J. Russell, chairman of the joint aldermanic committee on farmers' markets; Mrs. E. M. Grossman of the Women's Food Conservation Committee, and Prof. W. F. Gephart of Washington University, chairman of the Civic League's Public Market Committee. Prof. Gephart will report his observations to the United States Department of Agriculture.

Prices Materially Lower.

In many instances the prices charged by the farmers were considerably lower than those charged in retail stores.

Potatoes sold at $1.35 a bushel, which was 15 to 20 cents below the store price. Tomatoes found ready sale at $1.25 a bushel and apples sold at 70 cents a bushel. String beans early in the morning were held at 75 cents a bushel, but before 10 a. m. they were selling at 45 cents. Fairly large watermelons sold at 15 cents each and green peppers at 40 cents a bushel.

A band hired for the occasion played lively airs all morning, giving the new street market a holiday character. Similar markets, it is expected, will be opened in other parts of the city, the prime object being to reduce the cost of living and eliminate middlemen's profits on farm produce.

LEAGUE GIVES DATA ON U. R. TAX COMPROMISES

Civic Body Information to Aldermen Shows Them to Be Unsatisfactory.

Information and reports on street railway propositions similar to the proposed mill tax compromise and franchise extension ordinances were submitted yesterday by the Civic League to the Public Utilities Committee of the Board of Aldermen. These reports showed that such compromises were generally unsatisfactory, and often resulted in further complications.

The Civic League presented to the committee reports from Philadelphia, indicating that in 1917 that city and the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. entered into an agreement similar to the proposed United Railways mill tax agreement. This plan did not work sucessfully there and the company has asked the city for another readjustment, principally because of the over-capitalization of the company.

The league probably will endeavor to have the Board of Aldermen employ a franchise expert to advise it relative to the proposed ordinances. The reports received by the league from experts to whom it sent copies of the proposed ordinances point out many objectionable features in them.

Louis F. Budenz, secretary of the league, announced yesterday that an organization comprised of 20 or more civic and ward improvement associations will issue a report next week urging the defeat of both of the proposed ordinances. These organizations, which have held many meetings on the subject, have agreed to invoke the referendum on the ordinances if either or both should be passed by the Board of Aldermen.

Lesson in Scientific Complexion Renewing

Everyone has a beautiful skin underneath the one exposed to view. Bear that in mind and it will be easier to understand the correct principle in acquiring a lovely complexion. Nature is constantly shedding the top skin in flaky particles like dandruff, only much smaller in size. In abnormal conditions, or in advancing age, these particles are not shed as rapidly as in robust youth. The longer they remain the more soiled or faded they become—that's the immediate cause of "bad complexion."

It has been discovered that ordinary mercolized wax, to be had at any drug store, will absorb these worn-out particles. The absorption, while hastening Nature's work, goes on gradually enough to cause no inconvenience. In a week or two the transformation is complete. The fresh, healthy-hued, youthful underskin is then wholly in evidence. You who are not satisfied with your complexions should get an ounce of mercolized wax and try this treatment. Use the wax nightly, like cold cream, washing it off mornings.—ADV.

Camp Life Stories of Foreign Legionaries in Training for Service

American Tells of the Hard Drill in All of the Latest Tricks of War--Sent to Guardhouse for Defending American Slang.

By GERALD BRANDON.
Lately of the French Foreign Legion.

I WONDER, if in the training camps being established for our new army the men will receive the same sort of training the Foreign Legion was put through. I much misdoubt it, for where are the experienced instructors to come from? Physical fitness, marksmanship, knowledge of the manual of arms—these can be acquired after a certain amount of drilling under our efficient young West Pointers. But the million ruses of modern war, which have never been compiled in a text book and the least of which may spell the difference between life and death—who will teach these to our boys? Will they have to learn them by experience, at the cost of much blood, as did the French and English?

At Camp La Vilbonne we were put on a war footing from the first day of our enlistment—no considerations because we were recruits; no explanations because we did not understand the language. We were put into the ranks between veterans, and stood our trick with them. If we were ordered to do something we did something, though not always the right thing. The first time we would be laughed at and shown how; the second time we would be sworn at and shown how; the third time we would be deprived of a week's liberty and shown how, and the fourth time we would go to the guardhouse . But we usually were letter perfect before the fourth time.

Not knowing the language was not such a heavy handicap after all. I defy anyone to distinguish a word of military commands barked out by a surly Sergeant even in English. After a little drilling, the soldier develops a seventh sense which tells him what he should do next. From the spoken command he gets the cue when to do it rather than what to do.

Many of the fellows in my regiment were trained athletes, who laughed when told that they would need a couple of months' training before being physically fit. The first time they went on a trial march, with 70 pounds of equipment on their backs, they realized the reason for this. Some days we did as much as 35 miles across country, and as it was summer time and we wore winter uniforms—the only ones to be had—I need not say there was not a single man in the regiment who had any surplus flesh on him by the time we got through our training.

We did very little drilling, but a great deal of digging. One's life depends very often on his ability to entrench himself efficaciously under fire. It is no easy job to lie on your side with your knapsack covering your face, and pile up the dirt in front of you. When the pile is a foot high, you wiggle into the hollow you have scooped out and work more at ease. After your trench is three feet deep the rest is easy. Our instructor used to post a group of men armed with stones near us when we worked, with instructions to pot any arms or head which might appear inadvertently.

Ammunition Was Scarce.

In those days there was none too much ammunition in France, and we could not do much target practice.

On the other hand, much attention was paid to bayonet practice, a play at which the French are masters. We usually practiced with dummy bayonets which would run into the muzzle of the rifle, but every once in a while we were made to fence with the real thing, so as to get us accustomed to the cold steel. Several men were hurt this way, but what is a little blood more or less in the Foreign Legion? We were also trained to handle explosives, and were given a practical course in bomb throwing. Americans in whom baseball has developed a throwing arm excelled in this.

Signaling, both by day and by night, was very important. Every soldier must be able to send or read such signals as:

"Lengthen your range," "Shorten your range," "Advance," "Retreat," "The artillery needs the support of infantry," "Enemy is approaching," etc., etc.

We learned how to make loopholes in our entrenchments in such a way as to be protected against the enemy fire from in front, how to gauge distances, how to draw the enemy's fire without exposing one's self, when to advance by dashes, and when by infiltration, how to tell when a gas attack is coming and what to do to render it harmless, and, most important of all, how to dodge shells.

Tricking the Shells.

A shell is something like a Mexican fighting bull in its habits. A bull closes his eyes when he charges, and, if you keep your head and step aside after he is once launched in his career, you are safe. A big shell also has a fixed course. You can hear it coming, and, unless it falls right on you, the danger can can be rendered negligible and all the falling flat on your face. When the shell hits, it explodes and all the fragments fly upward at an angle of about 55 degrees. If you tre within a radius of 300 yards from the explosion, there is little probability of your being hit. When the fragments fall, your steel helmet and the padding on your shoulders guarantee against wounds.

Shrapnel bursts in the air above you and the fragments and bullets descend with little velocity. Your helmet covers you against shrapnel fire well enough if you are standing, but it is a bad plan to lie flat under this kind of fire, as you increase the area of your "horizontal projection" on the ground.

These and a thousand other things we learned at La Valbonne, from comrades who had been through the bill.

Legion a Varied Bunch.

In an incredibly short time we picked up sufficient army French to be able to exchange amenities with our fellows; and a varied bunch we found them.

There was the old Legionaire, veteran of Morocco, Algeria, Madagascar, Tonquin, China and other campaigns, his breast covered with service medals and his face bleared with alcohol.

There was the ex-officer from other continental armies, who, for conduct unbecoming a gentleman, had been discharged and enlisted in the Foreign Legion to seek death.

There was the canny Spaniard, who had a business in the French-African possessions and was serving his term in order to be eligible for French citizenship.

There was the criminal, who took refuge in the Legion in order to escape the penalty of his crimes.

There was the wild boy put there by his parents to be steadied.

The enthusiast, who enlisted to serve France and humanity, was in the minority, but he existed all right, and was in hard luck, because his story was not believed by his fellows. Hundreds of times I have been confidentially approached by comrades, who tried to draw out of me some fantastic reason for my enlisting.

We all knew the reputation of the Legion at first, and were distrustful of our fellows. Later we got to know each other and friendships sprung up which will be enduring.

Camp La Valbonne shelters within its myriad of clumsy squat barracks and graceful cone shaped tents some 10,000 soldiers. Half of these are veterans, clad in worn "horizon-blue" uniforms that tell the story of weary months in the trenches, from the fatigue of which their wearers are resting before returning to the firing line. The remainder, recruits in tell-tale blue and red, work 10 hours each day trying to learn the manual of arms. But their hardest job is to lose their sense of individual identity, which each soldier must perforce merge into the "grande ensemble" of the army machine of which he becomes an anonymous, yet indispensable cog.

Corporal's Job Hard.

From among the smartest appearing and most willing soldiers, the chief of battalion picks a dozen each month as candidates for the rank of corporal. In ordinary times these men go through a course of instruction which lasts six months, but the exigencies of war and the gaps which the German snipers make in the ranks of noncommissioned officers have increased the demand for corporals, and, in order to increase the supply proportionately, it has been found necessary to shorten the course to 60 days. Into this short time must be crowded, not only the tactical instruction provided by the army regulations, but also the innumerable practical lessons which trench war has taught.

The corporal is the hardest worked man in the army. It is he who must see that the men comply with orders. He is ever in direct contact with the rank and file, shares their dangers and hardships and personally leads them and proves to them that certain seemingly impossible things can be accomplished. He must serve as their model physically, as well as morally; he must be able to march his 30 miles carrying the 70-pound equipment on his back; and, when the day is done and the privates are at liberty to enjoy a well-earned rest, he must superintend the bivouacking and the kitchen. He must also be somewhat of an accountant, for the purchase of provisions and the pay of his men fall on his shoulders.

Style assortments that are unusual $15 Values that are extraordinary

That's what makes us so pleased with the extent, class and value of this showing at $15.00.

Manifold rows of braid seem much in favor. So do buttons, and girdles, and buckles.

Vari-colored embroidery is as popular as ever—maybe more so. Harness stitching, too, is smart.

In models you have the "peg top" skirts, draped and pleated skirts, and overskirts—

Attached to smart long-waisted, short-waisted, Princess and Basque Blouses, with lace or Georgette collars and plain tailored styles.

rals) of the Foreign Legion, was the right man in the right place, possessing both technical knowledge and practical experience. His squad was undoubtedly the best drilled man in camp, and even the veteran Legionaires, who are ever flaunting their 15 years' service and their beribboned breasts in the faces of the volunteer recruits, were forced to acknowledge that we bore ourselves as soldiers.

Just as the Legion's squad was the pick of the camp, thus incontestably was Oscar Mouvet the best man in the squad. Mouvet was a New Yorker, of French descent, who showed what stuff he was made of before ever leaving the training camp.

An athlete, he seemed hardly to feel the fatiguing drills and trial marches. His memory was retentive and his education beyond the ordinary. Above all, he possessed that invaluable magnetism which marks the born leader of men.

At the end of our course each candidate was given a squad of men with whom to maneuver before the critical eye of the commandant. Most of us just passed, but Mouvet's work was so good as to elicit a compliment from the chief. As a result his "livret individual" (service sheet) was inscribed as follows: "Apt for the rank of corporal. Unusually intelligent and energetic."

It was on a Friday night that the Lieutenant informed us we were to leave for the front on the following Tuesday morning, and offered us each a 24-hour 'permission" that we might bid farewell to our families and friends.

Commandant's Bad Humor.

Mouvet, whose mother lived in Paris, would not have time to go and return within the prescribed period. He would need at least 48 hours, but the Lieutenant had not the authority to grant more than 24, and the Captain and the Commandant were both absent for the day. It seemed hard that the best man in the squad should lose the opportunity of seeing his mother before going to face the German bullets.

The Lieutenant thought it over. Such unimportant details as the countersigning of permissions are usually attended to by the Commandant without even bothering to glance at the names of the permissionaires. The Lieutenant decided to take a chance, and handed Mouvet a 48-hour permission.

On the following morning, Mouvet's application for permission was placed on the Commandant's desk together with dozens of similar slips.

The Commandant was in an infernal humor. The morning's mail had brought him an unofficial notification to the effect that he was about to be placed on the retired list, and, despite the fact his birth certificate accused him of being 65 years old, he felt strong enough to outlive and outfight "all those dandies in the War Office."

He cast his eyes on the applications for leave. Here were young men, some of whom had never smelt powder, asking for a few days' rest from service, when he, after 45 years, only desired to be left in harness.

"I will grant no permissions today," he roared at the Adjutant who, blotter in hand, stood beside him. "These volunteers will never be soldiers. My old Legionaires had no need of more than Sundays to get drunk in. They were not a sentimental lot like the men of today."

The Lieutenant paled when he heard of the Commandants' action. He had exceeded his authority and had rendered himself liable to the loss of his commission. He could only hope the Commandant would not discover his fault.

Self Sacrificing Reply.

Mouvet's absence would not have reached the Commandant's ears had not a telegram arrived for him. As usual, it passed through the office, where it was given to an orderly to be delivered to him. The orderly returned and reported that Mouvet could not be found. The Commandant, ever a stickler for discipline, decided to investigate.

Sunday night the Lieutenant and Mouvet were summoned to the Commandant's quarters.

"Lieutenant," began the old officer sternly, "this man, whom you recommended so highly and who has borne his Corporal's stripes but a few days, has been illegally absent for 48 hours. I know he was not granted permission, for I refused his application myself."

Still looking at the Lieutenant, for he seemed to know or rather to guess who was responsible for the breach of discipline, the Commandant demanded of Mouvet:

"And you, Corporal, what have you to say for yourself?"

Mouvet, who realized the Lieutenant's danger, clicked his heels together and stood at attention. His eyes met the Commandant's expectant gaze squarely.

"I have no excuse to offer, my Commandant," he said simply. "I wanted to see my mother and deliberately overstayed the 24-hour leave my Lieutenant granted me."

Public Reprimand.

The Lieutenant started to speak, but checked himself. The Commandant turned to him.

"Lieutenant, you will publicly reprimand Soldier of the Second Class Mouvet during roll call tomorrow. He will then serve a month in the guard-house before rejoining his company at the front as a private. I trust you will be more careful in the future before recommending men for promotion."

Next morning the demotion of Corporal Mouvet for "Illegal absence" was read to us at roll call, after which the Lieutenant stammered a few words about abandoning one's post, being the worst crime on the soldier's calendar.

"Have you anything to say, Private Mouvet?" he concluded, in a wavering tone, as though his conscience forced him to give the disgraced soldier a last chance to clear himself.

"I have nothing to say, my Lieutenant," answered Mouvet, standing between the two soldiers who had been designated to escort him to prison. "I am satisfied. The sight of my mother was worth it all."

There is a regulation in the Foreign Legion that none but allied languages should be spoken. This ruling was made necessary by the fact that among the various nationalities that go to make up our heterogeneous outfit, there are thousands of Swiss, Poles, Czes, etc., who habitually speak German, much to the disgust of the French, to whom a Teuton gutteral is as a red rag to a bull.

One evening at La Valbonne, Jack Casey, an American artist in the service and myself were talking over old times, when a couple of Swiss objected, citing the abovementioned rule. We explained we were speaking English, but to no avail. Our interlocutor had lived several years in England and, not understanding our Broadway vernacular, insisted it was not the Queen's English.

The Swiss took a long time to recover, and while I was working over him with a towel his compatriot came at me with a cane.

"Look out, Brandon!" shouted Casey, as a warning—but too late, the cane had descended.

Despite "the pacifism which characteribes me," as the Spaniards say, I was obliged to reply in kind, and in a few moments there were a half-dozen Swiss falling over each other in a vain attempt to punish two elusive Americans. We did not escape absolutely unscathed, for I broke a knuckle on someone, and Casey's hands were sore for many days after.

Long Wait for Trial.

This altercation, the only one I ever had with comrades in the Foreign Legion, came near casting us dearly. One of the Swiss was a noncommissioned officer, and took advantage of his rank to charge us with insubordination. Had it happened at the front the penalty would have been death, but at La Valbonne we were only liable to a sentence of five to 10 years at hard labor.

To make matters worse, one of our opponents claimed he had been stabbed, showing a profusely bleeding wound on his under lip in substantiation. The Adjutant, also a Swiss, who held the preliminary examination, confiscated our knives and wiped the blades on a cigarette paper in search of clues. Alas, a sticky red stain appeared on the paper when my knife was wiped on it. Things looked bad for me for a couple of days, until the chemical analysis, which I had demanded, proved the supposed gore to be only strawberry jam from a can I had opened with my knife. The wound was later explained by the medical expert, who showed how the Swiss must have bitten through his own lip, when Casey tapped him on the jaw.

For almost two months Casey and myself remained in the guard-house awaiting trial. In the meanwhile, we prepared our case, getting much publicity through our newspaper connections, for Casey, I might mention, is the well-known cartoonist, Jack Casey. Over a score of witnesses offered themseelves in our favor, despite the fact that not even a dozen persons saw the fight. This will give an idea of the unpopularity of noncoms in the army.

In those days I was still credulous, so, when a comrade assured me I was entitled to a furlough of the same duration as the extra period I had put in, in prison, I believed him, and applied to my Captain for leave on those grounds.

Victim of Joker.

Eventually the military prosecutor decided to drop the case, as our acquittal was certain; but, as it would never do to give the right to a private against a superior, we were summarily sentenced to 20 days lockup for having, as was read out at roll call, "brutally beaten several Legionaires." Since we had already spent more than that time in our cells, we were immediately put at liberty.

Thinking that I was trying to be fresh, the Captain gave me an additional four-day sentence.

Shell-Shock Victims Are Pathetic Figures in the Efficient War Hospitals

Ninety Per Cent of the Men Recover, Says Colonel-Surgeon in Command of City for Wounded, on Site That a Few Month's Ago Was a Waste.

By JEFFERY FARNOL.

The Well Known Writer of Fiction.

The departure platform of a great station (for such as have eyes to see) is always a sad place, but nowadays it is a place of tragedy.

He was tall and thin—a boyish figure—and his khaki-clad arm was close about her slender form. The hour was early and their corner bleak and deserted; thus, few were by to heed his stiff-lipped, agonized smile and the passionate clasp of her hands, or to hear her heart-breaking sobs and his brave words of comfort; and I, shivering in the early morning wind, hastened on, awed by a grief that made the gray world grayer.

Very soon London was behind us, and we were whirling through a countryside wreathed in mist, wherein I seemed to see a girl's tear-wet cheeks and a boy's lips that smiled so valiantly for all their pitiful quiver; thus I answered my companion somewhat at random and the waiter's proffer of breakfast was an insult. And, as I stared out at misty trees and hedge rows I began as it were to sense a grimness in the very air—the million-sided tragedy of war; behind me the weeping girl, before me and looming nearer with every mile the Somme battle front.

At a table hard by a group of clear-eyed subalterns were chatting and laughing over breakfast, and in their merriment I, too, rejoiced. Yet the grimness was with me still as we rocked and swayed through the wreathing mist.

Across the Channel.

But trains, even on a foggy morning, have a way of getting there at last, so, in due season, were docks and more docks, with the funnels of ships and roll of the Channel; the white cliffs beyond these, misty shapes upon a misty sea, the gaunt outlines of destroyers that were to convey us Franceward. Hereupon my companion, a hardened traveler, inured to customs, passports and the like noxious things, led me through a jostling throng, his long legs striding rapidly when they found occasion, past rank upon rank of soldiers returning to duty, very neat and orderly looking, I thought, a little grim.

Presently the warps were cast off and very soon we were in the lift and roll of the Channel; the white cliffs slowly faded, the wind freshened and I, observing that every one had donned life belts, forthwith girded on one of the clumsy contrivances also.

In mid-Channel it blew hard and the destroyers seemed to be making heavy weather of it, now lost in spray, now showing a glistening height of freeboard, and, as I watched, remembering why they were there, my cumbersome life belt grew suddenly very comfortable.

Came a growing density on the horizon, a blue streak that slowly and little by little grew into roofs, chimneys, docks and shipping, and France was before us, and it was with almost reverent hands that I laid aside my clumsy cork jacket and was presently on French soil. And yet except for a few chattering porters, the air rang with good English voices hailing each other in cheery greetings, and khaki was everywhere. But now, as I followed my companion's long legs past these serried, dun-colored ranks, it seemed to me that they held themselves straighter and looked a little more grim than they had done in England.

Hospital by the Sea.

I stood, lost in the busy scene before me when, hearing K.'s voice, I turned to be introduced to Capt. R., tall, bright-eyed, immaculate and very much master of himself and circumstances, it seemed, for, despite a crowded customs office, he whisked us through, and thence before sundry officials who glared at me and my passport signed, stamped, returned it and permitted me to go.

After luncheon we drove to a great base hospital, where I was introduced to the Colonel-Surgeon in charge, a quiet man, but strong, who took us readily under his able guidance. And, indeed, a huge place was this, a place for me of awe and wonder, the more so as I learned that the greater part of it had come into being within one short year.

It lies beside the sea, this hospital, where clean winds blow; it has neat roadways bordered by green lawns and flanked by long, low buildings that reach away in far perspective, buildings of corrugated iron, of wood and asbestos, a very city, but one where there is no riot and rush of traffic—truly a city of peace and brooding quietude.

And as I looked upon this silent city my awe grew, for the Colonel, in his gentle voice, spoke of death and wounds, of shell-shock, nerve wreck and insanity; but he told also of wonderful cures, of miracles performed on those that should have died and of reason and sanity won back.

"And you?" I questioned; "have you done many such wonders?"

"Few!" he answered, and sighed. "You see, my duties now are chiefly administrative," and he seemed greatly grieved that it should be so.

The Enemy Wounded.

He brought into wards long, airy and many-windowed, places of exquisite neatness and order where calm-faced Sisters were busied and smart, soft-treating orderlies came and went. Here in white cots lay many bandaged forms, some who, propped on pillows, watched us bright-eyed and nodded in cherry greeting; others who lay so ominously still.

But as I passed between the long rows of cots I was struck with the look of utter peace and content on so many of the faces, and wounded until, remembering the hell whence they had so lately come, I thought I understood. Thus, bethinking me of how these dire hurts had been come by, I took off my hat and trod between these beds of silent suffering as softly as I could, for these men had surely come out of great tribulation.

In another ward I saw numbers of German wounded, most of them bearded; many there were who seemed weakly and undersized, and among them were many gray heads, a very motley company. These, the Colonel informed us, received precisely the same treatment as our own wounded, even to tobacco and cigarettes.

We followed our soft-voiced conductor through many other wards, where he showed us strange and wondrous devices in splints; he halted us by hanging beds of weird shape and cots that swung on pulleys; he descanted on wounds to flesh and bone and brain, of lives snatched from the grip of death by the marvels of the up-to-date surgery, and as I listened to his pleasant voice I sensed much of the grim wonders he left untold. We visited X-ray rooms and operating theater, against whose walls were glass cases filled with a multitudinous array of instruments for the saving of life, and here it was I learned that in certain cases a chisel, properly handled, was a far more delicate tool than the finest saw.

Shell Shock Victims.

"A wonderful place," said I for the hundredth time, as we stepped out upon a trim-green lawn. The Colonel-surgeon smiled.

"It took some planning,' he admitted; "a little while ago it was a sandy wilderness."

"But these lawns," I demurred.

"Came to me of their own accord," he answered; "at least, the seed did, washed ashore from a wreck; so I had it planned and it has done rather well. Now, what else can I show you? It would take all the afternoon to visit every ward, and they are all much alike—but there is the mad ward, if you'd care to see that? This way."

A strange place, this divided into compartmments or cubicles, where were many patients in the familiar blue overalls, most of whom rose and stood at attention as we entered. Tall, soldierly figures they seemed, and yet with an indefinable something in their looks—a vagueness of gaze, a loose-lipped, too-ready smile, a vacancy of expression. Some there were who scowled sullenly enough, others who sat crouched apart, solitary souls, who, I learned, felt themselves outcasts; haunted by the dread of a pursuing vengeance always at hand.

One such the Colonel accosted, asking what was wrong. The man looked up, looked down and muttered unintelligibly; whereupon the sister spoke.

"He believes that every one thinks him a spy," she explained, and touched the man's bowed head with a hand as gentle as her voice.

"Shell-shock is a strange thing," said the Colonel-surgeon, "and affects men in many extraordinary ways, but seldom permanently."

"You mean that these poor fellows will recover?" I asked.

The Suffering.

I was shown over laundries complete in every detail; I walked through clothing stores where, in a single day, 600 men had been equipped from head to foot; I beheld large machines for the sterilization of garments foul with the grime of battle and other things.

Truly, here, within the hospital that had grown, mushroomlike, within the wild, was everything for the alleviation of hurts and suffering more awful than our fighting ancestors ever had to endure. Presently I left this place, but now, although a clean fresh wind blew and the setting sun peeped out, the world somehow seemed a grimmer place than ever.

INQUIRY INTO PAINTER'S DEATH

Man Was Taken to Hospital Dazed After Auto Ride.

An autopsy to determine the cause of death of Chris Finke, 43 years old, a painter, of 4563 North Broadway, has been ordered by the Coroner. Finke was taken to the city hospital early Friday in a dazed condition after having been in an automobile driven by Anthony Gross, 23 years old, 222 Douglas street, when it struck a vegetable wagon in front of 8321 North Broadway.

He had no external signs of injury and physicians at the hospital said he was suffering from alcoholism. He died yesterday morning.

ALBERT BALLIN FALLS INTO DISFAVOR WITH THE KAISER

ZURICH, Switzerland, Sept. 8.—According to the Neuste Wiener Journal (Vienna), Albert Ballin, director-general of the Hamburg-American Steamship Line and long a favorite of Emperor William, has fallen into disfavor in officialdom because of criticism of the policy of the government. The Emperor, who never before failed to send birthday congratulations to Herr Ballin, this year ignored the anniversary.

Among Hamburg shipowners Herr Ballin's attitude is disapproved as it is thought his sharp condemnation of the Government's policy is likely to diminish German prestige abroad.

MAN KILLED BY BROKEN WIRE

Electrocuted While Repairing Storm Damage at Maplewood.

Clarence E. Welmering of 3021 Shenandoah avenue, manager of the Maplewood branch of the Western Power & Light Co., was electrocuted at Sarah and Limit avenues, Maplewood, yesterday morning when he picked up a live wire which had been broken in the storm Friday night. He had gone to the place to repair the damage. He first picked up the end of a dead wire and wrapped it around a post and then took hold of the live wire.

Physicians spent an hour trying to revive him with a pulmotor in a house at 2722 Limit avenue, where the body was carried. He was 33 years old, and married.

LEMONS WHITEN! MAKE THIS LOTION AND BEAUTIFY SKIN

What girl or woman hasn't heard of lemon juice to remove complexion blemishes; to bleach the skin and to bring out the roses, the freshness and the hidden beauty? But lemon juice alone is acid, therefore irritating and should be mixed with orchard white this way. Strain through a fine cloth the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing about three ounces of orchard white, then shake well and you have a whole quarter pint of the best skin and complexion lotion at about the cost one usually pays for a small jar of ordinary cold cream. Be sure to strain the lemon juice so no pulp gets into the bottle, then this lotion will remain pure and fresh for months. When applied daily to the face, neck, arms and hands it really does clear, smoothen and beautify the skin amazingly.

Any druggist will supply three ounces of orchard white at very little cost and the grocer has the lemons. —ADVERTISEMENT.

ECZEMA

Also Called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Water Poison, Weeping Skin, Etc.

DR. CANNADAY Eczema Specialist for 15 Years.

For fifteen years I have been treating one disease alone—ECZEMA. I have handled over one million cases. I do not pretend to know it all, but I am convinced the disease is due to an excess of acid in the blood, and closely related to rheumatism and cancer. This acid must be removed.

Eczema is called by some people Itch, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Weeping Skin, etc. I am fully convinced Eczema is a curable disease, and when I say it can be cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for a while to return worse than before. It makes no difference what other doctors have told you, or what all you have tried, all I ask is just a chance to prove to you that this vast experience has taught me a great deal that would be of help to you. If you will write me today I will send you a free trial of my mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will do more to convince you than I or anyone else could in a month's preaching. It's all up to you. If you suffer any more with eczema and refuse to merely write to me for free trial, just blame yourself. No matter where you live, I have treated your neighbors. Merely dropping me a postal today is likely to give you more real comfort in a week than you ever expected to enjoy again. Do it right now—your very life may be at stake.

Nuxated Iron to Make New Age of Beautiful Women and Strong Iron Men

Say Physicians—Quickly Puts Roses Into the Cheeks of Women and Most Astonishing Youthful Health Into the Veins of Men—It Often Increases the Strength and Endurance of Delicate, Nervous "Run-Down" Folks 100 Per Cent in Two Weeks' Time.

Opinions of Dr. Schuyler C. Jacques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City; Dr. James Louis Beyea, for Fifteen Years Adjunct Professor in the New York Homeopathic Medical College, and Wm. R. Kerr, Former Health Commissioner, City of Chicago.

Since the remarkable discovery of organic iron, Nuxated Iron or "Fer Nuxate," as the French call it, has taken the country by storm, it is conservatively estimated that over three million people annually are taking it in this country alone. Most astonishing results are reported from its use by both physicians and laymen. So much so that doctors predict that we shall soon have a new age of far more beautiful, rosy-cheeked women and strong iron men.

Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York physician and Medical Author, when interviewed on this subject, said: "There can be no strong iron men without iron. Pallor means anaemia. Anaemia means iron deficiency. The skin of anaemic men and women is pale; the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone; the brain fags and the memory fails and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks.

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked, are responsible for another grave iron loss.

"Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful health and strength to a ripe old age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

"Former Health Commissioner, Wm. R. Kerr, of the City of Chicago, says: "I have taken Nuxated Iron myself and experienced its health-giving strength-building effect and in the interest of the public welfare, I feel it my duty to make known the results of its use. I am well past three score years and want to say that I believe my own great physical activity is largely due today to my personal use of Nuxated Iron. From my own experience with Nuxated Iron, I feel it is such a valuable remedy that it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician in this country."

Dr. E. Sauter, a Boston physician who has studied both in this country and in great European medical institutions, said: "As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders."

"Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of twenty and as full of health, strength, endurance and vitality as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—Nuxated Iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 after taking Nuxated Iron, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

Dr. James Louis Beyea, for 15 years Adjunct Professor in the New York Homeopathic Medical College, says: "As a physician I have always been opposed to prescribing advertised remedies, and for fifteen years, while Adjunct Professor in the New York Homeopathic Medical College, I taught my medical students that such remedies were generally valueless, but in the case of Nuxated Iron severe tests made on myself and numerous patients, have absolutely convinced me that it is a remedy of most extraordinary merit and one which should be generally prescribed by all physicians. Notwithstanding the fact that I am nearing my 80th birthday, a short course of Nuxated Iron has made me feel like a new man. Friends say, 'What have you been doing to yourself, you look so well and full of life?' In my opinion there is nothing like organic iron—Nuxated Iron—to put youthful strength and power into the veins of the weak, run-down, infirm or aged. But beware of the old forms of metallic iron which often do more harm than good. To be absolutely sure that my patients get real organic iron and not some form of the metallic variety, I always prescribe Nuxated Iron in its original packages."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co., Kieffer Drug Co., and all good druggists.—ADVERTISEMENT.

RED LIGHT WILL SIGNAL LIMIT ON NEW THOUGHT TALK

BEGINS NEXT SUNDAY

Leaders, Orators of Cult, to Be Heard in Preliminary Union Meeting Tonight.

Leading orators of the International New Thought Alliance will speak at a union meeting to be held at 8 o'clock tonight at the Musical Arts building, Olive street and Boyle avenue. This meeting is preliminary to the assembling of the third international congress of the organization, which will open an eight days' session next Sunday morning at the Planter's Hotel.

Among the speakers tonight will be Dr. Juila Seton, field secretary-at-large for the Alliance; Harold F. Palmer of Long Beach, Cal., field secretary for the Western States; Dr. H. H. Schraeder of the Church of Practical Christianity, St. Louis; Joseph Perry Green of Portland, Ore. field secretary of the Middle States and Frederick Keeler of New York.

The Congress, for which a large attendance is expected, will hold three sessions each day, with a "healing meeting" at noon. There are to be two speakers at each session, by the Executive Board and chosen by popular vote of the delegates. In order that lesser known speakers may have an opportunity, one session will be known as "new speakers' day."

An ingenious plan to prevent any speaker from exceeding his time allotment has been devised by Robert Bryan Harrison, president of the district souncil of St. Louis. Three electric light bulbs, red, white and blue, will be on the presiding officer's desk. As long as the white light shows an orator will know that he has "a clear track ahead." Five minutes before his time is up the blue light will flash a warning and then the red light will cut off the flow of eloquence.

The organization finds the fact significant that it was created in London at the hour when the heir to the Austrian throne and his wife were assassinated. "Thus with the beginning of the force which was to destroy the old," states a prospectus, "was started another force for the construction of the new."

LOCKJAW GERMS ON 2 OF 13 SAMPLES OF COURTPLASTER

No Ground for Believing Contamination of Articles Bought in Washington D. C., Was Intentional, Statement Says.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Presence of lockjaw germs in two out of 13 samples of court plaster purchased in Washington, D. C., and strong indication of the presence of such germs in a single sample from the Ohio State Department of Health, have been found by the Government's hygienic laboratory.

"There is no ground for believing that the contamination was intentional," the public health service announced today. "Whether contamination occurred during the process of manufacture through the use of infected ingredients or subsequently by careless handling remains to be determined.

"It was also found that court plaster is not clean in the surgical sense.

"Thirty-seven white mice died of inocculation from cultures from the specimens submitted by the Ohio health department."

NEW SYSTEM OF TEACHING TELEGRAPH IN ARMY SCHOOL

A new system of teaching telegraphy, which was evolved by Clarence H. Weiser while in service on the Mexican border, is being employed in the army telegraphers' schools in St. Louis, of which Weiser is in charge. The students are being trained for the Signal Corps of the army.

At the first class, held Friday night at the Eugene Field School, it was stated that in one night's instruction the 25 men enrolled mastered more than one-third of the alphabet. Weiser predicts that in four months he will be able to teach 1000 men what it formerly required two or three years to learn.

The chief factor of then wesystem is that the student is not taught the alphabet by sending the symbols, but by receiving them, thus learning to recognize each letter byits sound rather than by visualizing the dots and dashes which compose it. As a receiving instrument, the army uses a buzzer instead of a device for recording the symbols, so that the operator must depend on his ear instead of his eye.

PLANS FOR GETTING WORD INTO CENTRAL POWERS WORKED OUT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Method of communication with persons in the territories of the central Powers has been worked out by the American Red Cross at the request of the State Department. The International Red Cross at Geneva will be the agency through which channels for personal inquiries will be established.

An official statement points out that correspondence of this nature is possible between the European belligerents under the international agreement allowing civil or military prisoners to forward letters. German civilians are not classed as prisoners in the United States, however, and suspension of the mails to Germany and her allies has cut these off entirely from friends and relatives.

"The Government of the United States," the statement says, "proposes to relieve this unnecessary suffering."

Inquiries should be addressed to the Bureau of Communication, Washington, in English, French, Italian, Russian, German, Polish, Hungarian, Turkish or Greek; must mention only personal matters and can be made regarding the welfare of the same person not oftener than once in six weeks.

Doctor Tells How to Strengthen Eyesight 50 Per Cent in One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weaknesses? If so you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind: could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eye two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent physician to whom the above article was submitted said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." It is sold in this city by Johnson-Enderle-Pauley, Judge & Dolph, Wolff-Wilson and other druggists.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Gray Haired Men and Women Need No Longer Hesitate

Entirely New, Clean, Easy, Harmless Treatment for Restoring Youthful Dark Color to Gray and Faded Hair Called "Canute Water."

All questions a gray-haired person first asks when urged to use "Canute Water for Gray Hair" are here plainly answered.

IS IT ABSOLUTELY SAFE TO USE? By all means—Yes. You may use Canute Water for Gray Hair without the slightest fear of injury to the hair, scalp or eyes, as it contains none of the injurious elements of the ordinary hair dye. Being entirely FREE from acid, sugar of lead, sulphur, or coal tar products of any kind—making it as harmless to the hair and scalp as ordinary water. It is for external use only.

WILL IT SOIL THE HANDS OR SCALP? No it will not. Our own patented process prevents it from staining the hands or scalp. Canute Water for Gray Hair is an especially clean, convenient treatment—not being sticky or greasy. It restores so naturally and evenly no one will be able to tell you are using anything.

IS IT A DYE? Positively not. That is just the thing it isn't. Canute Water is a simple and natural method of reviving the youthful color of hair that has turned gray from age, illness or other causes. Proof that Canute Water is not a dye is that it has no numbered shades—the same bottle is good for all shades of hair. While as the reader knows dyes are numbered 1, 2 or 3.

HOW IS IT APPLIED? Very easily. Just wash your hair with this and allow to dry in good, fresh air. Nothing hard about that, is there? Apply on hair once daily and day by day observe the hair becoming darker and darker. And by the time you have finished the first bottle the youthful color of your hair will be restored. It will then remain that way and simply require a retouching once every week or two as the hair grows.

CAN THE DARKENED COLOR WASH OR RUB OFF? The color will not wash off. Shampoo the hair all you like—you may even use a hot curling iron, as not even that will affect the color. On the contrary, the more you shampoo the hair the softer and fluffier the hair will become. Remember, it will only be necessary to use Canute Water for Gray Hair afterwards once every week or two on the new hair that grows.

NOTE: You are absolutely safe in trying a bottle, as after having been tried and proven successful by hundreds of their customers leading stores are recommending "Canute Water for Gray Hair" to those who wish the color of their hair restored. Believe us after a week you'll thank yourself for having tried it. Sold for $1 at such reliable dealers as Famous & Barr Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Store, Judge & Dolph 4 Drug Stores.—ADVERTISEMENT.

al. I think differently. I think the Constitution invests its Commander in Chief with the la wof war in time of war. The most that can be said—is so much—is that slaves are property. Is there—has there ever been—any question that by law of war, property, both of enemies and friends, may be taken when needed? And is it not needed whenever taking it helps us, or hurts the enemy? Armies, the world over, destroy the enemies' property when they cannot use it; and even destroy their own to keep it from the enemy."

It is also to be observed that the power exercised by the President in time of war is greatly augmented, outside of his functions as Commander in Chief, through legislation of Congress increasing his administrative authority. War demands the highest degree of efficient organization and Congress in the nature of things cannot prescribe many important details as it legislates for the purpose of meeting the exigencies of war. Never is adaptation of legislation to practical ends so urgently required, and hence Congress naturally in very large measure confers upon the President the authority to ascertain and determine various states of fact to which legislative measures are addressed. Further, a wide range of provisions relating to the organization of the army and navy which Congress might enact if to prescribe under the principles governing the delegation of legislative power, and while they are of the utmost importance when properly applied, they are not such as to make the appropriate exercise of legislative power impracticable." The Legislature cannot delegate its power to make a law, but it can make a law to delegate a power to determine some fact or state of things upon which the law makes or intends to make, its own action depend. To deny this would be to stop the wheels of Government. There are many things upon which wise and useful legislation must depend which cannot be known to the law making power, and must, therefore, be a subject of inquiry and determination outside of the halls of legislation." Congress cannot be permitted to abandon to others its proper legislative functions; but in time of war when legislation must be adapted to many situations of the utmost complexity, which must be dealt with effectively and properly, there is special need for flexibility and for every resource of practicability; and of course, whether the limits of permissible delegation are in any case overstepped always remains a judicial question. We thus not only find these great war powers conferred upon the Congress and the President respectively, but also a vast increase of administrative authority through legislative action springing from the necessities of war.

Other Provisions of the Constitution—Taxing Power.

THE question remains: What may be deemed to be the force and effect in time of war of the restrictive provisions contained in the Constitution with respect to the exercise of Federal authority? It is manifest, at once that the great organs of the national government retain and perform their functions as the Constitution prescribes. Senators and Representatives are qualified and chosen as provided in the Constitution and the legislative power vested in Congress must be exercised in the required manner. The President is still the constitutional executive, elected in the manner provided and subject to the restraints imposed upon his office. The judicial power of the United States continues to be vested in one Supreme Court and such inferior courts as Congress has ordained.

Again, apart from the provisions fixing the framework of the government, there are limitations which by reason of their express terms or by necessary implication must be regarded as applicable as well in war as in peace. Thus one of the expressed objects of the power granted to Congress "to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises," is to "provide for the common defense," and it cannot be doubted that taxes laid for this purpose, that is, to support the army and navy and to provide the means for military operations, must be laid subject to the constitutional restrictions. That is, all duties, imposts and excises must be uniform throughout the United States, and direct taxes must be apportioned among the states according to population. And by the sixteenth amendment, providing that income rived, may be laid without apportionriver, may be laid without apportionment among the states, these taxes fall into the great class of excise duties and imposts, and are alike subject to the rule requiring geographical uniformity, a requirement operative in war as well as in peace.

The provisions as to treason are also clearly applicable in war: "Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort;" and "the Congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason, but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood, or forfeiture, except during the life of the person attained."

Fifth and Sixth Amendments.

BUT what shall be said of the efficacy in time of war of the great guarantees of personal and property rights? It would be impossible on this occasion to discuss comprehensively this important subject, or even to refer to all these guarantees, but we may briefly touch upon the question in its relation to the fifth and sixth amendments, viz.: "No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime unless upon a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service in time of war or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall he be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation.

"In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to speedy and public trial by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense."

Clearly these amendments, normally and perfectly adapted to conditions of peace, do not have the same complete and universal application in time of war. Thus the fifth amendment normally gives its protection to "any person." But, in war, this must yield to the undoubted national power to capture and confiscate the property of enemies. This was distinctly ruled by the Supreme Court in Miller vs. U. S. (11 Wall, 268), a proceeding brought under the confiscation acts of 1861 and 1862 to confiscate shares of stock owned by Miller, a Virginian, in a Michigan corporation. The Court said, "If the act of 1861 and the fifth, sixth and seventh sections of the act of July 17, 1862, were municipal regulations only, there would be force to the objection that Congress has disregarded the restrictions of the fifth and sixth amendment of the Constitution * * * If on the contrary they are an exercise of the war powers of the Government, it is clear they are not affected by the restrictions imposed by the fifth and sixth amendments. This we understand to have been conceded in the argument. The question, therefore, is whether the action of Congress was a legitimate exercise of the war power. The Constitution confers upon Congress, expressly, power to declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal and make rules respecting captures on land and water. Upon the exercise of these powers no restrictions are imposed. Of course, the power to declare war involves the power to prosecute it by all means and in any manner in which war may be legitimately prosecuted. It therefore includes the right to seize and confiscate all property of an enemy and to dispose of it at the will of the captor. This is, and always has been, an undoubted belligerent right."

AGAIN, in the place where actual military operations are being conducted, the ordinary rights of citizens must yield to paramount military necessity. This was conceded in Milligan's case (4 Wall, p. 127), where it was said in the prevailing opinion:

"If, in foreign invasion or civil war, the courts are actually closed, and it is impossible to administer criminal justice according to law, then, on the theater of actual military operations, where war really prevails, there is a necessity to furnish a substitute for the civil authority, thus overthrown, to preserve the safety of the army and society; and as no power is left but the military, it is allowed to govern by martial rule until the laws can have their free course."

The different question, however, is presented with respect to the rights of citizens and others not enemies, in places which are outside the actual theater of war. It was upon the question of the power of Congress to provide for the trial of citizens by military commission in such places that the Justices sharply divided in the noted case of Milligan. He was a citizen of India who had been tried by a military commission at Indianapolis on a charge of aiding the enemy and conspiring against the Government, and had been sentenced to be hung. He was not a resident of one of the rebellious states, nor a prisoner of war, and he had not been in the military or naval service. The court was unanimous in the opinion that under the terms of the act of Congress creating the commission it had no jurisdiction. But the majority of the court went further and declared that Congress was without power to provide for the trial of citizens by military commission save in the locality of actual war, and when there was no access to the courts. Maintaining with eloquent emphasis the guarantees of freedom contained in the fifth and sixth amendments, the majority of the court asserted that "martial law cannot arise from a threatened invasion. The necessity must be actual and present; the invasion real, such as effectually closes the courts and deposes the civil administration. * * * Martial rule can never exist where the courts are open and in the proper and unobstructed exercise of their jurisdiction. It is also confined to the locality of the actual war." The minority of four Justices, led by Chief Justice Chase, while agreeing that there was no jurisdiction in Milligan's case under the act of Congress, strongly insisted that Congress in time of war had the power to provide for the punishment of citizens charged with conspiracy against the United States by military tribunals, if it was deemed necessary for the public safety. Deducing this view from the war powers conferred by the Constitution, the Chief Justice said:

"Where peace exists the laws of peace must prevail. What we do maintain is that when the nation is involved in war and some portions of the country are invaded and all are exposed to invasion, it is within the power of Congress to determine to what states or districts such great and imminent public danger exists as justified the authorization of military tribunals for the trial of crimes and offenses against the discipline or security of the ormy or against the public safety. * * * The fact that the Federal courts were open was regarded by Congress as a sufficient reason for not exercising the power; but that fact could not deprive Congress of the right to exercise it. These courts might be open and undisturbed in the execution of their functions and yet wholly incompetent to avoid threatened danger or to punish with adequate promptitude and certainty the guilty conspirators. * * * In times of rebellion and civil war it may often happen, indeed, that Judges and Marshals will be in active sympathy with the rebels and courts their most efficient allies. * * * It was for Congress to determine the question of expediency."

Prof. Willoughby, in a careful review of the Milligan case, regards the doctrine of the majority as essentially sound, that the necessity justifying martial law may not be created by legislative fiat. But he suggests that the majority went too far in the absolute declaration that martial law cannot arise from "a threatened invasion, and that the mere fact that the courts are open, regardless of all other conditions is a conclusive test. "The better doctrine," says Willoughby, "is not for the courts to attempt to determine in advance with respect to any one element what does, what does not, create a necessity for martial law, but as in all other cases of the exercise of official authority, to test the legality of an act by its special circumstances."

Certainly the test should not be a mere physical one, nor should substance be sacrificed to form. The majority recognized "a necessity to furnish a substitute for the civil authority" when overthrown, in order "to preserve the safety of the army and society." If this necessity actually exists it cannot be doubted that the power of the nation is adequate to meet it, but the rights of the citizen may not be impaired by an arbitrary legislative declaration. Outside the actual theater of war, and if, in a true sense, the administration of justice remains unobstructed the rights of the citizens to normal judicial procedure is sure.

Citizens' Right of Property.

FURTHER, with respect to the citizen's right of property, a distinction may be taken between the unavoidable deprivations which take place where the conflict rages and those takings, although for military purposes, which are deliberate appropriations for which compensation must be made. As was said by the Supreme Court in U. S. vs. Russell (13 Wal, p. 263), private property, the Constitution provides, shall not be taken for public use without just compensation. * * * Extraordinary and unforeseen occasions arise, beyond all doubt, in cases of extreme necessity in time of war or of immediate and impending public danger in which private property may be impressed into the public service, or may be seized or appropriated to the public use, or may even be destroyed without the consent of the owner. * * * Where such an extraordinary and unforeseen emergency occurs in the public service in time of war no doubt is entertained that the power of the Government is ample to supply for the moment the public wants in that way to the extent of immediate public exigency, but the public danger must be immediate, imminent and the emergency in the public service must be extreme and imperative and such as will not admit of delay or a resort to any other source of supply. * * * Such a justification may be shown and when the rule is well settled that the officer taking private property for such a purpose, if the emergency is fully proved, is not a trespasser, and that the Government is bound to make full compensation to the owner."

Reasonable Regulations to Insure Success in War.

Distinct from such requisitions from individuals is the necessary regulation of the use of property to secure the successful prosecution of the war. We are witnessing a new phase of the exercise of war powers. But the applicable principle to determine the validity of such action is not new. Even in times of peace we are familiar with the principle of regulation which extends to callings "affected with a public interest." The Supreme Court, after reviewing the decisions, recently said: "They demonstrate that a business, by circumstances and its nature, may rise from private to be a public concern, and be subject, in consequence, to governmental regulation. And they demonstrate * * * that the attempts made to place the right of public regulation in cases where it has been exerted of which we have given examples, upon the ground of special privilege conferred by the public on those affected, cannot be supported. The underlying principle is that business of certain kinds hold such a peculiar relation to the public interest that there is superinduced upon it the right of public regulation.—(German Alliance Insurance Co. vs. Kansas, 233 U. S., p. 411).

THE extraordinary circumstances of war may bring particular business and enterprises clearly into the category of those which are affected with a public interest and which demand immediate and thoroughgoing public regulation. The production and distribution of foodstuffs, articles of prime necessity, those which have direct relation to military efficiency, those which are absolutely required for the support of the people during the stress of conflict, are plainly of this sort. Reasonable regulations to safeguard the resources upon which we depend for military success must be regarded as being within the powers confided to Congress to enable it to prosecute a successful war.

In the words of the Supreme Court:

"It is well settled that the Constitution is not self-destructive. In other words, that the power which it confers on the one hand it does not immediately take away on the other." (Billings vs. United States. 902 (?) U. S. p. 282.) This was said in relation to the taxing power. Having been granted in express terms, the Court held it had not been taken away by the due process clause of the fifth amendment. As the Supreme Court put it in another case: "The Constitution does not conflict with itself by conferring upon the one hand a taxing power and taking the same power away on the other by the limitations of the due process clause." (240 U. S., p. 24.)

Similarly, it may be said that the power has been expressly given to Congress to prosecute war, and to pass all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying that power into execution. That power explicitly conferred and essential to the safety of the nation is not destroyed or impaired by any later provision of the Constitution or by any one of the amendments. These may be construed so as to avoid making the Constitution self-destructive, so as to preserve the rights of the citizen from unwarrantable attack, while assuring beyond all hazard the common defense and the perpetuity of our liberties. These rest upon the preservation of the nation.

Costliness, Simplicity and 'Absence of Military Idea, Feature New Styles

Fashion Modes to Come From New York Rather Than Paris--Hats Will Follow Conservative Lines.

THREE things stand out in the new styles of the fall season. Costliness, simplicity, and the entire absence of the military idea. And they may be mentioned as to their importance in the order here given. A fourth fact also is apparent. Every woman this season may be well and fashionably gowned if she exercises good judgment in the selection of her wardrobe.

Never before have women's garments been so expensive, and this regardless of the most conservative styles seen in this country for many years. The high cost in garments follows the upward trend of everything else, local merchants say. Raw materials are scarce and therefore expensive, and the finished fabric becomes, for that reason, higher in price than the same goods ever has been known in America. This is true of all merchandise used in both men's and women's clothes. The cost of an average wardrobe this fall, is, therefore, from 10 to 50 per cent greater than in the previous seasons.

But the cost is not apparent in the garment, save to the initiated. And here is where the second feature—simplicity—shows strongly and helps to bring the new fashions within the reach of the average woman. While fabrics are more costly, there are degrees of costliness, and many of the richest of them have comparatively inexpensive grades. Models made up in very high priced cloths often are copied in the lower priced goods, thus bringing the finished garment to a much more moderate figure.

Careful Work on Cheaper Designs.

Fortunately for the woman of small means tailors and modistes are putting as careful work into the cheaper copies of the expensive designs as they have put into the original, and this does much to compensate for the increased cost of even the cheaper grades of women's wear.

The woman accustomed to pay $12 for a hat still can get one for that price. If she wants the same hat, however, she must pay from $15 to $17. On the other hand, the conservative styles and neutral colors enable her to do with one hat, where formerly she required three, and she can put the price of three into the single good hat and never attract attention because she is wearing the "same old hat." The same thing is true in all lines of women's outer garments, and is due to the fact that the styles are American.

This is the first season within the memory of local buyers when the prevailing fashions were dictated by the tastes of women in private life, rather than actresses and those whose business it is to attract public attention, and it is because New York, not Paris, gave us the modes. There may be another reason also. Patriotism. American women now do not want to look extravagant, even when they are, and are turning to unobtrusive gowns and hats more and more as the general cry of conservation passes from lip to lip. They may pay $1000 for one gown, but they don't want their neighbors to know it. Extravagance and patriotism are not compatible in war time, they think.

In all the range of women's garments as shown in the best St. Louis shops not a single extreme model is to be found. There are many novelties. If there were none, the women of 1917 and 1918 might just as well wear their last year's clothes. But all tend in the same conservative direction. The new notes are in the way of tying a sash, the use of big buckles at collar and belt, the unique manner of sewing hundreds of buttons on the severe tailored coats and suits, the new way of trimming with fur, the draperies of evening gowns.

New Colors Are Shown.

Also there are a few new colors, and new fabrics, and many new names of old favorites, to lend variety to the season's styles. The revival of old laces, due largely to war conditions, is among the year's features. One is Irish crochet lace, much used for trimming of the more expensive blouses. Irish crochet combined with filet, Bohemian and real Valenciennes laces in the collars and fronts of the newest blouses is a reversion of this fall's models to former times.

Braiding on Georgette, chiffon cloth and net is another novelty of the season. This is used for blouses as well as evening gowns, and is in contrasting colors and self-tones. The worm design is the favorite followed in braiding and gives a very rich appearance to the delicate fabrics that form the foundation for the work. Braiding is used to some extent on a few of the heavier materials, such as taffeta and satin, but is almost never seen on wools, either in frocks or suits.

The separate blouse is, of course, a ncessary part of every wardrobe, because every woman must have at least one tailored suit to be well dressed. For the most part the blouses are of semi-transparent material, worn over elaborate camisoles, and some of the newest models show wide collars and cuffs of a dark, heavy satin on the light and very thin waists. White, flesh, pink in the lighter shades, bisque, lettuce green, amber and the very dark shades in Georgette and chiffon will be most worn. Some of the new blouses show almost half-and-half in the combination of light and dark colors and many of them are handsomely beaded in contrasting colors.

Blouses are nearly double their former price this year. Five dollars is about the least one may be bought for, and the prices range from this up to $75 and $80.

Blouses may contrast with the suit with which they are worn, or they may match it, according to the desires of the wearer, and the greatest variety of colors apparent in any part of a woman's dress this season is seen in the blouses. In fact, the color note of the costume, in most cases, is furnished in the separate blouse. Long sleeves are invariable in the best designs, but the neck may be either high or low, some of the blouses being fashioned for wear either way.

Long Sleeves Popular.

Afternoon frocks and dinner gowns also follow the long-sleeve trend, but are made, chiefly, with open necks, both V and square. They are of chiffons and Georgette crepes, heavily beaded in flower designs in the natural colors, and frequently are draped over a highly contrasting colored underslip of the same material. Straight lines, with the normal waist, wide girdles and a tendency to contract towards the bottom of the skirt, are the distinctive features of the newest models.

In evening gowns net continues to be the favorite material. Soft satin skirts often have net draperies and long "angel" sleeves of the most delicate tulle. Beading, gold and silver embroidery for the colored and white gowns, and jet for the all-black ones are the adornments used. Corsages of vari-colored ribbon flowers form a decoration on some of the high girdles of the evening gowns.

In the evening gowns, as in everything else, this year, dark colors prevail, the most popular ones being taupe, beet root, browns in the wood shades, all the violet tones, crow and ink blues and black. Pink, light blue, corn color and bisque are used in frocks for young girls, but for those past the debutante age sapphire, fuschia red and the deeper rose shades are most liked.

This is to be as much a fur season as the preceding one. Short haired furs for sets are to be most popular, though the long haired varieties are being greatly used as trimmings for the top coats, evening wraps and suits. Hudson Bay sable, mink, kolinski, chinchilla, squirrel, mole and Hudson seal are the furs made into the muffs and collars, while all the fox furs, skunk, lynx, seal, natural muskrat and nutria, or beaver, are used chiefly for trimming.

Designs in fur sets run rather to the quaint. Capes and coatees and a few long stoles are the favorite collar fashions. All are so large that they form a real wrap and can be worn comfortably with comparatively light-weight suits in severe weather. The muffs are, for the most part, small, and are round, canteen shaped and peanut shaped. The canteen is the favorite, while the peanut shape is shown only in the odd kinds of fur.

Fur Coats to Be Worn.

Fur coats are to be more worn than ever. They are from 48 to 50 inches long, and have collar and cuffs of a contrasting fur. Mole, Hudson seal, nutria and natural muskrat are the kinds preferred for the coat proper.

The canteen muff and the trench coat—a long, straight, khaki-colored cloth garment, severely tailored—are the only military features of this fall's styles.

Full length top coats form a very important part of the display of garments in all the large shops. They are in dark shades and of soft though warm fabrics, chiefly Bolivia, both plain and uncut, dovedelaine, glove-skin, and the staple of last year—velour. Their lines are straight. Many show belts, and a few have bloused waists.

Suits follow closely the lines of the topcoats, though they are more elaborate in their styles and have fur used on the pockets, as buttons, and in other odd ways. Chiffon velvets, heavy velveteens and broadcloths are being revived in some of the latest models. The prevailing materials for suits, however, are the same as those used in the topcoats, with kitten's ear, Poiret twills and gabardines in addition. Skirts are two yards round and six to seven inches from the floor. Suit coats are short, medium and knee-length.

The novelty in cloth this season is the silvertone. It may be in any color, but it has an occasional white hair standing up something like the old-fashioned camelshair, and is very popular for suits and topcoats.

Satin Dresses for Street.

The plain tailored suits will be worn most for the fall and early winter, the local merchants say, while the fur-trimmed ones will come into their own about Thanksgiving time.

Important among the street garments for early fall wear are the serge and satin dresses. Despite its scarcity and costliness serge is more in demand for dresses than it ever has been. Every woman must have at least one such frock, say the style dictators, and two or three are not too many for a well stocked wardrobe for this season. The serges come in simple designs of lightweight material and are in navy, ink blue and black. A very few taupes and tete-de-negre browns are seen also. Most of the models brought to St. Louis have decorations in hand embroidery in conventional designs or simple beading, done in the dull shades of red, yellow, brown and blue, and they have both serge and satin sleeves, according to the desire of the wearer.

The satin frocks are extremly good for wear this month and next, and black is the preferred color for them. These dresses, like the serges, are simple in their lines, with long, rather tight sleeves, and may be either high or low at the throat. They frequently are decorated with "dangles," balls of satin or beads, which terminate all points, edge the outer side of the cuffs and take the place of buttons.

All street dresses are from six to eight inches from the ground, the longer length being preferred at present; and most of them are two yards around the bottom, showing the general tendency towards a narrowing of the width of the skirts this season.

Hats to Be Conservative.

Hats follow conservative lines much more than the gowns and suits, if that is possible. Few French models have been brought here this season, and these, as well as the American designs, show comparatively few novelties. Soft, draped crowns, known to the trade as the bag crown, are the newest note, while velvet is the material almost universally used for both hat and trimming. Feather bands, a few wings and other feather ornaments and hand-worked worsted flowers, are the principal trimmings. A little more height, though nothing extreme, is seen in the fall hats. Shapes are both small and large. If large, they are decidedly so, and there are few straight-line sailors. Black, taupe and all the greys seem to be the best colors. Fur is used as trimming on this year's hats, but not to nearly so large an extent as last year. One distinct novelty in the way of trimming is the big velvet bow like the velvet of which the hat is made. This is tied in a variety of ways and sizes, and is used both in the back and the front of the hat. The original design is a Georgette model, one of the few French hats brought to St. Louis this fall.

As to shoes, gloves and smaller accessories, there is little to add to the news of last season, except in the matter of price, and that has climbed to an amazing altitude. Shoes for street wear are high and laced, though there are a few good styles in the buttoned boot. They are in dark colors and black, and have both cloth and buckskin tops. Styles in pumps are very little changed in the last six months.

Neckwear modes are matters of the moment, and little novelties are being shown that will have a short-lived popularity, but a great one while they last.

Sweaters Still Popular.

There is no doubt that all outdoor sports will be as popular this winter as they have been in the last two or three years, and the fashions are following this popularity. The new golf and tennis suits are marvels of comfort and smartness. English heathers and the soft Jersey wools and knit velours are being shown in sport coats and skirts, the colors being golden brown, green, Oxford, stone blue and carrot yellow. Suede leather is a popular material for top coats for motorists.

Riding promises to be more popular than usual this fall and some of the shops are specializing in riding clothes, made of English coverts, Scotch tweeds, cheviots and homespuns. The coats of these habits are long, straight and close-fitting, and the breeches are reinforced at the knees with suede leather instead of the usual "patch" of cloth. Riding boots are ruling puttees altogether out of the running for the present season, and the round, soft velour hat has taken the place of the stiff riding hat formerly preferred.

Sweaters of every kind and color continue to be popular, despite the cry that the Red Cross and the Navy League are making for a conservation of wool to provide for the wants of the soldiers and sailors. All the smart shops are showing sweaters of the most expensive type, ranging in price from $15 to $65, and suitable for every kind of sport wear. A prediction that needing the wool for the fighting men of this country and its allies will bring a preference for silk and fiber sweaters is being made by local merchants, but at present the wool sweater is the one most wanted by St. Louis women.

PLANS TO LEND $150,000,000 TO MEXICO ARE WORKED OUT

Details Said to Provide Ample Security and Include Refunding of National Debt.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—With the return here today of Dr. Alfred Caturegli, financial agent for the Mexican Government in the United States and T. W. Osterheld, representing Iselin & Co., bankers for the Mexican Government, from Mexico City, it was learned that preliminary negotiations looking to a loan of 300,000,000 pesos, or approximately $150,000,000 to Mexico by New York bankers are nearing consummation.

Dr. Caturegli said that he was not authorized to discuss the matter at this time other than to say that prospects for the loan looked favorable.

It is understood, however, that the plans whereby the loan may be secured and the money so placed that the financial system of Mexico can be rapidly habilitated have been worked out. These details are said to provide ample security for the loan and are understood to include a refunding of the national debt, a reduction of the capital of the Mexican national railways and a mobilization of the oil industry. It also is planned, to place in the hands of Mexican banks sufficient sums to enable them to care for the floating currency of the country and to establish exchange relations with foreign banks.

Mexico now is coining twenty million pesos in gold.

ARABELLA'S DEVICES.

WHEN HOOVER HEARS OF ARABELLA

Will take her little manual down and do some wartime cooking.
She's learned to make a peanut steak that's never tough or bony,
And she can bake a dandy cake with powdered macaroni.
Protein, she says, is all you need, no matter where you find it,
And you may live on chicken feed, if small enough you grind it.
A little sawdust in the flour is very economic,
Though one who did not know its power might think the notion comic,
For wartime need, she'll tell you, calls for many little savings;
Why gormandize on codfish balls when one can dine on shavings?
She dries potatoes in the sun until they're dessicated,
And then she cans them everyone for winter use belated.
Miss Brown will show you by the book that they should be delicious.
With carrots and some turnip seed and hominy to thicken
She finds that she'll have all she'll need to counterfeit a chicken.
O, yes, Miss Arabella Brown, when sure there's no one looking,
Will take her little manual down and do some wartime cooking;

TAKE KEER O' YOURSELF.

Good by, boys,
Watch your step,
You're young and strong
And full of "pep,"
And you're going away
To a strange far place
Where you'll need all your store
Of saving grace,
But buck up straight
And be a man
And do the very best you can
To show the world
That a Yank recruit
Can live as straight
As he can shoot.
You're not out
For a stroll in the park
Are expecting YOU
To stay on the job
And be true blue,
And stick to the task
That you've begun
Till Kaiser Bill
Gives up his gun.
You'll make him do it,
We know you will;
You've got the nerve
And you'll get the skill.
There's work to do,
And plenty of that,
And you may get dents
In your hardware hat,
But keep right on
And watch your step,
And don't go squandering your "pep"
On anything else but the glorious fight
Night"
And when you come back
From the foreign land
We'll meet you
With a big brass band,
And we'll make a racket
With drum and fife
And give you the time

FROM HERE AND THERE.

Tobolsk, Siberia (by dog-sled)—Nicholas Romanoff, who formerly was a coal baron, or something equally powerful in Petrograd has leased a second-story flat here for the winter. He seems greatly pleased with his new quarters and shortly after moving in he was heard to say: "Pretty soft. The fellow downstairs will have to shovel the snow off the sidewalk." Mr. Romanoff has not yet had a tilt with the janitor of his flat. When he does he will discover what a real Czar is.

Elsah, Ill., Sept. 7, (by crickety) This principality has decided to reject all war proposals and vigorously prosecute the peace which it has been waging with Alton and other neighboring powers. It steadfastly refuses to substitute shrapnel shells for big red apples and clings to its original purpose to make the world safe for horticulture.

Plauen, Germany, (by submarine) The Kaiser passed through here going south yesterday. He was moving so fast it was impossible to learn how much he was going south with. Correspondents wore out their paper-soled shoes trying to catch up with him. On his arrival here the Kaiser was blindfolded. As he was driven through the city he was heard to remark: "I can see no signs of suffering among my people."

Crocker Land (by glacier) Donald MacMillan didn't tell us anything we didn't know when he said this land of ours was a mirage. What do we care. Nobody here has to work. Everyone is well-fed and contented. There are no family quarrels. War is unknown. There are no gas bombs, submarines or bomb raids on civilians. Where else could such conditions prevail except in a land of mirage. We are proud of ourselves, even if we don't exist.

Few Drops When Corns Hurt, Pain Stops! Corns Lift Out

No humbug! Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out, without any pain.

Ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.

Freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels them without any irritation.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards.

LIBRARIANS TELL OF SOCIAL CENTER WORK PROBLEMS

CLUBS RUN TRUE TO TYPE

Chaperon With Sick Baby Not Willing to Stay Over-Time for Fee of 50 Cents.

Some of the problems of social center work, conducted by the librarians of branch libraries, are described in a book, "Where Neighbors Meet," which has been issued as an official publication of the St. Louis Public Library. Margery Quigley, librarian of the Divoll branch, is the author.

Writing of the requirement for chaperons at dancing parties, she says:

"One branch librarian was considered very heartless when she insisted at 8:30, that the dancers, aged 15 to 17, should get a chaperon by 9 o'clock. When later, after closing the reading room, the branch librarian stopped to make her acquaintance and have a friendly chat, she was rather startled to have the decidedly untidy chaperon say, 'How much longer do you think I need to stay? Even if they did pay me 50 cents to stop in for a little while, I simply got to get this sick baby of mine to the dispensary before it closes. I can't let her get any worse for the sake of perfect strangers and 50 cents.'

"After one or two such experiences as this, and after finding banana skins locked in the piano, the branch librarian now requires that the chaperon be a woman in possession of all her faculties, 'on the job' and known personally to her."

The librarian of the Barr Banch is quoted as saying:

Destroy Nothing but Chairs.

"The social clubs are interesting, and all run pretty true to type. They are all noisy and all distribute pink powder over the building, but they are worth commending. They never destroy library property, they never disturb anything except chairs, and they invariably offer refreshments to the staff. Here are some of the names: Meliora Sequana, St. Elmo's, You Don't Know Girls, Phantoms, Daffydills, Wildflowers, Mohawks, Clari Pueri."

One club, it is related, was known as the Arnfinns. The branch librarian asked the president of the club what the name meant, and he said it meant White Eagles. She was unable to find the word in dictionaries, but learned, after further questioning, that the youth was right, and that the word apeared in Charlotte Mary Yonge's "History of Christian Names," a reference work at the library.

Clubs Sometimes Instructive.

"We librarians,' the writer comments, "say that dancing clubs do not bring reference use of the library, but the secret history of clubs like the Arnfinns shows us that we never can tell."

One branch librarian, the wiretr says, "worried for weeks' over a sign which she read from a car window:

"Come and dance the Shimmie Sha Wa Wa, at the second grand informal dance of the Moguls, at Fairgrounds Hall."

The Moguls, it is explained, "were a club of mild young people who had danced, very strictly chaperoned, each week in the auditorium of the branch library, until their officers learned that considerable sums could be made through excursions and pay dances, and so sought broader fields. By the time club members have reached the dancing age, they have been enveloped by influences which librarians cannot counteract."

In a discussion of the serving of refreshments at meetings of different kinds, the writer says:

Effect of No-Beer Rule.

"One of the rules upon which we have to insist is that no beer is to be served at meetings. It makes too many problems for the branch librarian to handle. It is also the real reason why many men's organizations which were so enthusiastic about having branches built in their particular neighborhoods, never hold more than one or two perfunctory meetings, but go to the local Turn Hall instead. 'We like a place where we can just tell Gus at the beginning of the meeting to bring up a little refreshment to us, and he'll have it all ready in no time.'"

Some of the requirements made of library janitors are thus described:

"At Crunden, the colored janitor is expected to offer prayer each week at the Italian Sunday School, and at Divoll, the boys who give dances pay him to act as 'bouncer,' since no well-ordered dance is complete without one."

The book tells at length of the use made of library auditoriums for the meetings of women's clubs, of juvenile and workingmen's organizations, and of the foreign-born. "Fraternalism, not paternalism,' is declared to be the principle on which these gatherings are handled.

OREGON DEER SEASON CLOSED

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 8.—To prevent soldiers from being mistaken for deer, and to reduce the risk of forest fires, Gov. Withycombe issued a proclamation closing the deer season from Sept. 1 for an indefinite period.

"The woods are full of soldiers, wearing olive-drab uniforms, about the same shade as a deer," explained Gov. Withycombe, "and a hunter might make a mistake and shoot. Then, again, hunters may cause fires, and the woods are now dry as tinder."

Visitation Parish Festival, Oct. 12.

The annual festival of the Visitation Catholic Parish will be held Oct. 12 and 13, on the open space beside the church, at Taylor and Evans avenues, where the new parish school is to stand. This festival is to raise the nucleus of a fund for the school building.

Drops 321 Feet.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 8.—A woman, supposed to be Mrs. Anna Sweeten, 25, of Del Rio, Tex., alighted from a passenger train near the end of the Pecos River bridge, told some men she was looking for her father, then started to walk across the bridge. Midway across she was seen to climb the rail and drop to the river below, a distance of 321 feet.

CARELESS USE OF SOAP SPOILS THE HAIR

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—ADV.

PROCLAMATION TOMORROW ON POLISH CONSTITUTION

Michaelis and Czernin Agreed on Provisional Government, Says Berlin Vossiche-Zeitung.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 8.—A proclamation will be issued probably on Monday next by the German and Austrian Emperors embodying the agreement regarding the Polish Constitution reached by Chancellor Michaelis and Count Czernin, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, according to the Berlin Vossische Zeitung.

At first, the forecast of the proclamation states, there will be a provisional Government comprising a regency and a council of three members which will select a minister-president. Later the formation of a Cabinet will be proposed and if this is constituted orders will be issued for the election of a Reichstag.

PERSHING'S MEN APT PUPILS IN TRENCH WARFARE

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 7.—With the departure of the famous Alpine chasseurs for the trenches another division of French line infantry is due at the American camp to continue training Gen. Pershing's contingent. While they have made rapid progress the Americans are not yet post-graduates in trench warfare. Gen. Pershing will take no chances with his men, who are to be the flower of the American army, when they hit the German line.

At the farewell to the chasseurs, for whom the American entertained a real affection, there were impressive scenes in all the villages where the men have been living side by side.

The Blues paraded with bands playing and flags flying. At a fanfare of trumpets the whole division presented arms, a farewell honor to the American army drawn up opposite. The Americans in their turn presented arms.

When the ranks were broken the individual leave takings, which were many, were affecting.

"Tell the Germans we are right behind you," was the burden of the Yankee farewell.

One soldier hailing from New England insisted on a French comrade taking with him an American Springfield rifle with a stock of cartridges, saying: "Just drop this card on Fritz for me, marked U. S. A., and tell him there's a lot more where that came from."

Americans Treasure Gifts.

Many Americans are treasuring dark blue tam o'shanters, the gift of their poilu comrades.

In two months the chasseurs have taught the Americans the first points of trench warfare. They agree that they never had better or more apt pupils. The French troops declared their greatest ambition is to be at the side of Americans in battle.

The troops of the two nations not only worked, but lived together in the same villages and in the same billets. In this intimate daily contact the Yankees learned many things of value, notwithstanding the handicap of language. The difficulty of tongue, however, gradually diminished as the Americans acquired French and the poilus English. This accommodation, eked out with signs, made progress rapid. The mutual understanding long ago reached the stage of story swapping.

The Americans hope when they get into the trenches, to find themselves besides the "blue devils, who marched away with the admiration and best wishes of every American

The people at home will soon have the privilege of seeing movies of the boys in France throwing bombs and liquid fire, going into the gas chamber and learning many other advanced branches of modern warfare.

The photographer has just sent to America an extensive set of the official war pictures. The views include the recent review of the Americans by Gen. Petain. Tomorrow a photographer of wide reputation in the United States, is leaving on a tour of the whole line of communications behind the American front, including supply lines, aviation grounds and various bases which have been described recently in this correspondence.

Pictures to Be Shown in U. S.

The pictures he takes should reach the United States in about three weeks. They will be shown all over the country, so that Americans at home will be able to see their own aviators flying and how the boys are housed, clothed and fed.

With the advent of the British, the American troops are now taking five-mile cross country runs, and arrangements are being made for football games, tugs of war and daily boxing, strong rivalry having developed among companies, battalions and regiments. This is all part of the program adopted by the British. Its chief exponent is a British Major who has arrived in camp to teach physical training as it is practiced in the British army, and to give the finishing touches to the training of the new officers, as they arrive from the training camps in the United States.

"We make the physical training a sporting proposition and promote rivalty among the organizations," the Major explained.

The American officers showed him the game of football as it is played in the United States, and they won an enthusiastic convert. It is now planned to make the most of the fine, brisk football weather which in France, comes earlier than in the United States. The athletic training is to work the Americans down to the pink of fighting condition.

The same Major is an expert teacher of the bayonet. In the course of instructions he uses regular trenches equipped with the mechanical dummies. The British officer has been putting the men over the bumps and already the course is well started. American officers are in the school digging trenches and doing bayonet work just as the enlisted men. The Major has delivered one lecture, which will be repeated to another group next week.

"ENGLISH GIRLS NOT AS PRETTY AS OURS"

E. L. Mott of St. Louis Tells of Reception of American Engineers in London.

Extracts from letters written from England by Edwin L. Mott of Company E, Twelfth U. S. Engineers, now in France, were furnished to the Post-Dispatch by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Mott of 5551A Etzel avenue.

In the first letter, written soon after his arrival in England, Mott described the English towns and countryside, and said: "The girls over here have rosy cheeks, but are not as good looking as our girls.

"You don't see any men here that are not in uniforms, except the boys and old men; you also see men that have been to the front and are in care of the hospital; they wear a blue uniform. The Tommies wear a uniform of the same color as ours, but much better material and neater looking. The English officers are regular sports. They all carry canes and the small boys imitate them by carrying canes, too. Some of our men are doing the same.

"The food here is fine. The bread is made of cornmeal and flour, it is heavy, but tastes good. It was great to get some of real food after the stuff we had on the ship. We are sleeping in Sibley tents, eight men to the tent. They are round and just large enough for eight and no more. We didn't get to bed last night until 12:30, or rather, 11:30, as we set our watches an hour ahead on account of the daylight saving plan. We are just now seven hours ahead of St. Louis time. We are getting up when you are going to bed. The floor of the tent is covered with boards and makes pretty hard sleeping. The American Y. M. C. A. have these large tents here; one is the refreshment tent, fitted with tables, another with chairs and a piano, the other as a reading and writing room; they are all decorated with flowers and flags. The British army has a canteen here, too. Things are certainly high, soda water 4½ pence, or 9 cents a bottle; cigarettes, 12 pence, or 24 cents a package. They said all luxuries were very heavily taxed. Most of the men are thinking of quitting tobacco. I only smoke about three times a day, thinking it would make me feel better.

"I saw only a few automobiles and one Ford. We see lots of aeroplanes. I just came in from watching them. The sky at night is all lighted up with searchlights looking for war planes and dirigibles.

Our breakfast this morning consisted of friend ham, bread and tea. They don't butcher their hogs the same as we do, that is, they leave the hams and shoulders on the sides, and they don't cure it like we do. They raise lots of sheep. We saw any number of them as we were coming through on the train. One of the boys said it made him sick to look at them, as it reminded him of the mutton on board the ship. We also saw lots of cattle—had beef stew last night. They drew rations this morning for 11,000 U. S. soldiers, all engineers.

Letter was censored here; seemed to refer to coming over of another expedition that had some trouble, as the letter goes on to say—"but they arrived safe and have been here about three weeks. We didn't have any such excitement, I am glad to say."

In another letter, telling of the engineers' parade in London, before the King and Queen, Mott wrote:

"We marched to London and were reviewed by the King and Queen. This was going some, as we were only drilled a month at Camp Gaillard (St. Louis). I got a good look at them. We saw the Houses of Parliament, Trafalgar Square, Piccadilly, etc. The people were as thick as they are on Veiled Prophet night; it was wonderful. We got such greetings as 'Hello, Sammy,' 'Hurrah for the Americans,' 'Hurrah for Old Glory.' The people went wild over us. There was as many American flags as British.

"We had to march six miles to the train at 4:30 this a. m. in the rain. Our total march was about 12 miles. When we got off the train we marched to where they have the Scotch guards quartered and had a feed of ham and eggs. Gee, but it was good. After marching through the city and around the home of the American Ambassador and Buckingham Palace, we went to a park called Green Square and there had another lunch of pork pie, ginger beer, a cooky and a piece of chocolate candy. They certainly treated us royally. The street cars here are all double-deckers and run on a third rail, no trolley. Girl conductors are on all the street cars here, also girls run ambulances and motor trucks. We saw lots of wounded soldiers. The nurses are all good-looking, and if I get hurt I don't think it would be at all bad to have them nurse me.

"When we were marching at attention we were thinking about what we were doing, and the people cried to us, 'Don't look so serious; cheer up.' When they allowed us to fall into route step we were able to shout back and wave at them.

"They took moving pictures of us as we passed the King. Watch the movies for it.

"Our Captain told us we were the first foreign regiment to march through London since 1066, almost nine centuries ago. Our regiment headed the column. There was (censored) in the parade an English band and Scottish Highlanders with their bagpipes led us about. Everybody was tired, but glad they were there.

"One of the men just said the evening paper gave us a good write-up, saying we looked like we meant business, dressed plain and not like ornaments. Milton and I took a long hike around the barracks. Two Tommies piloted us around. We tried to buy some cakes at a restaurant to take with us, but were told we would have to eat them there or not get any."

GERMAN FARMERS OPPOSE STATE CONTROL OF POTATOES

Urbanites on Contrary Insist Government Continue to Seize the Entire Supply.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 8.—German farmers are proclaiming an abandonment of compulsory administration of the potato crop and of maximum prices and the return to the system of commercial supply and demand as a sole panacea to insure the necessary supply for human consumption. Urbanites on the contrary maintained that unless the Government persists in its determination to seize all potatoes the profitable pig and steer will get most of them, as in no year during the war has there been such an incentive to use potatoes for fodder as in this year of the very unfavorable fodder harvest, and humans would get potatoes only at prices impossible for the poor. Vorwaerts demands an immediate increase in the potato ration to 10 pounds weekly at a reduction in the price and declares that it is impossible to work and sustain life on the proposed ration of 5½ pounds of potatoes, 1950 grams of bread, 250 grams of meat and 80 grams of fat. Vorwaerts points out that this year the scanty harvest of oats and barley will not permit of a supplementary ration of oatmeal and grits by which alone the people tided over last spring.

MORE SOLDIERS IN ENGLISH CLASSES THAN IN FRENCH

Foreigners in Army Accept Opportunity to Learn Their Adopted Language.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Sept. 8.—Classes in elementary English are more popular with the soldiers at Camp Funston than are French classes. This is the report of Prof. M. C. Elmer and Prof. H. G. Ingham, who are in charge of the extension work of the University of Kansas and who have started French and English classes among the troops.

All soldiers in the camp are given an opportunity to enroll in classes and so far the University has been able to furnish enough instructors in co-operation with the Y. M. C. A. to care for all who care to study. Soldiers of French birth are volunteering to teach French.

The soldiers interested in English classes are those of foreign birth and those American-born persons who have had little opportunity to get an education. They welcome the opportunity to learn English while in the army. In French classes more than 250 soldiers are enrolled.

The University of Kansas will extend its services to the men in the national army who will mobilize at Camp Funston. Instructors from the university will visit the classes once or twice a week to help camp instructors.

"BOOMERANG" TO OPEN SEASON AT JEFFERSON

Belasco's Successful Comedy Production Will Come Here Sept. 23.

"The Boomerang," David Belasco's ultra-successful production of a comedy by Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes, will open the new season at the Jefferson Theater two weeks from tonight.

"The Boomerang" is Belasco's most remunerative play since "The Music Master." Its great vogue, all season before last and all last season in Chicago, has proven chiefly Belasco's skill as a producer, for no one has ever contended that "The Boomerang" was in any sense a great play. It is light to the point of fragility and has its scene in a physician's office where a nurse, employed to help cure a lovesick patient, infects the physician with the love germ.

"Pollyanna" and "Fair and Warmer," which have been seen here, are billed at the Jefferson for the weeks of Spt. 30 and Oct. 7, and on Monday night, Oct. 15, David Warfield will revive "The Music Master" here. Other attractions to follow are "Turn to the Right," one of the three most successful plays of the last New York season; "Pals First," "Our Betters," a daring society satire; "The Garden of Allah," "So Long, Letty," "The Willow Tree," a Japanese fantasy; Miss Springtime," a very successful musical play; "Twin Beds," a hardy annual; "Potash and Perlmutter in Society," "Have a Heart," "Ben Hur" and Otis Skinner in "Mister Antonio," an Italian organ-grinder's romance.

Brian to Try Acting.

Donald Brian, who looks, sings and dances very well, as those know who have seen him with Joseph Cawthorne and Julia Sanderson in musical comedies, will try to show, at the Orpheum Theater tomorrow, that he can also act. He is to appear in a dramatic sketch, "Somewhere in Mexico," which does not require him to sing or dance. Brian was seen here last spring with Cawthorne and Wilda Bennett, in "Sybil." He has musical comedy plans for this season, and considers his presence in vaudeville only temporary.

Other acts at the Orpheum this week will be the Alexander Kids, in songs and costume changes; Willie Weston in character songs; Margaret Young, in descriptive singing, McMahon, Diamond & Chaplow in "The Rag Doll;" a clown seal, some musical performers and four equilibrists.

The fairy tale film, "Jack and the Beanstalk," will remain at the Shubert-Garrick this week. Next Sunday William Collier will open the legitimate drama season in James Montgomery's comedy, "Nothing But the Truth," in which he played for more than nine months at the Longacre Theater, New York.

Local Film at Columbia.

The Columbia Theater will show tomorrow the American Girl Revue, a musical act; William A. Hanlon in "A Railroad Hotel," and the St. Louis photo-play, "A Film Melody of the Red Cross," by W. V. Brumby; filmed by Wooster Lambert, with Lottie Forbes as leading woman. Six other acts are on the bill.

The Black and White Review will head the bill at the Grand. Lew Welch and company will present "The Prodigal Father," and Carl Rossini will entertain with magic and illusions. There are six other acts, besides film features.

"The Little Girl God Forgot," at the American today, is described reassuringly as "not a white slave play," though it has underlife scenes. The heroine, a shopgirl, in order to attend a party, "borrows" a dress which belongs to a customer. For this innocent act she suffers a lot, but in the end marries a handsome young miner from the Klondike. "The play is a sermon," declares the advance agent.

Help! More Burlesque.

It has not been supposed that there was any overwhelming public demand for another burlesque theater in St. Louis. But this is a free country, and hope springs eternal in the managerial breast. Also, fixed rentals on long leases must be paid. So the Imperial Theater is announced to open next Sunday with a burlesque, musical comedy and moving picture bill.

The "Hip-Hip-Hurrah Girls," at the Gayety Theater today, is announced as being the same company which played a long engagement last summer at the Columbia, a leading New York burlesque house. Diving contests, open to the public, are announced for Thursday night and Friday matinee and night, the first being for men and the others for women.

At the Standard, "Jolly Girls" will be the burlesque attraction.

Bondholders' Committee Member Charged With Dereliction of Duty.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Suit was filed in the Federal Court here yesterday by the Commonwealth Trust Co. against John J. Cummings, head of a street car appliance plant at Plano, Ill., charging him with dereliction of duty as member of the Bondholders' Committee of the Alton, Jacksonville & Peoria Railway, and asking an accounting of approximately $500,000. The suit is brought in behalf of the other members of the Bondholders' Committee, W. C. Fordyce, George L. Edwards, J. C. Van Riper of St. Louis and C. A. Caldwell of Alton.

Cummings was head of the Bondholders' Committee when the railway was thrown into bankruptcy three years ago. Later he resigned from the committee, and then, it is charged, instead of carrying out a contract made with the other members to get sufficient capital to rehabilitate the road, he, with the American Trust Co. of St. Louis, obtained control of the railway.

SUPERINTENDENTS OF PARKS MEET TUEDAY

The American Association of Park Superintendents will hold its nineteenth annual convention in St. Louis, Planters Hotel, for three days, beginning Tuesday.

The association is composed of men who have under their direct charge the large municipal, state and national parks throughout the country. It is expected that there will be more than 200 park superintendents in attendance, from every large city in the United States.

Park Commissioner Cunliff will stage for the visitors the play recently given by the pupils of the vacation playgrounds—"Rip Van Winkle"—at the Municipal Open-Air Theater, in Forest Park, thus giving the park men a full opportunity of visualizing the influence of community play upon urban life.

The visitors are particularly anxious to study the park system of St. Louis, especially the recreation features, in which St. Louis excells. Arrangements have been perfected which will nable the delegates to visit every park, playgrounds and recreation center. The delegates will be accompanied on the tours of inspection by Commissioner Cunliff.

A number of papers will be read before the convention, among which will be: "Street Shade Trees," by Dr. Lauri D. Cox, Syracuse, N. Y. Dr. George Moore of the Missouri Botanical Garden and Commissioner Cunliff will also address the convention.

ARMY TRUCKS RUN 438 MILES

Trip From Fort Sam Houston to Fort Sill Without Accident.

FORT SAM HOUSTON, Tex., Sept. 8.—An army motor truck train consisting of 30 vehicles left here several days ago and made the trip without accident to Fort Sill, Ok. The distance was 438 miles.

It is stated that no effort was made to establish a record on this trip and that it was taken simply as a matter of convenience. The roads, for the most part, were in good shape and the men and trucks stood the trip splendidly. It is becoming a common practice in the Southern Department for army motor truck trains to travel from one camp or post to another at distances ranging from 100 to 300 miles.

"I'll Show You How Corns Peel Off!"

Ever Peel a Banana Skin? That's It!

"I should worry about those corns—I just put some 'Gets-It' on." Corns used to pester the world into a frenzy, enduring pain, digging, slicing toes, tinkering with plasters and tape, trying to fix a corn so it wouldn't hurt. But now no one in the world "should worry," because the moment you put "Gets-It" on, it means the end of a corn. There is nothing in the world like "Gets-It"—nothing as sure and certain—nothing that you can count on to take off a corn or callus every time, and without danger. The corn never grew what "Gets-It" will not get. It never irritates the flesh, never makes your toe sore. Just two drops of "Gets-It" and presto! the corn-pain vanishes. Shortly you can peel the corn right off with your finger, and there you are—corn-free and happy with the toe as smooth and corn-free as your palm. Never happened before, did it? Guess not.

Get a bottle of "Gets-It" today from any drug store, you need pay no more than 25c, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

SAFEGUARDS HEALTH OF THE CHILDREN

Constipation, or inaction of the bowels, is a great menace to health. Cathartic or purgative remedies should never be given to children, as the violence of their action tends to upset the entire digestive system. A mild laxative is far preferable, and the combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and sold in drug stores for fifty cents a bottle, is highly recommended. This preparation contains no opiate, narcotic, or habit-forming drug of any description, and is mild and gentle in its action. Its pleasant taste appeals to children and they take it readily.

Thousands of mothers have testified to the merit of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in countless homes it is the standard family remedy. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 456 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

Charge Against Aviator Dropped.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 8.—On a train leaving here today was Fayette M. Deeds, 18 years old, a brilliant British flight Lieutenant, who was arrested here for an offense committed two years ago. The Cedar Rapids (Io.) bank, on which he had drawn a worthless check, refused to prosecute. The young man will go to Camp Borden, Canada, where he has been assigned to teach American aviators.

TRANSPORT BOARD APPOINTED

Will Work Out Plan to Get Troops to France in Safety.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—A joint board of army and navy officers heoded by Capt. William R. Shoemaker, U. S. N., has been appointed to work out a system to be employed in getting American troops transported across the Atlantic in safety. Submarines have made an entirely new system of convoy necessary.

Presumably the board will incorporate into new regulations all that has been learned by the French and British navies as to the best way of protecting troop ships.

A Drunkard's Plea. Tells How He Was Released From the Bondage of Alcoholic Slavery

Leading Druggists Guarantee Results.

My heart bleeds for every drunkard, and I sincerely wish I could meet them face to face and tell them how I was saved from the clutches of the demon drink. If this were possible thousands could be saved from drunkards' graves. Yes, my appetite for drink was completely destroyed. Here is the prescription that saved me: One prepared Tescum powder twice a day in coffee, tea or any liquid. Almost everything had been tried on me without results, so don't experiment with anything but Tescum powders, then you will not be disappointed. Since the powder is colorless, odorless and tasteless it can be given secretly. It is intended to destroy the terrible craving. The results are so startling that druggists are refunding the money if it fails. (See money refund guarantee, which druggists are authorized to give when above prescription is filled.) There is absolutely no risk on your part, so you have everything to gain and nothing to lose. Mothers and sisters are now able to cure their loved ones of this terrible habit with no expense if it fails. If druggists were not confident of success they could not afford to make such an offer. Have the prescription filled today, before you forget it.

One woman who used this prescription on her husband says: "It is going on the fourth week since he has touched a drop of anything in the form of liquor or used tobacco of any kind. He seems already like a different man. Tescum has gained a wonderful enthusiast in me. I regard it as a Godsend. Just think, I have never seen my husband sober for more than 48 hours in years, and now it is going on one month since he had his last drink."

Another one gratefully writes: "I have used Tescum powders on my husband and find it one of the greatest cures in this world. He hasn't taken a drink for almost five weeks, and says he never will. My home does not seem like the same place and life seems worth living. I hope thousands gain what I have. This has been a good new year for me without drink in my home."

NOTE—A leading druggist, when shown the above article, said: "Yes, Tescum is a very remarkable remedy for the drink habit. It is harmless, wonderfully effective and is having an enormous sale. I advise everyone who wishes to destroy the liquor habit to give it a trial." You take no risk with Tescum, as it is sold in this city under a steel-bound money-refund guarantee by Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and other first-class druggists. They guarantee it to do the work or refund the money.—ADVERTISEMENT.

TRAINING CORPS AT MISSOURI U.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 8.—President Wilson has established at the University of Missouri an infantry unit of the senior division of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, according to an announcement of the War Department. Upon completion of the advanced work at the university, students will be eligible for appointment in the Officers' Reserve Corps and as temporary Second Lieutenants in the regular army. The men will be furnished uniforms by the Government in addition to equipment already provided. Officers of the corps will get an allowance of $9 a month.

The establishment of the Training Corps here was made possible by the recent appointment of Capt. W. M. Craigie of the regular army as professor of military science and tactics.

WHEN YOUR COLOR FADES

When a girl's color fades, when her cheeks and lips grow pale and she gets short of breath easily and her heart palpitates after slight exertion or under the least excitement it means that she is suffering from thin blood.

The remedy, of course, is to build up the blood and for this purpose Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are recommended. They are the remedy best suited to restore the blood, bring brightness to the eyes and put color in the cheeks and lips.

The only other treatment needed costs nothing. It is this. Give the patient plenty of sunlight, moderate exercise every day, not enough to cause fatigue, and use care in the diet because the food craved is often not the best for the condition.

Two books, "Building Up the Blood" and "What to Eat and How to Eat," give just the information that every mother of a growing girl needs. They are free. Write for them today to The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. Your own druggist sells Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or they will be mailed postpaid on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50.—ADV.

STATE UNIVERSITY TO HELP TRAIN MEN AS ARMY OFFICERS

1000 TO TAKE COURSE

Those Showing Special Ability Will Get Final Lessons in Camps.

With the appointment of Capt. Wallace Craigie of the United States Army as professor of military science and tactics at the University of Missouri, plans are under way for the Missouri institution to do its full share in military training under the provisions of the national defense act of June 3, 1916, which virtually empowers the President to utilize the universities and colleges of the country as a vast training school for the Officers' Reserve Corps.

Capt. Craigie, who has been stationed in St. Louis this summer as assistant to Maj. George W. Goode, in charge of the army recruiting office at Third and Olive streets, yesterday explained to a Post-Dispatch reporter some of the provisions of the new law for military training in the schools for higher education. As a result of this law and of the nation being at war, it is expected that the proportion of young men students enrolling this fall for military training will be much greater than ever before, and it is certain that the nature of the training will be much more thorough, as it may lead directly into the commissioned branch of the army.

1000 Students Expected.

Fully 1000 young men are expected to enroll for the course at Missouri University, Capt. Craigie has been informed by Dr. A. Ross Hill, president of the university. School will open at the university Sept. 17, and Capt. Craigie expects to go to Columbia within the next few days to begin the organization of the course of instruction.

Capt. Craigie pointed out that the national defense act authorized the President to establish at all large colleges and universities a senior division of the Officers' Reserve Corps where a full course of instruction is to be given by a regular army officer with not less than five years' experience in the commissioned grade. President Wilson recently designated the University of Missouri as one of the schools for the Officers' Reserve Corps.

Training to Be Less Intensive.

"This undertaking," Capt. Craigie explained, "may be likened to the Officers' Reserve training camps maintained by the Government this summer, except that the training will be spread out in connection with the other studies of the young men. The exact course of instruction has not been announced, but I expect it will be along the same lines as at the training camps. It will not be nearly so intensive. Instead of giving all their time to military science and tactics as the training camp students do, the university students will have this work only as one of several studies.

"The time devoted to military instruction must average not less than three hours a week during the academic year. After two years, those students recommended by the professor of military science and tactics and who are willing to sign an agreement to continue the course to its completion will be selected for more intensive training, after which they may become candidates for commissions.

Final Course in Camp.

"The law provides that the final training may be in one of the Government training camps. The Government will provide sustenance after the first two years for those taking the course who agree to accept a commission."

It is expected that this law, after a few years, will provide steady increments of highly trained young officers for the reserve corps. Schools and colleges not qualified for the senior division of the reserve corps may be designated for the junior division, which includes the preliminary training given at the schools of higher grade.

Capt. Craigie believes the plan will be a success. He is a cavalry officer and has had 18 years in the commissioned service. He was stationed in St. Louis once previous to this summer, having served as aid-de-camp on the staff of Major-General George M. Randall, commanding the then Northern Division of the army, with headquarters in St. Louis, in 1905.

U. S. NOT TO DRAFT JAPANESE

Ambassador From Tokio Protests When Countryman Is Accepted.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 8.—Instructions not to draft Japanese were received here today by the Adjutant-General's office from Provost Marshal-General Crowder as a result of the action of the local conscription board at Plainfield, N. J., which had accepted and certified one young man of that race. The conscripted Japanese had made no claim for exemption and appeared gratified at being accepted for the national army. Protest, however, was made by the Japanese Ambassador.

THREE BRITISH SHIPS SUNK WITH LOSS OF THREE LIVES

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Sept. 8.—The British steamship Delphic, a vessel of 8273 tons of the White Star Line, has been sunk by a German submarine, according to word received here today. The sinking occurred Aug. 15, the advices stated, some distance off the Irish coast, while the vessel was under convoy. The crew was saved.

Advices from the same source reported the British ship Middlesex, formerly known as the Knight Bachelor, a vessel of 7264 gross tons, likewise under convoy, had been sunk about the same time as was the Delphic. The Middlesex was built in 1914 at Glasgow and was owned by the Federal Steam Navigation Co. of London.

News of the destruction of the 8492-ton British steamship Turakina by a German submarine, Aug 13, was brought here by several members of her crew who arrived on an American passenger ship. The ship had recently landed 1200 New Zealand troops at a British port and was on her way to take a cargo of oil. According to Charles West, refrigerator engineer of the ship, three members of the crew lost their lives from the explosion of the torpedo. The others, 72 in all, escaped in lifeboats and were picked up eight hours later.

GRAND LEADER'S TRADE GROWS 16 FOLD IN 25 YEARS

Great Establishment Will Celebrate Its Silver Jubilee This Week.

Sales Manager Says Advertising Is of the Highest Importance to Any Store.

This is the story of an establishment which during a quarter of a century in St. Louis has grown 25 times as rapidly as the city itself. Such a showing might not be especially noteworthy for a business of very small beginning, but in the instance here recorded there was an original investment of $100,000, and first year sales of approximately three-quarters of a million dollars. The unusually rapid growth has been from that substantial foundation.

The establishment is that of the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co. (Grand-Leader), which this week ..l have its silver jubilee.

Whether the Grand-Leader has ..de good its slogan, "The Fastest-..owing Store in America," it is not ..hin the province of this article to ..empt to prove or disprove, but ..t its advancement in 25 years ..e has been remarkable is undeni..e. Here, briefly, are the figures, .. comparison with those for the ..y, those for the Grand-Leader be..g given upon the authority of a ..ember of the Stix, Baer & Fuller firm. In 25 years the city of St. Louis has added, roundly, two-thirds to the population it had in 1892. In the same period the Grand-Leader has increased the volume of its business more than 16-fold. In other words, its sales have grown over 1600 per cent, while the city population has gained about 66 per cent. The city's population gain, therefore, is to the Grand-Leader's business gain approximately as 1 to 25.

History Begins in 1881.

The history of the Grand-Leader store really begins 36, instead of 25, years ago. In the year 1881 Julius A. Baer and Sigmund Baer, brothers, established a small merchandise store in a little building in the village of Magazine, Ark. The former was 19 and the latter 17 years old. They did well with their business and in two years satisfied an ambition for a larger field by going to Fort Smith. There they were joined by Aaron Fuller and the firm of Baer Brothers & Fuller was formed. That firm continued a prosperous business in Fort Smith nine years and then another move was made to permit of expansion. The two Baers and Fuller came to St. Louis, the late Charles A. Stix was taken into the firm here and the real Grand-Leader store was established. That was in September, 1892, or 25 years ago this month.

The first Grand-Leader store was on Broadway near Morgan street. After a time it was moved to larger quarters at the northwest corner of Broadway and Washington avenue, and then, in September, 1906, the eight-story building on the west side of Sixth street, extending from Washington avenue to Lucas avenue, was taken. Part of the store is still housed in this building, but in 1911 the Grand-Leader took over two adjoining buildings—that known as the Grand-Leader "annex," at Washington avenue and Seventh street, which is eight stories in height, and the eight-story building at Lucas avenue and Seventh street—so that the store now occupies the entire block of buildings between Sixth and Seventh streets and Washington and Lucas avenues. It is the present intention to tear down the "annex" and replace it with a 12-story structure conforming in architecture to the other two buildings, when construction costs become more normal.

Figures Show Growth.

Statistics seldom are interesting except to the statistical minded, and just enough are here presented to give a comprehensive idea of the measure of the Grand-Leader store's growth and of the magnitude of the present establishment. Again one of the store's owners is authority for the figures and statements and vouches for their correctness.

The first Grand-Leader store, in the first year of its existence, did, as already has been stated, business to the amount of about $750,000. The sales of the store this year will total more than $12,000,000.

The first store of the Baer brothers in Magazine, Ark., had one employe. The first Stix, Baer & Fuller store in St. Louis had about 150 employes. The present establishment employs over 3000 persons.

The store established in St. Louis in 1892 occupied about 50,000 square feet of floor space. In the three buildings, covering a block, now occupied by the Grand-Leader, there are approximately 550,000 square feet of floor space.

The number of departments in the store is over 100. The number of different kinds of articles handled in each department ranges from a few thousands to scores of thousands. The total in all of the departments runs into the hundreds of thousands—how many hundreds no one would venture to guess.

All Kinds of Articles.

"It might even be a million or two millions," an official of the firm said. "No one knows and no one could find out; a count would be impossible."

It is possible to spend for a single article in the store anywhere from one cent to $15,000. The penny would buy a paper of pins and $15,000 is the price of the most expensive set of furs in stock. Both are classified by store under the general head of wearing apparel. Other departments show as great range in the character of the articles handled, though none so great a spread in prices.

Supplies are kept up through purchasing agencies maintained not only in several American cities, but also in the mercantile centers of Europe and the Orient.

The Grand-Leader is credited with having one of the most efficient store organizations in the United States. Its system frequently has been studied and used as a model by large establishments in other cities.

Every institution which has been successful has developed more or less settled guiding principles for the conduct of its business. Let Sidney R. Baer speak as the representative of Stix, Baer and Fuller in this regard. There follows a fair summary of his discussion of this subject with a reporter for the Post-Dispatch.

Public Is Well Served.

"The foundation stone upon which this business has been constructed to its present proportions," he said, "and which has been handed down to we of the younger generation to continue to build upon, is the principle of serving the public. We younger members of the firm have been taught and have come to understand that it is better to serve than to sell.

"Formerly the merchant merely sold goods; that is to say, with little or no study of the conditions surrounding the sale or consideration of its effect upon the purchaser. The modern method, our method at least, is first to endeavor to buy goods which will meet the real wants and needs of the people, and after that to try to avoid selling to any customer an unsuitable piece of goods or one with which there later might be dissatisfaction.

"Today's sales are of small moment. We must look to the future, and for future business we must depend upon the satisfaction which our goods give to the people today."

Rule of the Store.

As an example of how the firm endeavors to impress this principle upon the personnel of the store, Mr. Baer directed attention to the following framed rule, which is constantly before all employes:

> OUR RULE.
> In the daily routine of business many things arise not covered by the "Rules and Regulations" which it is necessary for us to decide upon.
> For helpful aid in such cases remember one thing: This establishment does not conduct its business by clever tricks or cunningness. Be open, truthful and honest, above all. Make your decision by means of the simple law of right and wrong—and that is all we expect of our people.

Turning to other factors than the principle of serving the public which are regarded as having been chiefly responsible for the success of the Stix, Baer & Fuller business, Mr. Baer said:

"In our estimation there are three chief factors in the success of a merchandising business — merchandise, advertising and service—a trinity in which it is hard to put one above the other, although we rank service first. It is necessary, before anything else, to obtain suitable merchandise. Having obtained it, the next requisite is to acquaint the public with the fact through advertising, and having brought them to the store through advertising, it is essential to do everything possible to retain them as customers through the sort of service which will make them satisfied with their purchases."

L. Blumenstock, sales manager for the Stix, Baer & Fuller Co., who has helped it to celebrate 15 previous anniversaries, entered the discussion at this point with a remark on the subject of advertising.

"I do not put undue stress upon advertising; it is not everything; but it is of the highest importance. It could no more be dispensed with by a mercantile establishment than merchandise and service could be dispensed with. The three are interdependent.

"Another way in which advertising sometimes has appealed to me is that it is to a merchandise store what a newspaper is to a city. A big department store really is a little city in itself. Advertising is the news of what is going on in our little city. It is the tongue of business, service and merchandise its brains and body."

Comparative Price Advertising.

Mr. Blumenstock commented upon an article on the advertising situation in St. Louis published recently in the New York Tribune. Its author was Samuel Hopkins Adams. While as a whole it was uncomplimentary to St. Louis, it commended the Grand-Leader for having eliminated comparative price advertising last October.

"We appreciate the compliment from Mr. Adams," said Mr. Blumenstock, "but while we have discarded what is known as comparative price advertising for ourselves, I do not accept his indictment of its use. His attempt was to show that such advertising is deliberately misrepresentative. This is not true where reliable firms are concerned. They endeavor to be honest and straightforward with their advertising, but the use of comparative prices—that is, undertaking to state the original value of an article which is offered at special sale—opens many loopholes for misunderstanding and dissatisfaction. That is its weakness, and it is true also that it results in occasional misrepresentation by employes.

"The growth of the Grand-Leader's business in the last year has been the greatest in its history. While this has been due to a variety of causes, we sincerely believe that increased confidence in our store on the part of the public because of our elimination of comparative prices has contributed importantly to the gain."

Employes' Interests Looked After.

A supplementary factor in business success, and a highly important one in making good service to the public possible, in the opinion of the proprietors of the Grand-Leader, is satisfied employes. In recognition of this factor the Grand-Leader now maintains these institutions: A country club on a high bluff overlooking the Meramec River near Fern Glen, Mo., where five buildings were erected at a cost of $40,000, of which every employe of the Grand-Leader is a member without dues, and which is said to be operated at an annual loss to the firm of $10,000; an employes' savings bank, which pays interest at the rate of 5 per cent; rest and recreation rooms; lunchrooms, in which food is sold to employes at less than cost; a choral club; a beneficial aid society, through which, by the payment of a nominal sum, an employe may obtain free medical attention, temporary care in an emergency hospital, salary for a certain length of time if unable to work. A burial fund also is provided for. The store also employs a welfare secretary and an educational director for employes.

The principal officers of the firm are three of its founders. They are Aaron Fuller, president; Julius A. Baer, vice president, and Sigmund Baer, secretary and treasurer. The fourth founder, Charles A. Stix, died a year ago. He was president of the firm at his death. Three sons of the three surviving founders have been taken into the firm, all being members of the board of directors, and as rapidly as possible they are taking over the responsibility of conducting the business. They are Sidney R. Baer, son of Sigmund Baer; Arthur Baer, son of Julius Baer, and Leo C. Fuller, son of Aaron Fuller.

FISCHER RETURNS AFTER CONSULTING PAGEANT SOLOIST

TO BE GIVEN SEPT. 17-18

More Than 250 Singers to Take Part in Chorus of "Elijah" and in Concert.

Conductor Frederick Fischer of the St. Louis Pageant Choral Society returned from New York Friday from a consultation with the principals who are to take part in St. Louis' Autumnal Music Festival at Municipal Theater, Forest Park, Sept. 17 and 18. Fischer met Miss Olive Klein, the soprano who is to sing in Mendelssohn's oratorio, "Elijah;" Merle Alcock, a contralto; Forrest Lamont, the young tenor who distinguished himself at the recent "I'Pagliacci" performances in Forest Park, and Clarence Whitehill, noted bass-baritone.

Since first announcing this quartet, the conductor has added Lily Hartwig and Louis Templeman, vocalists, to the "Elijah" roster, and also perfected arrangements with 60 instrumentalists who are to form the symphonic orchestra in the accompaniment of the oratorio and also for the support of the solo numbers of the second night's program.

The entire St. Louis Pageant Choral Society's vocal and ensemble equipment will be employed at both concerts. More than 250 singers will take part.

ST. LOUIS WILL HANDLE LARGE INCREASE IN COTTON TRAFFIC

Usual Coastwise Shipments to go by Rail as Government Has Taken Vessels.

St. Louis will handle an enormous increase in cotton tonnage this Autumn and Winter, due to the discontinuance of the rail and water routing to the Atlantic seaboard, it was learned at a meeting of the St. Louis Car Commission of the Railroads' war board yesterday.

Coastwise ships which formerly carried thousands of tons to New England mills have been requisitioned by the Government and the entire burden of handling the 1917 crop will devolve upon the railroads.

St. Louis, Memphis and New Orleans will be the main gateways for the interchanging this traffic between the carrying lines.

While the cotton will demand a large increase in car equipment, there will be no diminution in the volume of other crops crowding the rails and terminal yards of the roads. On the contrary, the movement of grains, general merchandise and in fact all classes of traffic is far in excess of any previous season.

MAC MILLAN BRINGS BACK OTHER EXPLORERS' RECORDS

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Records left by various explorers in the frozen North, some of them more than half a century old, brought back by Donold B. McMillan, head of the Crocker Land expedition, who recently returned, are today on exhibition in the American Museum of Natural History in this city.

Among the records is a silk lining of a cap worn by Dr. Elisha Kent Kane, the American explorer, left by him at Rennsalaer Harbor in 1853. It is marked with a leaden bullet "O. K." There is also a paper containing a record of Dr. Kane's life in the North, cut with a knife, owing to a scarcity of writing materials. There are also records left by Rear Admiral Peary, including a bit of an American flag, left in 1906 at the top of Cape Thomas Hubbard.

Monument to Henry Clay Works Dedicated.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Sept. 8.—A monument to the memory of Henry Clay Works, a native of Middletown, author of "Marching Through Georgia" and other well-known songs, was dedicated here today. The memorial, erected by public subscriptions, is a 10-ton boulder of granite, surmounted by a bronze bust of Works.

Announcing the Stix Baer & Fuller 25th Anniversary Sale

Merchandising Mastery

THERE are occasions when one is at a loss for words--too full for utterance--and this is one of them.

Twenty-five years have passed since we opened the doors of "Grand-Leader." It does not seem quite that many years to us who have been here all the time. We felt like real grown-ups then--and we feel young now. But we can see evidence of the twenty-five years having passed--here, there and everywhere.

As we recall our ambitions, aims and purposes, and business ideals, we realize that our imagination was not as great as our accomplishments, and our business ideals below the standards maintained today.

In looking back over the paths of progress, we can readily see the transition of a store to an institution--of a storekeeper to a merchant.

We approach this momentous natal day with a deep sense of gratitude to the public. We are not unmindful of our great obligations--and it is our aim and purpose to demonstrate it in a very substantial way.

Many times in the planning of this event we searched for some big idea apart from merchandise that would indicate our feeling of gratitude and be in keeping with the occasion--and just as frequently we came back to the most simple--the one basic idea of storekeeping, and the one which will most strongly appeal to the general public, namely, "value-giving."

There are, of course, varying degrees of value-giving, just as there are varying degrees of heat. However, our enthusiasm is not "lukewarm" but "fervent"--and every offering is an absolute demonstration of that fact.

We could write pages relating to the history of this Anniversary celebration--how it was planned--the months spent in assembling the merchandise--the standards of values that were imposed--the reports made by the department chiefs--and finally the assembling of samples which were to be offered in this sale for the inspection by the buyers' committee, the members of the firm and the advertising department.

No questionable value could withstand such a rigid examination. No ordinary offering could find space on the honor roll of this extraordinary event--and so we say to the public: "Come with the expectation of sharing in the greatest bargain feast that has ever been presented to St. Louisans."

It will be difficult at this time to magnify the character of the values--and we are really glad that we have maintained the policy of not quoting comparative prices, because if they were quoted on this occasion, facts would sound like fiction.

Every Silver Jubilee offering bears a special ticket and we assert that wherever you see a ticket you will find a value worthy of the occasion.

In the following pages but meager details of all the extraordinary offerings will be found. Today's Globe-Democrat contains just as much news of this event concerning the departments that are not represented here.

"We enlarged our positions north of the Boise des Fosses, occupied the Bois le Chaume in its entirety and captured the crest of the line which dominates the Bois des Caurieres. The number of prisoners taken exceeds 500, of whom 15 were officers.

Strong German Naval Force Is Observed in Southern Baltic.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 8.—It is reported by the Svenska Dagbladst that German naval forces of considerable strength have been observed in the Southern Baltic, taking a northerly course. The leading squadron, it says, consists of submarines and torpedo boats, with cruisers following them. It is believed to be the German Baltic fleet, reinforced by part of the high seas fleet. A great naval attack on Russian Baltic coast towns is expected.

Berlin Official.

BERLIN, via London, Sept. 8.—The supplementary official statement from general headquarters this evening, reads:

"On the northeastern Verdun front the French attack at Fosse Wood and northwest of Bezonvaux failed. In Chaulnes Wood, where the enemy had gained ground, the fighting is still in progress.

"Western war theater, front of Crown Prince Rupprecht—A thick fog limited fighting in the northern portion of the Flanders front. From Southoult wood to the Commines-Ypress canal the firing increased from time to time to great intensity. The British several times advanced in reconnoitering enterprises. They were everywhere repulsed.

"Front of the German Crown Prince—The artillery battle before Verdun continued yesterday. On the eastern bank of the Meuse the artillery fire repeatedly increased to drumfire intensity. Shortly before nightfall a French attack was launched between Samogneux and the Beaumont-Vacherauville road, 20 miles. Their storming waves, which were followed by strong reserves, were repulsed. At points where they penetrated our battle troops drove them back, some of the French companies being wiped out. The enemy losses were heavy.

"Macedonian front—West of Presba Lake Turkish troops repulsed Russian thrusts against positions recently captured by the former."

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—The official report from British headquarters in France, reads:

"The enemy's artillery was somewhat more active than usual today in the neighborhood of Hargicourt. Elsewhere the hostile artillery activity was less marked. No infantry action has taken place."

TWO MEN KILLED WHEN I. W. W. TRY TO HOLD UP 2 FARM HANDS

One of Agricultural Workers Is Slain and the Other Shot and Thrown From Train.

GLENCOE, Minn., Sept. 8.—Two men were killed and one wounded in a gun fight early today when four carrying Industrial Workers of the World cards attempted to hold up two farm hands who were riding on a freight train on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad.

One of the farm hands, who gave his name as E. D. Nemic, notified Sheriff Frank Klaus of McLeod County of the fight after having been wounded and thrown from the moving train.

Charles Dunham and an unidentified man in whose pocket an I. W. W. card was found were killed in the fight. The bodies were hidden under some hay in a box car and were found by members of the train crew at Bird Island, a station west of here. Sheriff Klaus placed three men carrying I. W. W. cards under arrest at Sumpter.

THEATERS IN BERLIN OPEN WITH CAPACITY BUSINESS

Playhouses May Be Limited to Half Their Usual Number of Performances to Save Fuel.

BERLIN, Sept. 7.—(Friday).—The problem of the uniform apportionment of coal for the coming winter has suggested retrenchments in numerous directions previously thought unnecessary. The nation's natural coal resources are virtually inexhaustible, but the shortage of miners has created a situation of acute stringency, and the fuel problem now seems to be giving greater concern than the food supply. The mines would probably have produced sufficient to supply the nation's domestic demands, but obligatory shipments to neutral countries have called for economy in home consumption.

The suggestion is made that the theaters cut down the number of weekly performances in order to save illuminating and heating fuel. The Berlin playhouses, which opened for the fall and winter seasons this week with capacity business, are protesting against the proposed movement to limit them to half their usual number of performances.

The managers point out that the theater is the only remaining medium through which war-weary brains may be relaxed, and generally predict a record business for the fall and winter season.

KILLING OF MEDICAL OFFICER TOLD OF IN STATE DISPATCH

Lieut. W. T. Fitzsimmons of Kansas City, 20 Years Old, Spent Year in France, Joined British Forces.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—The death of First Lieutenant William T. Fitzsimmons, medical corps, U. S. A., killed Thursday when German aviators bombed hospitals behind the lines in France, was announced in a dispatch received by the War Department tonight from the military attache of the American Embassy at London. It was the first news the department had received about the attack upon the hospitals.

No mention was made of other Americans reported killed in press cables. Lieut. Fitzsimmons joined the army medical forces at Kansas City, his home, last May, and recently was attached to the British forces. He was 20 years of age and a graduate of Kansas University. Shortly before entering the army he had returned home after spending a year doing hospital work in France.

JAPAN WILL LEAVE KIAOCHOW QUESTION TO PEACE MEETING

Former German Possessions in China Will Not Be Discussed by Lansing and Ishii.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—When conferences between Viscount Ishii and Secretary Lansing are resumed Monday neither the question of steel exports for Japan's shipbuilding industries nor the disposition of the former German possessions in China and in the Pacific will be discussed, it was made clear today.

The steel question, it was learned, was taken up through the permanent embassy here before Viscount Ishii came to America. Regarding her possession of Kiaochow, Japan takes the position that the subject is not one for discussion with the United States, but should be a topic for the peace conference.

It also was definitely stated that Japan's wishes and ambitions concerning China would not be brought up at this time.

GERMANY ASSURED OF FOOD FOR YEAR, BOARD HEAD SAYS

"Difficulties of Fourth Year of War Will Be Overcome," Official Statement Declares.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 8.—Herr von Woldo, president of the German Food Regulation Board, is quoted in Berlin advices today as declaring, in a statement to the press, that the supplies of bread grain for Germany for the entire year are assured. The prospect of the potato harvest is satisfactory and the harvest will be considerably better than that of last year, the statement adds, while the supply of fruits and vegetables has recently improved. Plans have been made for the seizure of all milk products.

"With complete certainty it may be anticipated that the difficulties of the fourth year of the war will be overcome," concludes the statement.

FORT SILL BATTERY FIRING STAMPEDES ARTILLERY HORSES

60 ANIMALS RUN AWAY

FORT SILL, Okla., Sept. 8.—One soldier was killed and eleven were injured, 2 of them seriously today when 60 horses attached to the equipment of E Battery, Eighth United States Field Artillery, stampeded after becoming frightened by heavy firing.

Private James Lawrence, of Cincinnati, O., was killed. He was knocked down by the horses and the wheels of a heavily loaded artillery caisson passed over his body. Private Peter Dyle, of Malby, Pa., and Roy Davis of Converse, S. C., are not expected to survive internal injuries. The nine others who were injured are:

All the dead and injured were members of E Battery.

The gun crews had put their pieces in position and had retired with their horses to a point several hundred yards from their battry. Another battery a short distance away was hidden by a clump of trees and its presence was unknown to the men. When the hidden battery began firing the horses became frightened and ran. The men were knocked down and trampled under the horses' hoofs and crushed by the heavy caissons.

TAX ON OPEN AIR AMUSEMENT PARKS KILLED BY SENATE

No Levy Will Be Made on Main Gate, Shows or Rides Where Charge is 25 Cents or Less.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Amusement parks, the main gates, shows and "rides" where charges are 25 cents or less were added by the Senate today to the list of exemptions from the amusement tax section of the war revenue bill. More than 500 open air parks in cities throughout the country are affected.

The amendment, offered by Senator Stone, was adopted without debate. It also strikes out a provision in the bill levying a five cent tax on each free admission to amusements, which would have reached resorts who open their gates to women and children during certain hours of the day, and in all reduces the total levy of the bill by about $3,000,000. An exemption for moving picture shows charging 25 cents or less already had been written into the measure.

Final preparations were made by the Senate during the day for passage of the $2,500,000,000 tax bill next Monday, the date fixed by unanimous agreement for its disposition. It is expected to reach the President within a fortnight.

With the adoption today of the minor and administrative amendments, which included provisions, making the transportation and a few other new taxes effective November first, the Senate had the bill almost in readiness for final action Monday. Elimination of the consumption taxes, on sugar, coffee and cocoa, the provision increasing secondclass postage rates and possibly the three per cent charge proposed on freight transportation was generally predicted.

BOMB FACTORY FOUND WHEN EXPLOSON BLOWS OFF ROOF

HOBOKEN, N. J., Sept. 8.—What appeared to be a fully equipped bomb-making plant was disclosed to the police tonight when an explosion blew off the roof of a small building in Third street as two detectives were passing. A man who fled from the structure was seized by one of the officers. He gave the name of Robert Lichenfeldt and his age as 53 years. He admitted he was of German birth.

The police reserves removed the bomb-making ingredients. These included bottles of sulphuric acid, muriatic acid, sulphate of iron, nitroglycerine and several pans of white powder. The plant was elaborately equipped. On a work bench were several chemist's scales, mortars for mixing purposes, a bellows and five gas jets.

The supply of explosives was said by the police to be fully as complete as that found in a River street hotel, early in February when Hans Schwartz and Fritz Kolb were arrested. Lichenfeldt was held on the technical charge of being a disorderly person.

There will be speeches, a band concert and military drills. At 9 o'clock the audience, led by a band and the Knights of Columbus Choral Club, will sing the anthem. At the same hour, in theaters and moving picture houses all over the city, "The Star-Spangled Banner" will be played by the orchestras and sung by the audiences.

Supt. Withers of the public schools has instructed that on Friday the history of the national anthem be related in all the schools.

FRENCH SOCIALISTS ASK FOR VIGOROUS PROSECUTION OF WAR

Request, However, that Allies' Aims be Limited to Claims Which Are Justifiable.

PARIS, Sept. 8.—The Socialist parlamentary group, from which it is reported Premier Ribot intends to select more than one member of his reconstructed cabinet, met today to discuss the party's participation in the new ministry. After four and a half hours' of discussion the meeting adopted a resolution proposed by Pierre Renaudel, leader of the Socialist group in the Chamber, setting forth that the Socialists were ready to collaborate with the Government fo rthe national defense, but on condition it was assured that the Government would vigorously prosecute the war, military and economically, would safeguard the liberties of the public and the workers and not menace those liberties by false interpretations of necessities of national defense.

The resolution condemns diplomacy, insists that the war aims of the allies be limited to claims manifestly justifiable and concludes with theh statement that the assistance given by the party and the guarantees it intends to obtain must be discussed by delegates with official mandates.

WOMEN ENTITLED TO VOTE AS RIGHT, NOT FAVOR, SAYS T. R.

"To Deny It Will Result in Our Descendants Failing to Understand Our Self-government.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Women are entitled to the ballot as a right and not as a favor, Col. Theodore Roosevelt told a gathering o about 500 suffragists and their friends who motored to his home at Sagamore Hill this afternoon. He declared himself most, emphatically in favor of woman suffrage and was heartily applauded when he said:

"On the whole the citizen to whom I will pay the greatest deference as doing the most indispensable of all duties is the mother. I will put her ahead of every other human being. To deny the mother the vote seems to be something so preposterous that our descendants will fail to understand how we could call ourselves self-governing and democratic and yet deny it."

E. ST. LOUIS WITHOUT TROOPS

Infantrymen on Guard Since Riot In July Depart for Training Camp.

Nine companies of the Sixth Illinois Infantry, which have been stationed in East St. Louis since the riot of July 2, departed last night for Camp Logan, Houston, Tex., for training for service in France.

Their departure left East St. Louis without troops, and while it has been reported that several companies of another regiment would be sent there, no announcement has been made.

STATE PAID FOR 1500 TONS COAL ABOVE ITS NEEDS

MORE PAYMENTS TO RINER

Assistant Attorney-General Says Others Beside Dealer Named Are Probably Involved.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 8.—The Attorney-General's office was obliged to suspend the coal investigation for today because of the press of other business, but the Post-Dispatch continued the investigation, obtaining interesting information which will be taken up by Assistant Attorney-General Howell Monday.

It was learned that John Riner, a local coal dealer, whose wagons hauled coal to his yards from cars which were being unloaded into the State bins, had submitted a bill to the Supreme Court for hard coal, which Chief Justice Graves refused to certify for payment on the ground that it was exorbitant. The amount of the bill was $184.80, and was for coal used in the hot-water heater at the Supreme Court building. According to the bill, Riner hauled 15 tons and 800 pouds at $12 a ton. Judge Graves said he did not believe that amount of coal had been used.

The last item on the bill was 9000 pounds delivered on April 27. Employes of the building told Judge Graves the coal was hauled in one wagon load and could not possibly have been as much as 9000 pounds, about 2000 pounds being the ordinary one-horse load. Following that suggestion, the Post-Dispatch correspondent found the records in Auditor Hackman's office. These show that in addition to the hard coal which he charged to the Supreme Court, Riner has been paid $529.42 for 48 tons of hard coal hauled to the Supreme Court building during the past winter.

These bills were paid on vouchers certified by John W. Scott, commissioner of the permanent seat of government ,who admitted he sold State coal to private individuals, for which the State has not been paid.

Puzzled by Auditor's Payment.

Acting Chief Justice R. F. Walker said tonight that he did not understand how the State auditor could be paying for coal hauled to the Supreme Court building, because such items should be paid out of the Supreme court contingent fund b,y the clerk of the court.

Employes at the Supreme Court building who have charge of the hot-water plant said no such amounts of hard coal had been hauled to that building during the past winter.

Several of the bills submitted by Riner, and paid on Scott's certificate, for coal hauled to the Supreme Court do not give the date on which the coal was hauled. Three of them bear the dates Jan. 30 and March 3.

The water heater in the Supreme Court building is about equal in size to an ordinary house stove. According to the bills submitted by Riner to Auditor Hackman and to the Supreme Court, an aggregate of 63 tons of hard coal were used in the heater during the winter.

Assistant Attorney General Howell said today that the discoveries made by the Post-Dispatch were in line with information on other matters he has been getting from witnesses, and he expects to show that others were implicated in the coal deals besides Scott.

Bills and Capacity Contrasted.

An analysis of the state's coal bills for the past year show that it would have been impossible to use as much coal as was paid for, if the estimates of engineers and firemen employed at the state plant are accurate.

John Schumacher, who has been employed five years as fireman at the heating plant, told Howell that the maximum amount of coal burned in the state heating plant in zero weather during a 24-hour day was 12 tons.

If every day from Oct. 4, 1916, when the plant was opened, until May 31, 1917, when it was closed, had been zero weather, and the maximum amount had been used, the aggregate would have been only 2800 tons.

The amount of coal billed to, and paid for, by the state from Oct. 1, 1916, to June 26, 1917, was 4300 tons.

The investigation today revealed additional coal bills paid to Riner during the contract year. It was stated yesterday that Riner collected $3100 from the state for lump coal at $5 a ton, though the state had a contract with the West Virginia Coal Coomopany of St. Louis to furnish coal at $2.90 a ton, on a $5000 bond guaranteeing the state against delay or failure to supply coal as needed.

Additional amounts paid Riner were found today, which brings the total paid him during the year to $8660.96. The West Virginia Coal Company received $7252.87. For this amount the West Virginia Coal Company furnished 2502 tons and Riner furnished 1794 tons.

MAYOR MOLLMAN INDICTED BY RACE RIOT GRAND JURY

DENOUNCED IN REPORT

Citizens Should Demand His Resignation, It Says; Secretary Also Indicted.

Mayor Fred W. Mollman of East St. Louis, who was elected on a "law and order" platform in 1915, and who was re-elected last Spring, was indicted yesterday by the St. Clair County grand jury on a charge of malfeasance in office, based on his failure to take measures to check the East St. Louis race riot and massacre of negroes July 2.

The grand jury said in its report that whether Mollman's inaction was due to fright, to inability or to sympathy with the rioters, he showed his unfitness for office. It said that, so long as he remained in office, "a coterie of corrupt politicians" would continue to hamper efforts for good government, and it urged citizens to demand his resignation, "as the greatest good he can do his city."

Mollman's secretary, Maurice Ahearn, was indicted on the charge of being a conspirator in the riot, the specific charge being that he ordered policemen to arrest photographers and to smash cameras, thus preventing the making of photographs and moving pictures which would have served as evidence against the guilty men. "No man gave greater aid to the rioters than Ahearn," the grand jury declares in its report.

Thirty-Seven Others Indicted.

Thirty-seven other persons were indicted, but their names were withheld, pending arrests. The same grand jury indicted 105 persons Aug. 14 on charges growing out of the riots, so that the total number of those indicted in the riot cases is now 144. Yesterday's indictments accompanied the grand jury's final report, made to Judge Crow in the Circuit Court at Belleville. The September grand jury, to be impaneled next week, is asked in the report to continue the riot inquiry.

It was reported, in the last few days, that the grand jury was making an inquiry involving a prominent East St. Louis politician, but according to the best information obtainable last night, this man was not among those indicted.

Regarding Mayor Mollman and Secretary Ahearn, the grand jury said in its report:

"We present an indictment against Hon. Fred W. Mollman, Mayor of East St. Louis, for malfeasance in office.

"Mayor Mollman must be judged by his actions as proven by the evidence. If his failure to give directions to the militia, and his failure to call upon the Sheriff's office, and his failure to deputize citizens who offered their services were the result of lack of ability or of fright, his office should be taken away from him and given to an efficient person.

"If his failure to act was because his sympathies were with those who sought to drive the negro out of East St. Louis, he should make room for a chief executive who is in favor of enforcing 100 per cent of the laws. The law-abiding citizens and greater industries, and the respectable laboring men of East St. Louis should unite and demand the resignation of the Mayor, as the greatest good he can do his city.

Action of Ahearn Denounced.

"We present an indictment against his private secretary, Maurice Ahearn, for being a conspirator in the riot, in that he ordered the police force of East St. Louis, and the militia, to destroy the cameras of persons attempting to take photographs of the rioting, thus preventing moving picture machines from taking pictures of the rioting mobs, and thus destroying evidence which would have been so valuable to the grand jury in ascertaining more of the real offenders.

"No man gave greater aid to the rioters, and assured them more safety from prosecution, than did Maurice Ahearn when he ordered that the photographers be denied their free rights to take pictures of the scenes of the rioting, and ordered that their cameras be destroyed.

"We have hopes that out of the results of our efforts, East St. Louis will be a safe city to live in; that the property owners will be safe from the fire-brand of the incendiary; and that the great industries of East St. Louis, which are contributing so largely of necessary articles to conduct the great war in which we are now engaged, will be able to proceed with safety and efficiency.

"About a month and a half after the riot of July 2, a now Police and Fire Commission took charge of the police force and fire department. It is composed of three of the strongest and most upright men in East St. Louis. They have both courage and ability. Our evidence shows us that the coterie of corrupt politicians who have been the undoing of the Mayor, and who have contributed to the former inefficiency and corruptness of the police department, are

MANUFACTURE AND IMPORTATION OF WHISKY CEASES

Distilleries Arrange to Produce Commercial Alcohol and Few Will Shut Down.

WASHINGTON Sept. 8.—Tonight at 11 o'clock whisky manufacture ceased in the United States under provisions of the food control law and the millions of bushels of grain heretofore used in making that form of drink will be diverted to food. Importation of whisky stopped at the same time.

Just how much grain will be added to the food supplies as a result is not determinable but experts say that about 100,000,000 bushels were used by the distilleries each year, of which about 40,000,000 bushels were used in whisky manufacture. Distillers may continue manufacturing alcohol for commercial purposes and many of them have arranged for this work, others turning their distilleries into manufacturing plants for yeast, vinegar and by-products.

Stocks of whisky in the country undoubtedly are larger than they ever have been. Distillers have been working at utmost capacity and imports have been larger than ever. Officials estimate the quantity of whisky in bonded warehouses to be about 190,000,000 gallons. Stocks not in bond will bring the quantity on hand in the country up to about 230,000,000 gallons. The annual production of whisky has been about 116,000,000 gallons.

The class of distilleries which were put out of business was composed almost wholly of small plants operated by from one man to half a dozen men, located in California, Ohio and New Jersey and producing brandy from grapes, apples and peaches. These produced approximately 2,000,000 gallons a year.

Stopping whisky manufacture, instead of curtailing the Government's revenues, will increase them for the next two years, officials believe Coupled with the operation of the pending revenue bill, the withdrawal of whisky from the stock already accumulated will probably treble the revenues within the next 12 months, as the present law imposes a tax of $1.10 and the revenue bill contemplates a tax of $3.20 a gallon. Upon commercial alcohol, with the exception of alcohol for denaturization, the revenue bill would impose a tax of $2.20, doubling the present income from this source.

Few men will be thrown out of work by the operation of the law.

In the opinion of some officials whisky will be selling at $15 a gallon within 12 months, affording distillers enormous profits which will more than compensate for the loss of capital invested in plants.

SWEDEN GERMANY'S MESSENGER DURING LAST THREE YEARS

State Department Make Public Proof That Teuto Charge in Argentina Sen Ship Data Through Swed ish Legation.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—Intense inter est has been aroused in diplomati and political circles here by th Washington dispatches announcin that the State Department has pro that Sweden has been acting as in termediary fo rtransferring Germa messages from the German charg d'Affaires at Buenos Aires by way o the Stockholm Foreign Office to Berlin.

The Associated Press learns tha the Foreign Office at Stockholm ha been acting as a telegraph office fo the German Government, and for th last three years has regularly o continuously transmitted cables i German cipher under the guise o Swedish Government messages.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Copi of three brief dispatches made publi by the State Department today re vealed another case of sinister German diplomacy, this time directe against Argentina, and involving th Swedish foreign office in an appar ent grave breach of neutrality an diplomatic propriety.

They were messages to Berli from Count Luxburg, the Germa charge at Buenos Aires, forwarde by the Swedish legation there as it own communications. Besides advising that no concessions be grante Argentina in the submarine contro versy they suggested that the Sout American country's ships be sun "without leaving any trace," an gave information as to the sailin and positions of certain vessels.

The department's announcemen also was sent to the Argentine em bassy and the Swedish legation her

Baron Akerhielm, the Swedis charge, would not comment furthe than to say it was improbable tha Baron Lowen, the Swedish ministe at Buenos Aires, knew of the con tents of the dispatches. Axel Rob ert Nordvall, of the special Swed ish economic mission, declared h was certain that Baron Lowen ha knowledge of the contents of th dispatches. He was of the opinio that Baron Lowen would be recall by the Swedish government and sa he looked for an explanation and disavowal of any intention to com mit an unneutral act.

Forwards Announcement.

Ambassador Naon of Argentin would only say that he had forwarded the state department's announce ment to his foreign office at Buen Aires.

What effect the disclosure wi have on Argentina's relations wit Germany could only be guessed both by state department official and by Ambassador Naon .

It was suggested by some diplo mats that Germany might have littl difficulty in arranging her relation with Argentina so as to cause th South American country to maintai her neutral attitude. It was pointe out that having entered into a agreement with Argentina recentl not to sink any more Argentine shi and to pay for damage already in flicted Germany was in a position t explain that she has not accepte the suggestion of her agent Buenos Aires.

That Argentina at least will de mand the removal of the offendin German was assumed both at th state department and by diplomat and it was pointed out that German probably would grasp at such an op portunity to close an incident whic left to grow might easily add on more nation to her list of enemie

Argentina's eviednt desire in pa months not to enter the war or eve break relations with Germany ha caused the belief here that she wi look with certain favor upon an practicable way out of the new diffi culty.

"The Secretary of State toda made the following statement:

"The Dapartment of State has se cured certain telegrams from Cou Luxburg, German Charge d' Affair at Buenos Aires, to the foreign offic at Berlin, which, I regret to say, wer dispatched from Buenos Aires by th wedish Legation as their own of- cial messages, addressed to the ockholm foreign office.

If not agreed , relations would be broken off. I ecommend refusal, and, if necesry, calling in the mediation of pain.

As regards Argentine eamers, I recommend either comelling them to turn back, sinking em without leaving any traces, or tting them through. They are all uite small.

" 'Luxburg."

Secretary Lansing made no coment as to how the dispatches fell to the hands of this Government.

Reveals German Envoy's Position.

Besides revealing the means in hich Germany used Sweden in her achinations in Argentina, the disatches show how the German harge, at the time Argentina was aving a critical diplomatic controersy with Germany over submarine estruction of her ships, was sending through the Swedish legation inrmation of the sailing of certain essels with recommendations that ey be sunk "without leaving any race" and in other dispatches was forming his Government how to egard Argentina's protests.

In the absence of any official coment it appeared that the manifest urposes of the United States in pubshing the correspondence were two. irst, to show the relations between ermany and Sweden, at least so far s the legations in Argentina were oncerned; and, second, to disclose Argentina, where German inuences seem to have been strongest all South America, the manner in hich the German diplomatic agent her capital was giving secret inructions for the destruction of her ipping and the manner in which he as guiding his Government in deal g with Argentina diplomatically.

ontinuously at work, and will be ble to hamper the Fire and Police ommission as long as Mr. Molman etains the office of Mayor.

"We have not been able, from ack of time, to apprehend, and return indictments against, all who ommitted crimes in the recent iots in East St. Louis. The Grand ury of the September term of the ircuit court meets Sept. 17, and we ecommend that they continue this nvestigation and return indictments gainst others who are guilty of having committed crime.

"To bring about permanent stability, the State of Illinois should do s share by establishing a non-parisan State Constabulary to be used n extraordinary occasions, as sugested in our former report to your onor."

Mollman in Ozarks.

Mollman went recently to Piney odge, near Arlington, Mo., in the zarks, and friends who tried to call im up last night, to tell him of his ndictment, were told that the telehone lines were out of order. hearn, when asked by a Post-Disatch reporter for a statement, said: What the hell's the use of making statement?"

Thomas Canavan, Commissioner of ublic Works, a close friend of Mollan, said the indictment seemed to im to be the result of a plot of Reublicans to destroy the Democratic arty organization. Mollman was ot elected as a Democrat, but Canvan said "his able leadership" had trengthened the Democratic party in East St. Louis.

A man familiar with the East Side ituation said last night that the inictment of Mollman and Ahearn vas a logical and necessary part of he campaign against the rioters, and hat the value of these indictments would not depend wholly on the conviction of the Mayor and his secreary.

"If they had not been indicted," e said, "it would be difficult to conict any of the rioters, no matter how much evidence there might be gainst any individual.

"Jurors would hesitate to convict nen who committed acts of lawlessness, when it could be forcefully argued that nothing had been done to punish the 'men higher up' who ermitted, if they did not encourge, these acts.

"The inaction of the police at the ime of the riots has been established by testimony, and in fact is ndisputed. If the mayor or his ecretary could order policemen to rrest photographers and smash ameras, they could order the same policemen to arrest rioters. As a matter of fact, the Mayor has ample uthority over the police, and he also has, as the Grand Jury points out, uthority to deputize private citiens to aid the police, a power which, t is charged, Mollman failed to use."

Rioters Denounced Mollman.

It was recalled that, at the time f the riots, there was much denunciation of Mollman by some of the rioters, and that there was even talk of violence against him, the charge being that he had encouraged negro laborers to come to East St. Louis. It was also said, at that time, that he was responsible for the action of the chief of police, in returning weapons which had been taken from negroes at the time of the May disturbances.

Following the May outbreak, in which no one was killed, Mollman appealed to officials of the L. & N. and other Southern railroads to cease transporting negro laborers into East St. Louis. It was charged, however, that he had previously aided the aluminum works and other East Side industries to increase the number of their negro employes by importations from the South.

On the day of the riot, Mollman was little in evidence, and militia officials were heard to complain that he could not be found. A Post-Dispatch reporter saw Mollman once, in the morning, near the City Hall, but could not find him after the most serious rioting had begun.

It was learned that one of the witnesses who appeared before the grand jury in relation to Mollman's conduct was the Rev. George W. Allison, pastor of the First Baptist Church. He is one of the executive committee of the Committee of One Hundred, which was organized after the riots, and which brought about the changes in the police and fire departments. Mollman attended the meeting at which the Committee of One Hundred was organized, and did not vote against a resolution which condemned the inefficiency of the local government.

Nearly a year ago, United States Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, holding court in East St. Louis, called Mollman before him and demanded that he enforce the Sunday closing law against saloons. Mollman finally announced that he would do so, and this law has since been enforced with varying success. By Mollman's order, the saloons were closed on the day of the riot.

5 PER CENT OF THE ST. LOUIS DRAFT ARE NOW IN CAMP

Two Men Who Will Depart Tomorrow Make Up 230 From City and County.

With the exception of two men who will depart tomorrow the entire five per cent of the draft quotas from St. Louis and St. Louis County included in the first contingent, or approximately 230 men, will have left for Camp Funston, Kan., by tonight. Forty-one men are scheduled to start tonight and 33 left last night.

The District Appeal Board yesterday certified 476 additional names of drafted St. Louisians to the Adjutant General as ready for service.

Relative to the large number of appeals being made recently by persons other than the drafted men, Acting Chairman Samuel Rosenfeld issued a warning against employing lawyers, doctors or others to present claims before the board.

"It has come to the ears of members of the board," he said, that certain "shyster" lawyers are sending out notices that they can do much toward obtaining exemption for a drafted man, and as a result of these statements obtain fees when their efforts can be of no avail.

"The board today decided that, while the practice has never been in effect, no one will be permitted to appear before that body in person. All statements must be made by affidavits, as required by law."

Applications Open to Inquiry.

Rosenfeld also said that some applications and their accompanying affidavits have been returned to the Government attorney in the respective wards with the recommendation that the cases be given a thorough investigation. The reason for this, he pointed out, is that the affidavits too thoroughly cover every angle of the claim as if they hight have been framed for a certain purpose and the names added in at a later date.

"If a person only knew it," Rosenfeld declared, "he is more likely to fare well before the board if his claim is presented in his own handwriting and in his own language, rather than in a long document of a legal nature."

Twtnty-first ward	36
Twenty-second ward	56
Twenty-seventh ward	78
Third ward	26
Fourth ward	22
Twenty-fifth ward	57
Twenty-eighth ward	22
Fourteenth ward	41
Eighteenth ward	138
Total	476

Three were certified from the Third district of St. Louis County.

Seventeen Claims Granted

CONFERENCES NUOT TO UNITE

A resolution rejecting the plan of the Methodist church to unify the German and English conferences of Methodist clergymen, was passed unanimously by 115 German celrymen attending the thirty-ninth annual conference at Eden Church, Nineteenth and Warren streets, yesterday. Clergymen say the adoption of the plan virtually would have meant the abolition of the German language in Methodist church services.

It was resolved to defer consideration of the plan for several years.

COMPLETED CASE IN POLICE GRAFT LIKELY THIS WEEK

Circuit Attorney Expects Conclusive Testimony From Two Witnesses Found Yesterday.

Circuit Attorney McDaniel last night said that the finding of two important witnesses in the police graft investigation late yesterday afternoon had assured the bringing of the investigation to an end early next week.

The Circuit Attorney would not give for publication the names of the witnesses, but it is known that one is a witness who fled from St. Louis after learning that the investigation was under way, and who is expected to give testimony of a most important character. The other is a woman who is expected to supply essential details of evidence needed to make what the Circuit Attorney thinks is a complete case bofere the grand jury.

George Frank, the convict, whose statement that Policeman Ray Cummins maintained an intimate personal relationship with him during a period in which he was robbing houses, started the investigation, will testify tomorrow, and Sybil Brown, who lived with the convict in St. Louis, will testify tomorrow or Tuesday. Assistant Circuit Attorney Russell departed last night for Lansing, Mich., to bring her to St. Louis. The Circuit Attorney expects her to corroborate Frank's statement in detail, as she did in a statement to a staff correspondent of the Post-Dispatch who interviewed her in Lansing.

The only other witness subpenaed for Monday is Mrs. Margaret Champagne of 730 Carpenter place. Although detectives searched for Mrs. Champagne for three days, they were unable to find her. She walked into the Circuit Attorney's office yesterday unannounced and was closeted with Circuit Attorney McDaniel for more than an hour. He refused to discuss the conference, but said she had been served with a subpena to appear tomorrow. He said he considered her "a most important witness."

PAWNBROKER AIDS POLICE IN ARREST OF BURGLARS

Man Who Tries to Obtain Loan On Dress Suit Declared to Have Served Five Terms in Prison.

A pawnbroker at Sixteenth and Market streets yesterday afternoon pointed out to detectives a man attempting to pawn a full dress suit and tuxedo coat as one who a few days ago pawned a watch which proved to have been stolen from the Second Presbyterian Church, Taylor avenue and Westminster place, on July 27. The watch belonged to William Jenkins, organist.

The man was arrested and was declared by Supt. Shea of the Bertillon department to be Robert Huntington, a burglar and safe blower, who has served five terms in prison.

Inside the dress coat was the name "W. S. Ireland." It was found that a man of this name lived at 5331 Von Versen avenue, and at that address policemen learned the family was away for the summer and the house had been broken into.

DOUBLE ACTION ON DISPUTES

Complaints of disturbing the peace were filed before two justices of the peace in Belleville yesterday by David O. Thomas, St. Clair County Superintendent of Highways, against Joseph Saenger, one of the proprietors of the Saenger Mercantile Co., of that city. Magistrate Henry Bienke has set the complaint filed before him for hearing Tuesday. The other was filed before Justice Ben Lautz.

Saenger alleges that Thomas owes him money for goods and that he refuses to settle. Thomas declares he demands that one item, which he says was misrepresented, be taken off the bill. He charges that Saenger enters his office unannounced, interrupts business meetings and disturbs his peace by loud and obstreperous conduct.

THEFTS FROM PLANT EXPLAINED

Thefts recently of more than $1000 worth of chemicals from the Monsanto Chemical Co., 1800 South Second street, were explained last night when Otto Hoenig, 31 years old, a former employe of the concern, confessed, according to the police, that he and several other men were guilty. In Hoenig's room at 2218 South Broadway was found about $150 worth of chemicals. He refused to give the names of his accomplices.

"HANK" WEEKE NOT AT RACE TRACK ON CLOSING DAY

City Inspector and Son of the Mayor Were Seen Making Book at Maxwelton Friday.

Henry L. (Hank) Weeke, Inspector of Weights and Measures, who, with Elmer Kiel, son of the Mayor, was seen Friday at the Maxwelton racetrack by a Post-Dispatch reporter "making book" on the races, with city officials and politicians as his clients, was not at the closing session of the race meet yesterday.

When he left the Post-Dispatch building about 1 o'clock in the afternoon, where he had come to make a denial of the story published in the home edition to the effect that he had been conducting a handbook at the track. Weeke said he was going directly to Maxwelton, but he could not be found later among the spectators at the course.

On Friday Weeke was seen to acknowledge the acceptance of bets and to pay off and collect after the running of each race. Weeke, after the fashion of bookmakers at the track, quoted the track odds to prospective bettors, calling them off from his program, and accepted their bets.

Bettors who placed wagers with him called off the amounts they wished to bet and young Kiel, standing beside his father's political lieutenant, recorded the amounts and the names of the bettors, each on a separate slip of paper. These slips Kiel later turned over to Weeke.

Bettors had the option in dealing with Weeke of paying off or collecting after each race or waiting until the conclusion of the day's races to make a settlement. Many paid or collected, as their luck required, after each race.

Weeke declared yesterday that he had not been making a book on Friday. He said he had attended the race meet regularly and had made many wagers, but declared he had not accepted bets as a layer of odds. He said Kiel had been with him a good part of the afternoon, but had not participated in any way in the betting. Young Kiel could not be reached for a statement.

INSISTENCE ON OUSTING KAISER STILL AGITATES GERMAN PRESS

President's Note Has Had Five Different Renderings in Newspapers of Central Empires.

BERLIN, Sept. 7.—Via London, Sept 8.—The semi-official North German Gazette today devotes a full page to a parallel reproduction of the original and German texts of President Wilson's reply to the Pope's peace note and also to the publication of a comparison between the German text and a distorted French version which the newspaper says was circulated outside of Germany by a French news agency.

German newspaper readers have been favored with no fewer than five different renderings of the President's note. They vary but slightly in phraseology and generally agree textfully in the reproduction of the President's strictures upon the German government, which the press of the Central Empires has made the outstanding feature of the note.

Feeling over the supposed intention of President Wilson to insist upon the dislodgment of the Hohenzollern dynasty continues to agitate the press and non-political circles.

It is announced that the special commission of seven of the Reichstag, appointed for the purpose, again will confer with Chancellor Michaelis regarding the German reply to the Pope on Sept. 15.

CARPENTIER AND NAVARRE NOT COMING TO AMERICA

PARIS, Sept. 8.—The rumor that Georges Carpentaier and Navarre are going to America as aviation instructors is unfounded. When seen by the Post-Dispatch correspondent, Carpentier said he knew nothing about the proposed trip.

"I haven't heard anything myself," he said. "I have tried by all means possible to find out how the rumor originated and what there was in it, but have not succeeded."

The correspondent was unable to interview Navarre, but friends of the aviator in Paris doubt the truth of the rumor and think thta a trip to the United States by Navarre is very improbable.

KAISER THANKS TROOPS IN PERSON FOR RIGA VICTORY

Such Acomplishments Increase Prospects That War Will End Soon, He Says.

BERLIN, Via London, Sept. 8.—In thanking the Eighth German Army for the capture of Riga, Emperor William, in an address to the victorious troops at Riga on Thursday, declared that such victories increase the prospects that the end of the war will come soon. The Emperor, according to an official statement, spoke as follows:

"Riga is free. When this news ran through all the districts of Germany, a sorm of jubilation and enthusiasm arose everywhere in the fatherland, and in the foremost trenches in the enemy country.

"This town, founded by the spirit of the old German Hanseatic League, with a German history, and which always has endeavored to maintain its German origin, has gone through heavy times. By the German army, in which is incorporated all the German tribes, this town again is liberated from long oppression.

Victory Sooner Than Expected.

"The operation, which by the command of the German supreme army commander and under the direction of Prince Leopold of Bavaria, was begun and undertaken with confidence in the efficiency of the troops which in over three years of war so brilliantly have stood the test, has been carried through by all arms more quickly and more energetically than was expected and was a surprise to the enemy. A crushing blow hit him and so he lost his bridgehead.

"The liberation of Riga is the deed of the Eighth Army, and its well-tried commander. It again has proved that our steel-hard will to victory will defend us no matter how long the war lasts, but such blows as the battle of Riga increase the prospects that the end will come soon. They add to the glory of our arms and give fresh laurels to the troops participating.

Says Prayers Were Answered.

"Therefore, I express to you my thanks for the brilliant feat of arms, the fatherland's thanks and the enthusiastic thanks of the people, who stand behind you watching your deeds but who also create and labor with their hands and till the fields to give us our daily bread. The present harvest, now well brought in, will feed us.

"Also in this respect the Lord of creation has granted our prayers and by His daily bread protected this army and your people at home against distress. Therefore, happen what may, and no matter how long it may last, on then, upon the enemy with joyful hearts and iron will to victory over all the enemies of Germany."

FRENCH AVIATOR ARRIVES TO TEACH AT BELLEVILLE

Lieut. Paul Prevost, a French aviator,, who has seen service on every section of the French and British war front in France, is in St. Louis, having been assigned by the French Government to duty at Scott Field, near Belleville, to aid in training American aviators for service at the front.

Lieut. Prevost is one of the 12 French flying officers to be sent to the United States for similar duty. He has been in the aviation corps in France since the beginning of the war, and was twice wounded at Verdun. He is 25 years old and while he modestly declines to discuss his achievments, it is known in America that he has brought down a number of opponents in air battles. He is officially credited with four.

Aviators and Machines Needed.

"I have not come to America to instruct your aviators," Lieut. Prevost said to a Post-Dispatch reporter at the Jefferson Hotel yesterday. "I have come to make suggestions to them. Your flying men here know a great deal about the work that is to be done, and I am here to offer them practical suggestions.

"When we 'blind' the Germans we shall win the war. You know what I mean. When we make it impossible for their aviators to make observations they will be beaten.

"What we need from America more than all else is aviators and airplanes. I hope your country will understand the necessity of help of this kind, and make every possible effort to aid us in gaining such superiority of the air that the German machines cannot appear over our lines.

Sides Equal in Air Forces.

"From my observation the Germans and the allies seem to be pretty equally matched now as to numbers of machines and aviators, but I think the French and British flyers are superior fighters."

Lieut. Prevost declined to discuss his own experiences as an aviator. He wears the full French uniform, consisting of blue knee trousers, blue coat light top coat, blue cap with red crown, and tan leather leggins. He said he did not know how long he would be on duty at Scott Field.

He has been in the United States two months, awaiting assignment to an aviation post, and during that time has learned to speak English.

PLAN BIG COAL TAR PRODUCTS PLANT ON RIVER

Monsanto Chemical Company Will Build on East Side, One Mile South of Free Bridge.

A $1,000,000 plant for the manufacture of coal tar products is to be erected on the east side of the Mississippi River, a mile south of the Free Bridge, by the Monsanto Chemical Co., 1800 South Second street. John F. Queeny, president of the company, said last night the plans for the big venture are virtually completed, and are certain of being put through.

The site of 85 acres was purchased from Julius Pitzman of 6 Kingsbury place, for a consideration said to be close to $100,000. The deal was handled by R. King Kauffman of the Mercantile Trust Co. and R. Vernon Clark, a realty dealer of St. Louis and East St. Louis.

Ten acres will be devoted to dock facilities, and a macadam road will be built between the wharf and the factory, which will be one-third of a mile from the river. The eastern terminus of the Sidney street ferry will be moved north, so that employes coming from St. Louis may land at the company's docks. The new plant will employ about 500 men. The company's St. Louis plant is near the western landing of the ferry, and its boats will be used to interchange materials.

Joseph Fining, secretary of the East St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, states that the organization is working out plans for providing transportation for employes living in East St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS COAL JOBBERS TO SEND COMMITTEE TO GARFIELD

It Will Confer With Coal Administrator on Situation Here and in Surrounding Territory.

Coal jobbers in St. Louis at a meeting yesterday afternoon at the Misosuri Athletic Association organized the Western Fuel Distributers' Association and selected a committee of three to go to Washington in the near future to confer with Coal Administrator Garfield about the coal situation in St. Louis and surrounding territory.

The purpose of the association is to impress the Coal Administrator with the importance of St. Louis as a coal distributing center. The St. Louis men also favor a regulation which, in the interest of conserving transportation facilities, would require communities to use the output from mines nearest them. The present scale of prices at the mines, it is said, makes it unprofitable for St. Louis dealers to handle standard coal, which is the output of the nearest field, and they are therefore offering the consumer only the high grade coal at higher prices. A remedy for this condition will be sought by the distributors.

Medicated Smoke Drives Out Catarrh

Costs But Little to Try. Try This Pleasant Herb Smoke.

Dr. Blosser, who has devoted forty-three years to the treatment of Catarrh, is the originator of a certain combination of medical herbs, flowers and berries to be smoked in a pipe or ready prepared cigarette. The smoke-vapor reaches all the air passages of the head, nose and throat. As the disease is carried into these passages with the air you breathe, so the antiseptic, healing vapor of this Remedy is carried with the breath directly to the affected parts.

This simple, practical method applies the medicine where sprays, douches, ointments, etc., cannot possibly go. Its effect is soothing and healing, and is entirely harmless, containing no tobacco or habit-forming drugs. It is pleasant to use, and not sickening to those who have never smoked. No matter how severe or long standing your case may be, we want to show you what our Remedy will do.

To prove the beneficial, pleasant effect, a liberal trial outfit will be mailed for ten cents to any sufferer, that will verify all claims by actual tests. This trial outfit contains a pipe, some of the Remedy for smoking and also medical cigarettes. If you wish to buy a regular package of Dr. Blosser's Remedy, you will find both the pipe and cigarette forms for sale in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph and Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Stores.

CLOSE CONTEST ON WOMAN SUFFRAGE OUTLOOK IN MAINE

Proposition Comes Up at Polls Tomorrow With the President Suporting Suffragists.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 8.—"As goes Maine, so goes the nation." That used to be the first lesson in primary class politics. A shadow was cast upon its veracity by last year's election returns. The suffragists are working to restore it to its ancient position of authority.

As goes Maine, so New York will go, and then in a year or two, hurrah for the general amendment." This is the spirit of the 1917 suffrage campaign. The vote comes up Monday. It will be important not only because Maine has the chance to be the first state east of the Mississippi to grant full equal suffrage to her women, but because of its moral effect upon the campaign which will end at the polls in New York State in November. The issue will be close. Upon this both sides are agreed.

"A woman at anti-headquarters said last night she thought we would win," cried a jubilant woman in the Portland headquarters today. "I must say she was a lady to admit it."

The campaign, which has been game, but not imposing, during the, summer received fresh impetus today through the letter of President Wilson to Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, chairman of the Campaign Committee. He wrote:

The President's Letter."

"May I not express my great interest in the equal suffrage campaign in the State of Maine. The pledges of my party are very distinct in regard to state action on the woman suffrage question, I urge all Democrats to support the cause in which we all believe."

Mrs. Livingston was "somewhere in Maine"—somewhere, to be exact, on a train between Rockland and Bangor—when the porter handed her the message from headquarters announcing the arrival of the President's letter. She had been up since 5 o'clock every day this week, making a final tour of the great State, and she was just saying, in a tired, discouraged voice, "I don't know what to expect." "The President!" she cried, so that half of the car heard her and turned and laughed. "There, I guess that will fix them."

She read it again and chuckled contentedly. "What about those pickets now?" she cried. I guess this will silence those men up here who have been so alarmed about the President. We don't approve of the pickets. We have tried to tell the Maine voters so but they didn't listen. When the President himself makes a statement like this, showing the pickets haven't shaken his belief in woman suffrage. I don't see why the men of Maine need worry about them any more."

"Will Be a Big Help."

"This letter will tie up the Democratic party to the issue and it will give us a great help with the voters of all parties, who hold the Prfesident's word in vast respect just now."

"Of course, I can't predict the outcome. It will be close. Our campaign has been brief and people have been occupied with many other problems this summer, you know.

"As for the war, it has been as much a help as a hindrance to our campaign. It has cost us workers, of course, and a great deal of money. Women have felt their first duty to be to the Red Cross and their time has been spent in knitting rather than campaigning. I could noto see that they could be consistent Red Cross workers, and suffragists too.

"The time has been too short to change their feelings on this point, but it should work out to our advantage even so. Women who are willing to make the sacrifice that Maine women have made in the name of patriotism are surely capable of participating in the public life of the country.

"This campaign has been different from every other campaign ever waged by suffragists in America because of the war issue. Our great argument has been the war argument. When people tell us this is no time for women to be talking about their desire to vote, we point out that this is the time England has taken in the midst of her awful struggle to enfranchise her women and that five provinces of Canada have had time, too. We remind them the women of Russia have voted in every election since the revolution. If the men of Maine were consistent they would not stand for sending our boys to die for Democracy abroad and refusing to grant democracy to our women here."

"Subject Is New to Maine."

If the suffragists had had time and money to get this argument across with the voters, there would probably be little doubt about the outcome of Monday's vote, but Maine has never had a suffrage campaign before, and the idea penetrates slowly.

Gov. Milliken and many prominent men are in favor of it and have spoken at the final campaign rallies. The Governor even sent out today a special plea to the voters urging them to vote especially for two of the amendments which are to come before them, first the proposal to give the Governor power to remove unfaithful sheriffs from office, and second the proposal to give women the vote.

From 35,000 to 40,000 names of women have been signed to a public petition which went through the mails this week to every voter. This is the first time that such wholesale use of petitions has been made in a suffrage campaign. They represent about one-quarter of the women of Maine, and 85 per cent of the women seen.

"We pray for a pleasant day," said one leader. "Then all the fishermen will go fishing and all the farmers will go voting. We are sure of the farmers, and we haven't anything against the fishermen, but we haven't been able to get around through the island and since we don't know, we think it's safer to let them go fishing."

Gov. Milliken and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National Women Suffrage Association, wound up the campaign with a great rally in Portland tonight. Mrs. Catt has been in the State for 10 days. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, however, has put her patriotic duties ahead of her love of suffrage and has taken no part in this suffrage campaign, the first one she ever missed. This point is not lost by the suffragists in replying to the anti-suffrage charge that suffragists are not patriotic.

The campaign has been carried on jointly by the Maine State Association, the Men's League, the Suffrage Referendum League of Portland and the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

2 GRANDMOTHERS TO RENEW THEIR FIGHT FOR GIRL

Child 3 Years Old Cause of Court Contest Extending Over 16 Months.

A habeas corpus proceeding in the Circuit Court at Peoria tomorrow will add another chapter to the sixteen months' contest between Mrs. Nancy Jane Walters of Alton, and Mrs. Selma Kauffman of Peoria, each seeking the custody of a granddaughter, Selma Jane Walters, three years old.

Mrs. Kauffman and her husband, Gustave Kauffman, a wealthy confectioner, are endeavoring to escape return to Madison County to answer a charge of contempt of court. During June at a hearing in the Madison County Circuit Court, the Kauffmans were ordered by Judge Louis Bernreuter to turn over the girl to Mrs. Walters.

Instead of taking the child to Edwardsville when they returned home to get her the Kauffmans sent word that she had suddenly contracted whooping cough. The house was under quarantine for eight weeks.

When the quarantine was lifted Mrs. Walters renewed her fight. A writ of attachment was obtained from the Madison County Circuit Court charging the Kauffmans contempt. The accused were placed under arrest, but before a deputy sheriff could serve the warrant they began the habeas corpus proceedings.

It was said yesterday that the Kaufmanns will raise the questions of jurisdiction over the Madison County Court's action. They claim that any action at Peoria will not interfere with the Madison County proceeding.

ZOO BOARD SECRETARY QUITS BECAUSE OF POLITICAL PROTEST

Republican Threat to Block Combination of New Board Members Effective.

Jesse W. Blythe, who was appointed secretary of the Board of Control of the Zoological Garden August 14, and who began his duties Sept. 1, resigned from the office yesterday, following protests to Mayor Kiel by Republican politicians.

In his letter of resignation to Park Commissioner Cunliff, chairman of the Zoo Board, Blythe said:

"The Board will have an excellent opportunity to build up a great Zoo for the people of St. Louis, and I do not desire to hamper this work or the prompt organization of the new board by being the cause of a probable refusal by the legislative body to promptly approve the appointment of the new members of the enlarged board."

Blythe's appointment was opposed by George E. Dieckman, a member of the Zoo Board, who was joined subsequently by Alderman Hall and other Republicans. They objected that Blythe was a Democrat, and announced that unless he resigned the four members of the Zoo Board to be appointed this month, under an ordinance increasing its membership from five to nine, would fail of confirmation. Appointees to the Board must be confirmed by the Board of Aldermen.

When Mayor Kiel, Park Commissioner Cunliff and President Kinsey, of the Board of Public Service, all ex-officio members of the Zoo Board, declared their intention of retaining Blythe as secretary, the political opposition was supplemented by anonymous letters which were sent from some mysterious quarter to Aldermen and other city officials.

At the time of his appointment Blythe was a reporter on a morning paper.

Smartness and Economy

Come in and see our "Country Club" display.

The "Country Club" is the only smart sport model among low priced cars.

And it is as economical as it is smart.

The motor is a wonder—smooth—lively—powerful—yet with a very low consumption of gasoline and oil.

It has cantilever rear springs, which make it exceptionally easy riding and easy on tires.

And it is just as comfortable for a big man as for a little woman to drive, for the front seats are adjustable forward and back.

The Haynes at the Theater

DEPENDABLE Arrival! Here's a most important consideration, that a car shall arrive on schedule. Seems as though most cars should do this, but with the Haynes there's no "seems" about it—it gets there smoothly, easily, safely, punctually.

Style and Performance! "The Golden Section" in art has persisted through the years as the most beautiful optical unit. The lines of the Haynes are equally simple and compelling. It is the one car whose beauty is instantly marked. Here, therefore, is Style. And, however congested the arriving or parking areas, the Haynes is pliantly and gracefully driven in and out under throttle control peculiar to the Haynes only.

A quarter of a century of automobile building gives the Haynes pre-eminence, in symmetry, mechanical correlation and appointment, over all other cars, however much the cost.

Under every social requirement, the Haynes proves the aristocrat—the pride of the owner and a pleasure to the discriminating observer.

As the Haynes, therefore, represents the patronage of the most appreciative element of our citizenship; it is the car numerous on first nights.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—The Times yesterday printed the following cablegram:

London, Sept. 7.—The Daily News prints an article by a diplomatic correspondent, dated some time in August, in the course of which is given the following account of an interview with Pope Benedict:

"Holy father," I began, "I come to you as a member of a race which, like the Jews, has neither temple or country. Our race is dispersed to the four corners of the earth and our country lies under the iron heel of the invader. All these calamities have been occasioned by"——

The Pope: By what, my son?

Myself: Russians?

The Pope: Yes, Russians. They are determined to get Constantinople.

Myself: But the Russian control of Constantinople will not be absolute. Other entente Powers will have certain spheres of influence there.

Program Is Simple.

The Pope, brusquely: Well, well, what do the entente really want? What is their program? No one knows what they want, and they never show any desire to formulate it concretely.

Myself: The program is simple: First of all, disarmament and the annihilation of Prussian militarism.

The Pope: But others must disarm, also.

Myself: Certainly, holy father, but the Prussians must do so first. There must be serious guarantees against an offensive relation of Prussian militarism.

The Pope: And after?

Myself: Restitution of Alsace-Lorraine.

The Pope (with a significant gesture): It is quite understood, and after?

Myself: A new Poland must arise. Austria, as we know it, must disappear. New nations will arise from its ruins. The Austrian Germans will be incorporated in the German Empire, where they will reinforce the comparatively liberal non-Prussian elements against Prussia. Of course, Belgium must be evacuated and indemnified."

Pope Finished Audience.

Myself: It is a program, as I see it, in which there is no need to fear Russia.

The Pope: Russia has never been tender to Catholic interests. Look at the way they treated Catholic priests in the diocese of Lemberg, and then the case of Archbishop Szaptycki. It was scandalous.

Myself: The Germans shot many priests in Belgium.

The Pope finished the audience brusquely, says the correspondent, who then left the papal library.

In an introductory statement the correspondent says the Pope is not Germanophile, but that distrust of Russia is "an absolute obsession with him." The peace appeal was not dictated by Austria, but Benedict XV is Austrophile.

"Italians believe," adds the correspondent, "that the present Pope is satisfied with the solution of the Roman question, which has prevailed for close to 50 years. The reverse is the case. The Pope, so far as this question is concerned, is more Jesuit than the Jesuits. In conversation he constantly refers to the need for a fresh solution of this thorny problem.

Favors a Free Church.

"Temporal as well as spiritual freedom, he believes, is absolutely necessary to the head of the Catholic Church. His desire to put an end to the calamities of the present war is largely due to humanitarian motives. The war is so terrible and atrocious that an end of it, he thinks, absolutely imperative.

"Three main motives to which the recent papal appeal is ascribed are:

"1. A desire to obtain a seat in the peace congress at which the question of the temporal power may be reconsidered by the principal world Powers.

"2. Fear of offending powerful German Catholics, thereby incidentally giving an impetus to the German modernist school at Munich, which before the war had become restive and undisciplined LONDONfi Sept. 8.—The clerical press has toned down in marked way in its hostile attitude toward those who do not approve of the Pope's recent peace note, according to the Milan correspondent of the London Times. Most significant, he says, is an interview published in former Premier Cioletti's paper, The Stampa, with a leading prelate, who said: "It is useless to conceal the fact that Catholic harmony is now passing through a hard trial. The contrast between the Pope's note and President Wilson's reply might serve to initiate a moral discord.

"3. Fear lest the Austrian Empire, the greatest of Catholic Powers, should suffer shipwreck."

Clerical Press Tones Down Condemnation of President's Reply to Pope.

'President Wilson has hurled a moral condemnation at the German program, while the Catholic Holy See has dissembled and kept quiet—dissembled regarding the future by placing all belligerents on the same footing for the making of peace, and kept silent regarding the past. President Wilson has given the maximum condemnation to German war methods, but the Vatican has not even given the minimum.

"We Catholics ask: What voice has kept silent and keeps silent in the midst of the unanimous execration aroused by the German violations of justice and humanity? And to give Germany a sensation of the abyss which she has opened for herself by beginning the war and which grows deeper as she makes necessary the continuance of the war, what voice is lacking.

"When President Wilson proposed peace a year and a half ago no one had made any revelations or furnished proofs of Germany's war aims. Since then two new facts have arisen. The entente has furnished America with declarations and proofs to which the American President has yielded. The central empires have given America proofs which the President has condemned.

'Could the whole Christian world look on insensible of the contrast between the ninintervention of the Vatican and the moral and real intervention of America?"

The Stampa states that the opinions expressed in the interview will be subject of a memorial to be presented to the Vatican.

Try This Test Yourself
It Proves the Wonderful Value of Saxon "Six"

Bear in mind the price of Saxon Six—$935 f. o. b. Detroit.

Then look among the costly cars and see whether cars of far higher price have these same features.

If they do, that is absolute proof of the high quality of Saxon "Six" and the remarkable value it is.

Saxon "Six" at $935 has a Continental six-cylinder motor. So have 12 other cars ranging in price from $1115 to $2200.

Saxon "Six" at $935 has Timken axles. So have 19 other cars ranging in price from $1115 to $4000.

Saxon "Six" at $935 has Timken bearings. So have 11 other cars ranging in price from $1250 to $5000.

Saxon "Six" at $935 has the Stromberg carburetor. So have 9 other cars ranging in price from $1115 to $4000.

Saxon "Six" at $935 has the Remy ignition. So have 9 other cars ranging in price from $1175 to $4000.

Saxon "Six" at $935 has the Fedders radiator. So have 16 other cars ranging in price from $1175 to $6300.

Saxon "Six" at $935 has the Spiral bevel gear. So have 18 other cars ranging in price from $1115 to $10,000.

Saxon "Six" at $935 has the semi-floating axle. So have 11 other cars ranging in price from $1200 to $4800.

Saxon "Six" at $935 has the Exide storage battery. So have 9 other cars ranging in price from $1145 to $4800.

There's the evidence. It's the straightest, clearest proof ever offered as to the value and quality of any car.

It sets Saxon "Six" above the claims of all other cars, within $200 or $300 of its price.

We quoted you $935 f. o. b. Detroit as the price of Saxon "Six." That is true. But with manufacturing costs going up and up it may not remain long at that price. So place your order now.

STATE CHAMPION LOW MEDALIST IN CITY GOLF EVENT

DONOVAN, WINNER OF CADDY TITLE, SECOND

Play in the first annual city championship golf tournament was started on the new public course in Forest Park, yesterday, when 61 title aspirants braved water-logged links and defied pneumonia weather conditions to compete in the qualifying round.

Although the entry as regards to number, was hardly an auspicious one, the field of starters in the medal play round included as brilliant array of talent. Nine of the qualifiers for the first round match play were contenders for the recent local district title.

The quality of the title flight is shown by the presence of the state champion, city champion, a former state title-holder, two former city champions, the present city caddy king, and the first Japanese golfer that ever entered a city title tournament in the United States.

Eighty players entered but a sore of the less dauntless ones failed to appear. Rain, and the results of Friday night's cloudburst probably hurt the scores, as the usual "roll" was absent, while the greens were dead heavy.

Manion Has Low Card.

James Manion, the present State and Municipal champion, was the only player to break into the seventies and therefore was low medalist of the tournament. He made a 40 on his outward journey and came home with a 39, making his total one above the 78 bogey. He took a six on the initial hole and another half dozen on the home hole. His score by holes was as follows:

Out	6	4	4	5	5	3	4	4	5	—40
In	3	5	4	5	5	4	4	3	6	—39—79

Right behind the State champion was Frank Donovan, who as a caddy of the St. Louis Country Club, recently won the Post-Dispatch Caddy Golf Championship tournament held on the public course. Donovan turned in an 82, which included a 6 and a 7. During the caddy play, Donovan made a 76 and a 77, the former score giving him the Post-Dispatch gold medal for low medalist honors. He is at present playing splendid golf and seems ripe to give the more matured players a struggle for the championship.

Five Tied at 83.

Five of the city's best men tied for third honors with 83 cards. Roger E. Lord of Algonquin, former State champion; Frank Lynch, erstwhile Municipal title holder; Christian Kenney, present holder of the St. Louis district supremacy; Stuart Stickney of the St. Louis Country Club, a former city champion, and Paul Buesse all came home in the same score.

The one big surprise of the day as regards scores was that turned in by Arthur Stickney, another Country Club player. He made a 93. The Stickney brothers, Kenney and Manion formed a qualifying foursome which attracted a large gallery. The 91 of M. J. Crichton, whose 73 is a medal play record of the course also disappointed many of the public links devotees.

Togo Hamamato playing in his first tournament qualified with a 95. He has only been playing since last October. Togo stated after the match that his putting was very bad, as he missed no less than 14 green shots that should have been made.

The low 32 scored qualified for the championship class, while 16 went into the Class A, and the remaining 13 in Class B. Three byes were given in the lowest class.

The match between Ellsworth Smith of Triple A and Frank Donovan is the feature contest for the first round. That between Paul Buesse and M. J. Crichton also appears to be a match worth following. The entrants have until Monday night to finish the first round.

Maxwelton Meet Financial Failure, Promoter States

Joseph A. Murphy, After Reciting Story of Losses, Hints at Revival to Be Held Here Next Year—Bookies Asked to Help Out, Track Gossip Says.

Three thousand hard-eyed, unresponsive mourners saw Joe Murphy's "betless" horse racing meet pass out, yesterday at Maxwelton, after surviving a bitter ten-day fight for existence. There was no pomp and little glamor about the last rites.

Although it was the last day of the meeting—perchance the final view St. Louisans will ever obtain of such a spectacle—neither a cheer nor a handclapp was heard as Lady Rowena wallowed home, a muddy, sloppy winner in the sixth race. Men and women wended their way silently through the exits, bookmakers pocketed their pads and pencils, and officials, after a last look at the water-logged track, plodded stolidly into the clubhouse, there to talk it over.

There was just a thin streak of optimism in the spectrum of gloom and it emanated from Joe Murphy, presiding judge and chief promoter of the meeting. After it was all over and the dripping jockeys had shelved their saddles, Murphy said:

"Meeting a Failure"—Murphy.

"The meeting, frankly, has been a financial failure. How badly I cannot say. But what we have lost in money we have made up for by at least reviving the game. I will readily admit that promoting a race meeting is too big a job for one man. I feel under the circumstances that I have succeeded beyond my hopes.

"With a better track and improved facilities, I believe St. Louis will support racing and by that I mean the better kind.

"I am now working to combine Chicago, Detroit and St. Louis into a unit and use it as a basis for reviving racing generally in the West. My plan is for each to have its own jockey club and when these are formed to merge them and organize a Western governing body. I also hope that legalized racing with consequent control by the State is not far away.

Would Ban Liquor.

"Viewing this meeting as I have watched it, I can find but one serious fault. Unfortunately, when I leased Maxwelton Park, I acquired control only of the track and grandstand. I had nothing to say about the grounds. If I had, I would never have tolerated the open selling of liquor. That was a serious mistake, but it won't occur again."

Murphy's statement indicates a plan to stage another meeting here next spring, although he would not admit that such was his idea.

It was reported at the track, yesterday, that the bookmakers who "cut in" yesterday were asked to contribute $50 each and that the same sum had been asked Friday. Prior to that date the bookies operating had contributed $37.50 daily toward helping out the meeting. Two or three bookmakers are said to have admitted to close friends that they had contributed.

The races, including those of yesterday, have been featured by upsets, long shots heavily played going over in many instances, while favorites have had only indifferent success. The track has been in poor shape during the entire 10 days. On at least four days it was deep in mud and even when dry, its surface is made up of large "clods" of dirt, making it exceedingly rough and perilous on the sharp turns.

Killing on Athletic Girl.

The "best thing" at long odds which cashed at the meeting was probably Athletic Girl, who on the second day went over at 10 to 1 and repeated on the sixth day at 9 to 2. On the first occasion she was not so heavily backed, but the second time she carried a load and one bookmaker readily admitted she cost him $6000, and brought him down to a $5000 loss on the day she ran.

Aside from the first and second races yesterday, the long shots had the call. Freeman, winner of the third race, was over at 9 to 2, Money, in the fourth, took 5 to 1, Night Cap, in the fifth, the same price and Lady Rowena in the final event cashed at 12 to 1. None of these, however, were heavily played and as they beat the favorites, made it a day for the bookies.

One of the peculiarities of the meeting was the fact that horses against whom large odds were established generally won the final race of each day. Athletic Girl, 10 to 1, took the final race on the second day; Dental 3 to 1, the sixth race of the fifth day; Athletic Girl, 9 to 2, the last event of the sixth day; Toddling, 6 to 1, on the seventh, Menlo Park, 4 to 1; on the ninth and Lady Rowena, 12 to 1, yesterday.

Long Shots Go Over.

Some of the best long shots to place in the money were Key Mar, who was rated at 15 to 1 in the second race on the second day and won; John Hyner, who placed second at 10 to 1, and was quoted 20 to 1 to win in the first race on the third day; Biddy who won the fifth race on Labor Day at 12 to 1, and Lady Rowena who took yesterday's sixth race at 12 to 1. Several 8 to 1 and 6 to 1 shots also "panned," but as a rule, the bookmakers kept the prices down to the limit.

But three jockeys were disciplined during the ten days, two of them having been barred from the track while the third was suspended for three days. Open charges of a "fixed race" were made but once and as no proof was offered to substantiate the charge, this was overlooked by the officials.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Running true to the form he frequently displayed in races this season, George W. Tofts, chestnut colt Papp, Peter Quinio-Phebe G, won the futurity stakes at the Belmont Park Race course today. Carrying 127 pounds and nicely piloted by Jockey Allen, Papp, the public choice, was always prominent in the leading division and coming away in the final furlong, won handily by three lengths and Escoba, which finished second, a nose in front of Rosie O'Grady, the leader for three-fourths of the journey.

The track was sloppy on top but firm underneath and the winner's time of 1:12 was very good.

Twelve two-year-olds made up the field for the classic event. Thistle and Star Class were scratched, but J. W. Corrigan added Royal Ensign, so that he was doubly represented in the event, as Rapu also ran for him, but finished last. A. K. McComber also had a pair in Tracksend and War Machine, and James Butler's Top Coat and Bantry were also coupled, making the third entry in the classy field.

Top Coat was fourth and his stable companion, Bantry, finished fifth, another length back. War Machine was sixth, with Debadou next and the others finishing in the following order: Gold Tassel, Royal Ensign, Tracksend, Chief Lally and Rapu.

The total value of the stake was $20,625, of which the winner's share was $15,450.

BOYS SWIM RACE 3 TIMES BEFORE VICTOR IS NAMED

A 40-yard race between 14-year-old Frederick Anheuser, and 11-year-old Russell Broyer which, owing to two dead heats, had to be contested a third time before the former youth was awarded the race, featured a novel children's swimming program at the Sunset Hill outdoor pool yesterday afternoon. The aquatic meet was held in the interest of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund, all ticket receipts being turned over for that cause.

The most brilliant performer of the afternoon was 14-year-old Eppes Hawes, who won the fancy diving contest for girls, gave an exhibition purporting a porpoise in action, and then left her class to win the 40-yard swim for girls over 15 years of age.

Another heated contest of the day was that in which August A. Busch, Jr., won the 40-yard swimming contest for boys over 15 years old. James Meyer was second in this race.

An event that attracted interest was the high and lofty diving of Cornell's Kids. Roger Cornell is the swimming and physical director of the new club and trained yesterday's juvenile contestants for their competition.

O'CONNOR, CENTRAL FOOTBALL WONDER, GOES TO ALABAMA

Star Kicker of Red and Black Eleven Will Matriculate at Southern School Monday.

Central High's crack backfield star and goal booter, Talty O'Connor, will depart tonight for Alabama University, where he expects to be enrolled as a student, in the next few days.

O'Connors great work for Walker's team last year attracted favorable comment on all sides and he was the recipient of several invitations to enroll at universities in the Middle West.

O'Connor's great work for Walkhim of exceptional value in an emergency, when a boot might decide the issue in a close contest.

Alabama expects to have a strong team this year. It plays Vanderbilt and the other big schools of the South which have decided to maintain football elevens.

Owing to the fact that the entire Georgia University eleven, including its coach, have joined the army, that institution will be represented in the Southern intercollegiate contests this year. This fact leaves a vacant Thanksgiving date which the Alabama authorities are eager to fill. Any good team from the Middle West is eligible for this engagement.

GOODWIN TO PITCH IN ONE OF BATTLES WITH MATTY'S OUTFIT TODAY

CINCINNATI, Sept. 8.—With today's game between the Cardinals and Reds called off because of rain, the two clubs are scheduled to meet in a double-header tomorrow. It will be the final appearance of Miller Huggins' aggregation here this season.

Lee Meadows, the be-spectacled righthander, and Marvin Goodwin, the $15,000 rookie, who has made good in his outs since joining the St. Louis team, will be on the hill for Huggins. Fred Toney and probably Pete Schneider are due for Matty.

After the contests tomorrow the Cardinals depart for home to open a series with the Pirates on Monday.

OUIMET AND GUILFORD WIN FOUR-BALL MATCH

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Francis Ouimet and Jesse Guilfora, the Boston golfers, won the four-ball match which was begun at Brae Burn Club last Saturday by seven up and six to play on the links of the Baltusrol Club, Short Hills, N. Y., today. In the first half of the match last week at Brae Burn, the New England golfers were one up. At the close of the first round today Jerome Travers and Oswald Kirkby were three down and never obtained a lead during the contest.

INCLEMENT WEATHER STOPS CLUB GOLFERS

Yesterday's inclement weather conditions immediately following the rains of Friday night stopped what was to have been an attractive golf program at the clubs in and about the city.

Qualifying round of the Algonquin Club championship tournament was postponed until next Saturday. Second round play in the handicap tournament at the Normandie Golf Club for the Ford trophies was also set over until a later date. One day tourneys at Bellerive, Westwood, and Midland Valley also were postponed.

NEW HAVEN WINS FLAG

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 8.—The Eastern Baseball League closed its season today with New Haven in first place by a good margin. Lawrence finished second and New London, third. New Haven took the lead early in the season an maintained it throughout.

Veteran of Many Big Suits, Browns' Owner Not Worried by $50,000 Ones

Philip DeC. Ball, owner of the Browns, stated yesterday that he had nothing to say in regard to the $50,000 damage suits filed against him by both John Lavan and Derrill Pratt, further than that he had not yet been served with the papers.

Ball expects to be served bright and early Monday morning. However, he seems little worried. He has gone through several legal tangles since he entered baseball and expects to come out of this one O. K.

"Well, this makes an even million dollars organized baseball has been sued for," said Mr. Ball, adding the Baltimore Federals' $800,000 suit to the ones filed by Lavan and Pratt. Ball has also figured in suits connected with the Marsans and Rickey cases and was party to the Federal League suit against organized baseball.

Tigers Play Final Today.

The Detroit Tigers and Ty Cobb will make their final appearance of the season here this afternoon in a double-header against the Browns, starting at 1:30 o'clock. Allan Sothoron and Tom Rogers will probably twirl for Fielder Jones, while Howard Ehmke and Bill James are due for the Tigers.

Soldiers to Be On Hand.

Battery A, with about 700 members and Capt. Horace Rumsey will be on hand for today's battles. Between the games, Capt. Rumsey will present the Brown players with the $500 check, which they won in the recent drill exhibitions in the American League. Secretary Willis Johnson also announced that any soldier in uniform would be admitted to the park.

Stars Have Tough Time.

The two star batters—Ty Cobb and George Sisler—had a tough time of it yesterday afternoon. The Tiger finally wound up 1 up on his rival. After four failures Cobb punched out the triple that wound up the conflict, while Sisler was unable to hit safely in five trips to the plate. On the series Cobb has the edge, having made two hits in eight attempts, while Sis has two in nine.

Bob Steele Witnesses Game.

Bob Steele, the former Cardinal southpaw, but now with the Pittsburg Pirates, arrived two days ahead of his mates and witnessed the game from the stand. Steele has pitched in four of the last seven games played by the Corsairs. Since leaving this city, the left hander also has developed into something of a batter.

Groom Has Perfect Control.

Bob Groom had perfect control, not issuing a base on balls, although several times the batter had him 3—2. His best pitching was to Cobb in the sixth, when after working the call to 3—2, Ty fouled off three before raising to Sisler. Dauss handed out two bits of transportation, Lavan being the lucky one on both occasions.

PRATT AND LAVAN PLAY GREAT GAME AS BROWNS LOSE

Filing of $50,000 Suits Against Club's Owners Fails to React on Work of Aggrieved Players.

A three-ply hit by Tyrus Raymond Cobb, the leading batter in the American League, made in the twelfth inning, after he had failed to get the ball out of the infield on his first four appearances at the plate, followed by Veach's sacrifice fly to Jacobson, gave the Tigers a 1-0 victory over the Browns in a brilliantly pitched duel between George Dauss and Bob Groom yesterday.

The "$100,000 twins," Dr. John Lavan and Derrill Burnham Pratt, were in the game—and up to their necks at that. True, Lavan made one error, in the first inning, but neither has displayed better fielding in a long time than that on exhibition yesterday. Pratt also rapped out two of the five hits the Browns were able to make off Dauss.

Lavan acted as the middle man in three double plays that saved Groom a world of trouble. "Dr. John" broke into the spot-light in the very first inning. He gave Vitt a life on a wide throw, but made up for it a minute later. Cobb sent a mean bounder to Sisler, who threw to Lavan, forcing Vitt. Quicker than it takes to tell Lavan shot the ball back to Sisler for a double killing. It takes speed to get Cobb on the closing end of a double play as Tyrus is by no means slow.

Lavan Shines Nine Times.

During the course of the afternoon Lavan had 10 chances and accepted nine of them. One of his best was against Heilman in the fourth. With Veach on first, Heilman grounded to Pratt, who threw late to Lavan to force Veach, but the latter by a hurried throw, managed to nip Heilman by a step.

Lavan also had the honor of being the first Brown batter to reach first, he working George Dauss for a pass in the third inning. He also was one of the three men for the local club, who reached second base against Dauss' effective twirling.

The other half of the "$100,000 suit" handled eight chances without a slip, and started one of the double plays. Pratt also was responsible for the Browns' second hit, a little tap in front of the plate in the tenth, which bounced the wrong way. He connected for another safe rap, after two batters had been retired in the final frame.

Only 400 Spectators Present.

The game itself, which was witnessed by not more than 400 persons, was one of the greatest hurling duels seen here in some days, while it also was the fastest played in St. Louis in a good many seasons. It took just 95 minutes to stage the full 12 frames, while only 65 were needed to get the first nine out of the way. This is not close to the major league record, however, as on Oct. 2, 1913, the Phillies and Giants played a complete contest in 33 minutes.

Up to the sixth inning, George Dauss had pushed the Browns away from the plate as fast as they came up, only one, Lavan on a pass, reaching the initial sack. Ernie Johnson, first up in the sixth, shot a single just out of Burns' reach, shattering Dauss' hopes of a no-hit game. No more hits came for the Browns until the tenth. The Browns made four in the last three frames.

So effective was Dauss' work that not a Brownie batter reached third base, while only three got as far as second, Johnson in the sixth, Pratt in the tenth and Lavan in the following frame. In all only seven of Jones' men saw the first sack.

Bob Groom was not far behind Dauss in effectiveness. He gave seven safe raps and allowed eight Tigers to reach first. In the regulation number of rounds, four hits were made off him, two in the second, one in the fourth and one in the eighth. He was found for one in each of the final three frames.

The blowoff came after Vitt had been retired in the twelfth. Cobb banged one up against the right field wall for three sacks and Veach followed with a fly to Jacobson. The latter made a return that was 20 feet wide of the plate and the Peach scored standing up.

CUBS WALLOP MILLER AND GO OVER, 6 TO 2

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 8.—Chicago marked its last appearance here by winning from Pittsburg, 6 to 2. Hendrix and Miller, who started the game, were both forced to retire. In the seventh, with the score tied, Hendrix allowed the first two men to single and Vaughn relieved him, retiring the side runless. In the next inning, Miller was hit for a single, a double and a triple. Grimes took his place and allowed another single, the inning producing three runs. Two singles and a sacrifice scored another run in the ninth. Score:

"Willard Has Gone Back, Fulton Might Beat Him;" Former Manager Thinks

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.

TOM JONES, former manager of Jess Willard, heavyweight champion of the world, in an interview today said Fred Fulton has a good chance to defeat Willard if matched, and is of the opinion they will be brought together soon. Jones said:

"Fulton can't be blamed for complaining in any of his three fights with Morris. This is particularly true of the Canton fight, which he fought after going through two similar rough experiences.

"Morris' system of falling into his man and using his head under the chin and his gloves most any place will bother anybody, if a referee permits it.

"It is certain in my mind that the Willard of three years ago could whip any heavyweight that ever lived, including the Fulton of today. But Willard has only had one 10-round fight in all that time and probably is not as good now and won't be when he starts again. Fulton is the only person with a chance to whip him, and he may do more with Jess than his traducers expect."

HAROLD LONG CAPTURES RIDGEDALE CADDY TITLE

The first annual Caddy Tournament of the Ridgedale Country Club has just been finished, and the winner of the championship class was Harold Long, runner-up in the city caddy title event. Long also was the low medalist, turning in a score of 82 for the course. The second boy in the championship flight was James McManus. The prize for both was gold watches.

The winner of Class A, John Brussels, and Ray Donohue was the winner in class B. The prizes in each class was a suit of clothes. The runner-up in both classes was presented with his choice of a golf club from the stock of the club professional.

The September Members' Tournament is now being played and the finals will be held next week. The winners of the various classes will be matched in special games to play under their regular handicaps, and this will probably be a feature of each of the monthly tournaments that are being held at the club.

HASKELL INDIANS OPEN WITH 24 FOOTBALL MEN

TOPEKA, Kan., Sept. 8.—With twenty-four men out for practice the first night, football prospects at the Haskell Institute are considered bright. Eight of the men were old letter men while among the new recruits for the team there were some promising material, according to A. M. Venne, physical director, who is acting as football coach.

It is expected that a football coach will be obtained within a week. Gus Welch, who was to have coached the Haskell squad this year, entered the training camp at Fort Niagara. In the meantime Director Venne will coach the team for its first game with Ottawa University, Sept. 29. This year's schedule is lighter than it has been for many years, but hard games are looked for with such teams as those of Rice Institute, Houston, Tex.; Mississippi Aggies, Memphis, Kendall College and Bethany.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Have Him Examined, Men!

BYRON BANCROFT JOHNSON, the man who put the toot in astute, and the Ban in banquet—he never missed one—and who is also known as the single cylinder engine which makes the American League run, is "missing" badly of late.

The big motor has "bucked" alarmingly, on several occasions, indicating that somebody must have thrown a monkey wrench into the mechanism, or else that that Byron is slipping a bit.

Not long ago Ban drew a scathing denunciation by Charles A. Comiskey by stating that he wasn't sure there would be a world's championship series, by doubting that there would be any major league baseball next season and by other pessimistic speeches. The Old Roman grilled the big general with the burning words:

"You can hardly expect baseball to succeed when an advance agent like him"—Johnson—"goes around knocking it," or words to that effect.

Knocking St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS wasn't directly affected by that. It's world's series chatter still center on the famous winners of 1888, not on future pennants. Hope is almost dead.

But Ban has stung us to life by the statement, issued recently, that "only two cities in the country could support two major league clubs—Chicago and New York."

He said other things which left the inference that St. Louis was a poor baseball town.

In view of the fact that two St. Louis teams have made money practically every year for the past 15 or 16 seasons, in normal times, and that, with one exception, fourth place or worse has been the lot of all local clubs during that period, Johnson's statement breaks down completely.

It is a known fact that the Browns ran the $30,000 investment of Mr. Hedges into $400,000 in 12 years, and made money for other stockholders besides.

In one year the Hedges' team made $160,000. Only once, the first year of its existence, did it run better than fourth. It was last more than once, and lower than fifth a majority of the seasons since it came to this city.

Extravagance Hurt Cards.

THE Cardinals, despite schism, ruinous lack of business efficiency, petticoat management and an ancient and obsolete grand stand, made money for its owners who threw it away lavishly on personal extravagances in some instances. In one year this club made $120,000, and did not finish in the upper set at that.

When Johnson says two major league teams can not be made to pay in this city he makes a mistake. This city has supported baseball for 29 years and, despite that many pennant disappointments, is still one of the best ball centers in the United States.

Other Cities O K.

FURTHERMORE, Byron Bancroft has indicted other cities not properly subject to criticism. Boston has been a wonderful place, in responding to baseball. Whenever the team has at all justified, it has repaid many times over.

The fact that the Braves were able to build an $800,000 plant and that the Red Sox sold for over half a million dollars seems not to have made an impression on Ban Johnson, as indicating the financial estimation in which the franchises of these clubs were held.

Philadelphia is the one double-club city which may be charged with non-support. The memorable instance in which Connie Mack broke up his world's championship team because he lost money with the greatest machine in the country, will never be forgotten. It stands as a lasting exemplification of the fact that it is sometimes better to run second or third than first.

Sated with world's series and league triumphs, the fans of Philadelphia accepted the strong American League club as a matter of course and failed to attend its home games.

Baltimore Tried, Failed.

BALTIMORE, on the other hand, is a city that has been looked upon with disfavor as a major league town, owing to the large percentage of colored population. It's past experiences have convinced many baseball promoters that it is not of major league caliber. If it were a matter of shifting any team from a city now maintaining two major league contenders to Baltimore, probably not one owner could be found to vote for such a thing.

However, it is by no means an impossibility that the Washington franchise will be transferred. Washington has for several years disappointed its club owners. Last year its attendance fell off 30 per cent, and this year the 1916 "gate" has almost been cut in two. Days when fewer than 500 persons have been present have been numerous this season.

Baltimore could not do worse than that, and the transfer of the Washington franchise would undoubtedly take place, but for the fact that Clark Griffith and the Washington owners oppose this move bitterly.

As a matter of policy in placating the irate Baltimoreans, who lost skads of money in their Federal League venture, and again threaten suit, Washington may be offered up on the altar of sacrifice and its franchise shifted.

PHILLIES ARE HELD TO AN EVEN BREAK BY BOSTON BRAVES

Lavender Forces In Winning Run in Opener — Moranmen Grab Night Cap, 5-3.

BOSTON, Sept. 8.—Boston won the first game today from Philadelphia in 10 innings, 4 to 3, when Lavender issued two bases on balls, the second forcing over the winning run. Philadelphia staged a two-run rally in the ninth inning of the second game, however, and won, 5 to 3. These two runs were the result of Killefer's single, Rawlings' error, a sacrifice by Dugey, pinch-hitter, Bancroft's sacrifice fly and a single by Stock. Both teams switched their lineup. Scores:

De Oro's Title and $1100 Held Up Until Protest Is Decided

AFTER a long discussion held yesterday afternoon in the offices of the Brunswick-Balke Co., it was decided that the protest of Robert Cannefax against the awarding of the three-cushion championship to Alfred De Oro would be taken under advisement.

Until such time as the point is decided, $1100, representing $500 stakes and $600 gate receipts, will be withheld from the veteran cueist.

De Oro won the recent match with Cannefax 150 to 148. Protest was filed on the ground that the event should have been forfeited to Cannefax by the referee for unnecessary delay by the Cuban. De Oro denies emphatically that he violated any rules.

Municipal Teams Open Elimination Series This P. M.

Four Games Are Scheduled to Be Played at Fairground and One at C. A. C. Field.

What is expected to prove the feature contest today, will be that on Grounds No. 2 at Fairground in which the Wagners, finalists last season, will tackle the Traffic Club of the City League. Another good battle should be that between the C. A. C. and Triple A at the Tangled C campus.

The complete schedule for today:

1. If a watermelon that costs 1 cents wholesale is cut into 32 slices, how much will the consumer have to pay for one slice?

Answer. Fifteen cents.

Answer. Fifteen cents.

3. If a hen and a half lays an egg and a half in a day and half and the wholesale price of one egg is a cent and a half, how much would the consumer have to pay for two hard-boiled eggs cooked for six minutes and a half.

Answer. One dollar and a half, due to the high price of egg coal.

FEW MOTOR CARS are road tested by their manufacturers in these days of frenzied production. The cost in time and in money is too great. The delays for needed adjustments result in congestion. Speed, speed, speed,—every other consideration must be sacrificed for speed, and for economy of factory operation.

The Westcott engineers hold to the opposite ideals of efficiency. They regard the perfect performance of every Westcott Car to be their fundamental obligation. Every unit in Westcott construction is the best of the best. Workmanship is rigidly held in check by exacting superintendence. But the supreme check, after all, is the scientific check of road performance.

This is why every Westcott is road tested by Westcott experts before shipment. This is why every Westcott comes to us, and through us to the buyer, ready to outperform all rivals in any contest of hill climbing, low throttling, acceleration, ranges of speed and all around roadability.

STUDEBAKER DEALER GIVES FINAL WARNING

"The time for quick action is here," says Edward Weber of the Weber Motor Car Co., distributor of Studebaker cars for St. Louis and vicinity, "and I urge all intending purchasers of a motor car to improve their time this week and place their order for a Studebaker. The trip home, a distance of 1610 miles, was made in seven days and not once was it necessary to open the tool box. An average of 12½ miles to the gallon of gasoline was made over the entire route.

The Bailey Auto Body and Sales Co., 2113 Olive street, are displaying new styles of bodies especially designed for the New Ford Ton Truck. One of the new Bailey bodies was mounted on the Ford truck and exhibited during the week by the Bilgere & Kavanaugh, and the Vigar Reifling Ford agencies.

The Miller Tire Service Co., of which Arthur S. Fischell, widely known in St. Louis theatrical circles, is president, announces that its advances in prices on Miller Tires will not occur until Sept. 15.

General Manager Smith of the Overland Automobile Co. of St. Louis announces the appointment of H. F. Henry as manager of the wholesale sales department. Henry comes from the Clemens Automobile Co. of Des Moines, Io., where he occupied a similar position.

Five models of the Olympian were exhibited last week at the State Fair in Springfield in charge of H. H. Speeny, sales manager of the Welling Motor Co., who was assisting Charles Bradley, the new Olympian agent at Springfield.

Nelson and Black, distributors for the Haesslor shock absorbers, have opened a branch at 3217 Locust street.

A Grant owner, driving from San Antonio to New York, stopped at the St. Louis Grant Motor Co. last week and reported that he had averaged 19½ miles to the gallon for the entire trip so far, in spite of the very muddy roads that he had encountered.

W. H. Cook of the Supreme Motor Car Co., reports the sale of a Stutz roadster to Emil Harms of the Peter Hauptman Tobacco Co.

H. P. Mammen, who recently resigned the post of sales manager of the Westcott company at the Springfield, O., headquarters to become president of the Traffic Truck Co. in St. Louis, made the run from Springfield to this city in a Westcott car. Almost the entire trip was made in mud and slush without the slightest mishap.

LOCAL TRADE WILL HOLD CLOSED CAR EXHIBIT

St. Louis is to have a fall and winter car exhibit Oct. 8 to 13. This decision was reached by the Board of Directors of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association, at a meeting held Tuesday at the Marquette Hotel, and attended by practically all of the directors. The plan is practically the same as when Automobile Open Week was held the first week in October, 1916, except that the 1917 showing will be much more elaborate as to scale, and that its purpose will be to show for the first time, only closed or winter use cars.

In order to concentrate the trade and make visiting by the public as convenient as possible, all automobile dealers who are members of the association will be located on Locust street, between Nineteenth street and Channing avenue. To accomplish this the firms on Locust street will divide their space with members who are not located on Locust street, so that wherever a salesroom is large enough to accommodate two dealers, two or more cars will be shown there, and signs on the outside of the building will show this. The association will also print a directory of locations, so that the visitors to a salesroom can tell by the directory at what number on Locust street every car represented in St. Louis can be found.

During the week all of the display rooms will be kept open until 10 o'clock p. m., and all will be elaborately decorated with flowers, smilax and other greens, the fall hues probably being used. During the day a band will parade through the downtown district in a motor truck, playing catchy airs to attract attention to the signs on the sides of the truck, announcing the fall and winter car exhibit on Locust street.

The dealers are now wiring to their factories for immediate shipments of closed jobs, so that the displays will include a full line of limousines, sedans, coupes, landaulets, and other cars suitable for fall and winter driving. The accessory trade will cooperate in the movement by keeping open the same hours, and making special displays of lines suitable for fall and winter cars.

At the meeting of the Board of Directors, the membership in the National Association of Automobile Dealers was confirmed and the Davie Motor Car Co., handlers of the Stephens Six car was elected to membership in the association. Two members were dropped from the roster for delinquency.

SPALDING TO MANAGE CADILLAC SELLING

Announcement is made that Henry W. Spalding has been appointed general salesmanager of the Cadillac Automobile Co. of St. Louis by president I. G. McNiece of that company. He will assume his new duties Monday morning.

Spalding came to St. Louis from Omaha in 1915 as general manager of the Packard-Missouri Motor Co., and has gained a prominent position in local automobile trade circles. He is a director of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association and chairman of its Show Committee, and is a member of a number of local clubs and organizations.

NIGHT FORD SERVICE.

X. L. Taylor, formerly with the St. Louis branch of the Ford Motor Co., and one of the best-known Ford mechanics in the city, is service manager of the Johnson Automobile Co., local Ford dealers. This company, which has been selling Ford cars in St. Louis continuously for 10 years, will put into effect about Sept. 15 night and day service. W. L. Johnson, president of the company, states that the growing demand for service, especially from commercial users of Ford cars, has induced his company to inaugurate the night service.

KARDELL T SELL DORT IN ST. LOUIS TERRITORY

An interesting announcement is made by the Kardell Motor Co. of St. Louis, that the company has taken the distributing agency for 60 counties in Illinois, including Quincy, and the eastern half of Missouri, from Iowa to Arkansas for the Dort car. The Dort is built by the Dort Motor Car Co. of Flint, Mich.

According to H. F. Fahrenkrog of the Kardell company, the company will handle the Dort in connection with the Reo line which it has handled for many years, and in most instances, Fahrenkrog thinks that the Reo dealers in the surrounding territory will also take on the Dort lines, as the two are not competitive.

John D. Mansfield of the Dort Motor Car Co. says of the new connection: "We feel that in the Kardell Motor Car Co. we have secured the best possible representation, and we look for a widening of the popularity which the Dort has always enjoyed in the St. Louis territory. We will allot sufficient cars to meet the fullest St. Louis demand, which unfortunately we have not always been able to do in the past. Our factory facilities have been increased to take car of this.

ARMOURED CAR BUILT ON KING 8 CHASSIS

St. Louis had its first view of an armoured car last week when the machine purchased by the Home Guards reached the city. The car is a King eight mounted with an armoured body made by the Armoured Motor Car Co of Philadelphia.

The car is of the type used by the United States Government for the Marine Corps, and is made by the Philadelphia concern under Government supervision, acording to an official of the King factory.

"The engineers of both the army and navy spent a great deal of time at the King factory testing the flexibility of the King motor and the staunchness of the chassis construction," continues the official. "Not only was the finished product examined but the quality of materials and the manufacturing methods, as well, were investigated.

"The result of the investigation was that the King chassis was adopted and plans for the armoured car drawn accordingly, the entire production of the Armoured Motor Car Co. being fitted to the chassis of the King eight."

NEWELL CHOOSES LINE NAME STILL A SECRET

J. E. Newell announced last week that he had chosen his new line, but at present he refuses to divulge the name of the car upon which he has decided.

"We have been in no hurry to choose a car to recommend to the public," said Newell. "Our future success depends upon the merit of the line that we sell and we have been slow and careful in making our choice."

"We had to be sold on the car, the factory and the factory organization, before we would consent to endorse it over our signature. We insisted that the factory be of such financial standing that we would be certain that it was a lasting proposition."

"The car itself, we have given tests that no owner would think of asking. There was many makes offered us but we gradually eliminated them for one reason or another. Although we do not want to make public the name now, it will be announced very shortly."

MANY WOMEN ATTEND MOTOR CAR SCHOOL

The women of St. Louis are taking readily to the idea of free motor car instruction that is to be given by Harry Newman, Inc., the St. Louis Kissel Kar distributor.

Several hundred have already sent in their application for the classes which are to be open to all women. The original plan as worked out by Mr. Newman was to have but one class. It has been found necessary to make three classes in order to properly handle the applicants.

The first class will start its lectures this week and will meet each Tuesday and Friday morning for five weeks. The days of the second and third classes will be announced later.

The second floor of the building has been arranged as a class room and the course of instruction will be through lectures, using the chassis of the Hundred Point Six to illustrate. Later in the course the multiple cylinder motors will be taken up, using the new Kissel Double Six.

The success that the idea has met, has led Mr. Newman to consider it a permanent feature.

TRUCK BURNS COAL OIL.

A two-ton kerosene burning truck is being shown by the International Harvester Co., St. Louis branch at 3116 Locust street, which is propelled by kerosene. The motor is started with gasoline and when it is warmed, the kerosene jet is turned on and it is claimed that it gives gasoline service [illegible] kerosene cost. The Internation[illegible]ster Co. has hitherto turne[illegible] I. H. C. truck in one-ton s[illegible] The new truck is a depart[illegible] in capacity and in its fuel use.

H. E. Sanders who has been with the company elsewhere for nine years has been placed in charge of the St. Louis branch in place of L. Barnabas.

MANY FOREIGN ORDERS.

A surprisingly large number of orders for Packard Twin Sixes of the third series have been received from the Hawaiian Islands, Cuba, China, Spain, Brazil and Argentina, despite the fact that excepting in Cuba and Brazil even the dealers have not seen the new cars. The sales have been made entirely on the Packard's reputation and the descriptive literature that has been sent out.

The policy of the Packard company on foreign business seems to have pleased all of the countries with which trade relations are being established. Fred Cardway is manager of the Export Department.

FOR MARY AND THE BABIES

The finest thing in the world for Mary and the Babies is a care-free spin in the car around Forest Park.

You haven't always time to take them out; but if your car is a CHEVROLET, that needn't interfere. The CHEVROLET is so easily controlled Mary will delight in driving it herself, and she'll be safer in it than she would be behind an old-fashioned "family horse."

She can start the CHEVROLET by simply pressing a button—and stop it by putting her foot on a handy pedal. The weight of her hand on the steering wheel will turn the car any way she wants it to go; and if she should happen to run into danger, the natural, impulsive, forward thrust of her feet sets both brakes and stops the car almost instantly.

The CHEVROLET is a daintily finished car of exquisite lines that any woman is proud to drive. It has all the little extras that put it in the class of the expensive car; and yet it is the lowest priced Electrically Equipped automobile made.

Come in, and let us show you this car.

THE NEW STEARNS-KNIGHT FOUR.

STEARNS ANNOUNCES SEVERAL NEW MODELS

The F. B. Stearns Co., one of the pioneer builders of motor cars, has further enhanced the beauty and distinction of its automobiles in its latest creations.

The new four-passenger roadster is equipped with three doors, two fore and one rear. The rear door being on right side, admits proper entrance from curb without passing through driver's compartment.

A unique feature is the Stearns-designed tool kit, placed in a locked pocket in the fore door. This adds considerable to the pleasure and convenience of the driver by the accessible position of the tools.

All the new models are equipped with the Knight sleeve valve type motor, which is free from carbon troubles.

"The Stearns Co.," said Guy Vauhan salesmanager for the Stearns Co., "was the first manufacturer in America to use the Knight motor, and from the very beginning it has met with such remarkable success both here and abroad, that nothing but Knight motors have been used in the Stearns since they were adopted, which was six years ago."

The new Stearns models comprise 15 body styles. In the four-cylinder models are the five-passenger touring car, four-passenger roadster, limousine, limousine brougham, landaulet, convertible sedan and seven-passenger touring car.

In the eight-cylinder models are found the seven-passenger touring car, four-passenger roadster, coupe, couple landaulet, limousine, limousine brougham, landaulet and landaulet brougham.

LIBERTY CAR SECURES ST. LOUIS DISTRIBUTOR

The Northern Motor Co., now at 4005 Florissant avenue, of which Arthur G. Whittaker is president, has closed a deal with the Liberty Motor Car Co. of Detroit to sell the Liberty car in St. Louis and Missouri and Illinois territory. The deal was closed with G. V. H. Cairns, district supervisor for the Liberty company.

Whittaker has been connected with the automobile trade in St. Louis from its very beginning and from his early boyhood. He has leased the building at 3027 Locust street for sales and service purposes, and has already appointed a number of dealers in the territory.

The first allotment of Liberty cars, 15 in number, is already en route to St. Louis. The Liberty is a 48-horsepower, six-cylinder car, which sells for $1350 and up. It is built in one type of chassis with seven different body styles.

THE METHOD A MYSTERY

"Look ahead six months before purchasing" has become the motto of car purchasers," says Harry Newman of the Kissel Kar in St. Louis.

"Throughout the summer, purchasers as a rule never forgot to make sure that when the open air touring weather was over, they could change the car they purchased into a closed winter automobile.

"To fully satisfy them, we always tried to have at least two all-year models on the floor at the same time—one with the all-year top on and the other with the summer top, sort of a "before-and-after" idea.

"This enabled us to show them the result of owning an all-year car. The way in which the top is built in, allowing no visible fastenings or attachments seemed to mystify some of the purchasers, necessitating our having to loosen the top sufficiently to show them that it actually was entirely removable."

GAVE THE "ALTON TEST."

State street hill at Alton is one of the supreme tests of the climbing power of an automobile. A resident of that city, in St. Louis the past week, on an inspection tour with the view to becoming an auto owner made a minute study of the Westcott car in the salesroom of the Brandle Motor Co., liked it, and called for a demonstration. This included a climb of Art Hill, in Forest Park, which was done at an average of 3½ miles on high. Even this was not altogether convincing to the man from Alton, who suggested that there was something in his home town that called for more power in a car than Art Hill. The Wescott was accordingly driven over the Alton and up State street hill. It never faltered.

GRANT DEALERS COMING

Arrangements are being made for a convention of Grant dealers in this territory to be held in St. Louis on September 20.

J. C. Barcus of the St. Louis Grant Motor Company will act as host.

This will be the first time since the organization of the new company last spring that the dealers have gathered together. Although this concern distributes the Grant over the major portion of Missouri, Southern Illinois and part of Kentucky, the territory is rapidly being taken up by dealers and more than fifty are expected to attend the convention.

Mr. Barcus has made elaborate plans for the gathering which will close with a banquet at Cafferatas.

DARING COLOR SCHEMES.

The "Open House" for Overland country club models held at the big Overland Building at Twenty-third and Olive streets, St. Louis, is proving a brilliant success. Hundreds of visitors last week dropped in during the day and evening to look at the natty car. It is being displayed on the salesroom floor in 15 different colors, all unusually attractive. Some of the color schemes are very daring and open up a new thought as to motor car decorations. Most of the paint work has been done in the paint shop of the local company. The "Open House" will be continued for several days.

Shows Briscoe Tone Truck.

The machine is distinctly a commercial car and is built for heavy work throughout. The regular Briscoe motor, with a few changes to adapt it to truck work, is being used. One of the features is the extra heavy frame which provides an unusually large loading space.

GROWTH FORCES CAPITAL INCREASE OF LINDELL STORE

$100,000 of $150,000 Issue Has Been Paid Into Treasury and Balance It Is Said by Officials of Concern, Will Soon Be Subscribed.

Business of Store Will Be Augmented by New Statler Hotel and Orpheum Theater Nearby.

Brown Paper Co. Acquires 10-Year Lease on Five-Story Building and Basement at 1220-22-24 Spruce Street.

Growth of the Lindell Dry Goods Co., whose store occupies the entire eight-story building at the southwest corner of Washington avenue and Eighth street, extending through to St. Charles street, has been on a scale that has necessitated a notable increase in its operating capital.

To provide for this, an issue of $150,000 of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock has been authorized, and $100,000 of this amount has been subscribed and paid into the treasury. The balance, it is said by the officials of the concern, soon will have been taken.

The store is in the center of the retail district, and is adjacent to the new Statler Hotel, occupying the adjoining half block at the southeast corner of Ninth street and Washington avenue, and the Orpheum Theater at the southeast corner of Ninth and St. Charles streets, which have been erected respectively at a cost of $3,000,000 and $1,000,000.

The business of the store will be appreciably augmented by the trade incident to those enterprises. Then there are the Victorial Building, at the southeast corner of Eighth and Locust streets, which is to be converted into a 400-room hotel, with a big collateral feature, and the Mercantile Trust Co.'s building, the capacity of which is being doubled by the erection of an addition at the southeast corner of Eighth and St. Charles streets, and the distinguishing feature of which will be an arcade extending from Locust to St. Charles streets.

Recent Improvements Made.

All of these improvements represent projects that have materialized since the war in Europe began, and are noteworthy as showing the potentialities of this district, of which the Lindell store virtually is the center.

Roy Erb Tilles, secretary and treasurer of the Lindell Dry Goods Co., says that the growth of the Lindell Store which was established 18 months ago, has been unprecedented, and that the additional capital is being obtained in order to provide for broader merchandising plans, and for the building up of a volume of business 2commensurate with the facilities aforded by the great building and store.

The Lindell Store was established and opened to the public in April, 1916. John D. Davis, one of St. Louis' best known capitalists, now deceased, was its first president. In April, 1916, the present officers took charge of the entire management. Radical changes and numerous merchandising innovations have been effected, and the business has been doubled and trebled.

The building embraces the entire half of this block, and commands Washington avenue, Eighth and St. Charles streets. The structure, which was formerly the home of the Ely-Walker Dry Goods Co., was reconstructed by the Lindell Real Estate Co., of which John D. Davis was president, at a cost of $200,000, and which owns the fee to the site of the Statler Hotel, comprising 20 stories, and adjoining the Lindell Store on the west.

Several Large Leases Recorded.

The Lindell Store, accordingly, will be in a commanding position to supply the wants of the new big hostelry, from which a host of rich buyers is anticipated, to provide for whom an extraordinary store has been conceived. Their close relation is such that the store could easily be made accessible from the hotel, and this doubtless will be accomplished later.

Announcements reflecting decided commercial advancement in St. Louis were notable features of the week in realty and financial circles. These disclosed several leases for large buildings which have been acquired to provide for expansion and growth.

The most notable of these was that by which the Brown Paper Co. acquired a 10-year lease of the five-story and basement building at 1220-22-24 Spruce St.

The lease was made by Franciscus & Kunz on behalf of the Hammar Bros. White Lead Co., which erected the building several years ago for its own use, but which has since removed to East St. Louis.

The building occupies a lot 60x150 feet and comprises approximately 37,500 square feet. It is in the heart of the Cupples District and highly available for the requirements of the paper company, the growth of which has been exceptional.

STARVING OF HENS FOR MOULT UNNECESSARY

More Humane Way of Handling Them, Which Brings Better Results, Described.

BY RUSSELL F. PALMER,
Assistant Director American School of Poultry Husbandry.

The hen with a full new coat of feathers, a red comb and a plump body Nov. 1 to 15 will make money for her owner this winter from eggs she lays. Putting the hens through the moult without resorting to the time worn method of starving for a given period to reduce flesh and loosen the skin, which is later tightened when extra fattening foods are forced upon them, has been found the more satisfactory and humane method. It does not tear down the vigor or constitution of the hen; neither does it create an artificial healthy condition later.

The starving and subsequent fattening method of forcing the moult gives the latter result, leaving fowls the easy prey of colds, chicken pox and other forms of chicken ailments more common to poultry in winter.

The hen with the physical make-up of a layer will lay a profitable number of eggs this winter if she is left in a strong, vigorous condition by November and her moult is completed. This is the vital period of a yearling hen's life. Her future worth as a producer depends upon the care and feed given her at this time.

The hens in the laying contest and on the experiment farm of the American School of Poultry husbandry were not subjected to the starving or thinning down process this season. At the beginning of summer, following the long period of winter and spring, during which time the hens had suffered a natural drain upon their bodies on account of heavy laying in natural season, we began feeding to produce strength and to slightly plump their bodies. We found that hens which had been laying all spring were sufficiently thin to give the desired loose skin effect without resorting to a starving ration, and as the weather became warmer the hens did not burn up any of the food she consumed to supply warmth for her body, and as nature never intended the average hen to produce as many eggs in summer as in spring, she had a larger per cent of her food to use in building up her body.

These natural conditions, coupled with clean houses, clean yards, clean water, clean food and a minus quantity of lice and mites, together with an abundance of shade, made the hens happy and contented during summer. About Aug. 1 it was noticed their bodies were in good plump shape; their old feathers were mostly dead and every section on their bodies exposed a fine crop of new pin feathers. Oil meal, in very light proportions at first, was added to their dry mash at this time. A good quality of beef scrap was of course already on their regular daily menu, supplied in their dry mash. Short clover and grass clippings and tender sprouted oats have been supplied daily.

The result of these conditions and this care is shown by the fowls at this writing, Sept. 1, to be very satisfactory, and more according to nature. A very large per cent of over 1200 hens are more than half through the moult. They are dropping old and growing new feathers evenly over their entire bodies.

The old starving method of forcing the moult shuts off the egg supply entirely during the period of starving and for a considerable length of time following, whereas a reasonable production of eggs is secured with the more humane method of feeding and handling the hens prior to and during the moult.

Interest Reviving in Rabbit Raising

War conditions, and the soaring price of meat, are reviving interest in rabbit raising at a surprising rate. There is a two-fold appeal to the rabbit business—they are profitable because they are so prolific and so easily kept, and they make very acceptable pets for children. As in the case of poultry, the growing of rabbits appeals to a great number of city and suburban residents, wherever there is ground enough to have a small pen. Only a few square feet of space are needed, although the more ground there is, the better.

This is a good time to make a start in this industry, as the fall breeding season opens with the coming of cooler weather.

Mistress of Nebraska Farm Feeding Her Fowls, All of Which Are White

MAINTAINING a color scheme in the livestock kept on a farm is a new idea, but Mr. and Mrs. Leon Cummings living in Nemaha County, Nebraska, find this plan to be both enjoyable and profiable. Their chosen color scheme is white. They have White Muscovy ducks, White Holland turkeys, White Wyandotte chickens, White Embden geese and White African guineas. They also raise Chester White hogs, their house cat is white, and for a time they had a white bulldog to guard the place.

The Cummings farm is known as "Lakeview," receiving its name from the fact that there is a lake on the place. The farm house stands on the hill overlooking the lake. On the side of this hill is an alfalfa field, and when the white poultry and white hogs are out feeding on this green slope the sight is a quite attractive one for passersby.

REPORT FOR AUGUST ON EGG-LAYING CONTEST

Missouri Pen of Barred Rocks Displaced by Illinois Wyandottes at American School.

During the last six weeks the most of the hens in the national egg-laying contest at the American School of Poultry Husbandry have been moulting. This and the dry, hot weather of late July and early August resulted in a reduced production for that period. Since about the middle of August, when cooler weather and abundant rain began to arrive, fowls throughout both the individual and the pen contests have shown a marked increase in egg yield. The following were the leading pens for August:

No. 46—R. C. Black Rhinelanders—California ......105 eggs
No. 9—S. C. White Leghorns—Pennsylvania ....104 eggs
No. 74—White Wyandottes—Illinois .... 98 eggs
No. 112—White Wyandottes—West Virginia .... 95 eggs
No. 71—S. C. Rhode Island Whites—Texas .... 94 eggs

The pen of Barred Rocks from Missouri which had been leading the field for three months, was displaced in August by a pen of White Wyandottes. Any of the five leading pens have an excellent chance to be the winner Nov. 1. and they are going to be hard pushed by at least 10 other pens. The five leading pens up to Sept. 1 are:

No. 74—White Wyandottes Illinois ....878 eggs
No. 114—Barred Plymouth Rocks—Missouri ....876 eggs
No. 76—White Wyandottes—Arkansas ....826 eggs
No. 9—S. C. White Leghorns—Pennsylvania ....855 eggs
No. 17—S. C. White Leghorns—Missouri ....803 eggs

No. 461—R. C. Black Rhinelanders—California ......221 eggs
No. 1144—Barred Plymouth Rock—Missouri ....217 eggs
No. 762—White Wyandottes—Arkansas ....213 eggs
No. 763—White Wyandottes—Arkansas ....212 eggs
No. 1145—Barred Plymouth Rock—Missouri...200 eggs

No. 348—S. C. Buff Leghorn—Michigan ....30 eggs
No. 739—S. C. White Leghorn—Missouri ....28 eggs
No. 357—S. C. Brown Leghorn—Louisiana ....27 eggs
No. 4652—Barred Plymouth Rock—Iowa. ....26 eggs
No. 727—S. C. White Leghorns—Missouri ....26 eggs
No. 389—S. C. Buff Leghorn—Michigan ....26 eggs

Back Yard Flock That Paid in Winter

The back yard poultry flock offers relief from high priced eggs and insures a fresh supply for the table. H. L. Kemster of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture kept 10 white leghorn pullets in his back yard last winter and demonstrated the practicability of a small poultry flock in reducing living expenses. During the winter his neighbors paid from 35 to 40 cents a dozen for eggs. The 10 white leghorn pullets produced eggs at a feed cost of less than 14 cents a dozen. These hens were purchased as immature pullets Nov. 1, 1916. Only two were old enough to lay before Jan. 1. At the end of seven months, May 31, the flock had produced 749 eggs.

During the first seven months of 1917 the Post-Dispatch printed 10,989 Musical Want Ads—268 more than the THREE nearest St. Louis newspapers combined.

Children Educated by Caring for Pets

The child which is brought up without owning animals or pets of some kind has missed something of permanent value out of life. The child is vitually educated by seeing and caring for animals. Parents who live in cities and who send a boy or girl out into the country for the summer often find that in two months the child has learned more and grown more than in any other two months of his life, and from no source has he learned more than from animals. In some way, if possible, every child should get some education of this kind. Birds, poultry, calves, dogs, rabbits, guinea pigs and even pigs make good pets, under appropriate conditions, and the child should really own its pets. The sense of ownership is a valuable part of the child's education.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

HEAVY SELLING OF STOCKS CAUSES WIDE PRICE LOSSES IN THE NEW YORK MARKET

Standard Shares Are 2 to 4 Points Lower on the Week's Trading.

GOLD EXPORTS CHECKED

Embargo Places Exchange Market in a Peculiar Position.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly review, says:

"It is to be hoped that the Government understands the seriousness of the step it has taken, through yesterday's proclamation by the President, in making of practically world-wide application, the potential embargo on gold exports. The proclamation of Aug. 27, subjecting exports of 'coin, bullion, currency,' to such limitations and exemptions as the President shall prescribe,' stipulated only shipments to the Teutonic countries, the territory occupied by their armies and neutral European markets. Its purpose was plainly understood to be the prevention of our gold being handed along to the enemy. Supposing evidence of such purpose to exist, this was a wholly legitimate war measure.

"Yesterday's proclamation goes a long step further. It sweeps into the list of markets to which our bankers may be forbidden to send gold, both the neutral South and Central American states and those which are at war with Germany. It includes Japan, which certainly has not been accused of delivering gold to Germany. It authorizes the Federal Reserve Board, acting for the President, to permit gold exports to any of these countries only 'if in its opinion the exportation in question be compatible with the public interest.' Otherwise, the board is to prohibit them.

" 'Compatible with the public interest' is a most dangerously elastic phrase. There is a very considerable number of men, in both private and public life, who would declare at once that gold exports are always incompatible with the interests of the country. There are others, with economic notions a little better developed, who would probably argue that, since gold is a basis of credit and therefore one of the sinews of war, we ought to restrict its export arbitrarily.

"No doubt these philosophers would point to the action of France, for instance, and in a measure to Great Britain. But what they would really be doing if they had their way, would be to imitate Germany in 1914, and with far less excuse than Germany had for it.

"Since the decision, as to compatibility is lodged with the Federal Reserve Board, it may fortunately be inferred that no embargo will be slapped on, unless for tangible and sufficient reasons. As practical financiers, the members of that board are aware that our present gold exports are following the natural laws of international exchange, because, since we have undertaken to support sterling in New York, as it is not supported elsewhere, we have established a market in which drafts on London, held by Japan or Spain or South America, may, to a limited extent, be sold in exchange for gold.

"The Reserve Board knows that in the case of Japan, to which we have been sending gold most largely, the adverse balance on exchange would be corrected if our manufacturers were to cease holding up the Japanese orders for steel, or if London were to regulate sterling at Tokio, in the manner in which it has been regulated at New York. The board is naturally aware that, although we have exported in the three last months somewhat more gold than we have imported, that fact is quite obscured by the further fact that between the end of 1914 and the beginning of last May, we imported from abroad $1,200,000,000 more gold than we sent out.

"The country's present stock of gold has increased more than a thousand million dollars since the war began. What sort of figure the United States would cut in the eyes of foreign financiers (and of the nations in whose behalf we were lately hoping to become the central money market of the world) if we should now refuse to give up gold on legitimate trade operations, because it was 'incompatible with the public interest,' is is not altogether difficult to imagine.

"Wide losses were scored by the stock market last week, owing to uncertainty over the amount of the profits tax. Some issues lost 3 to 10 points. Yesterday's market was irregular near the low level."

HEAVY RECEIPTS CAUSE LOWER CATTLE MARKET

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by the National Livestock Commission Co., National Stockyards, Ill.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Week.	Week Before.	Last Year.
Cattle	36,500	31,400	22,400
Hogs	20,600	17,200	20,500
Sheep	17,700	15,340	17,500

Heavy receipts last week, again played havoc with the cattle market, especially the butcher end of the trade, which was the most liberally supplied, the greater part of the offerings being of the plain common to medium varieties, upon which a general decline of 50c to 75c per cwt was recorded, and in some instances the commoner kinds suffered as much as $1.

Beef steers, like butcher cattle, for the most part run to the common and medium classes, and these were slow sale at a decline of 25c to 50c. However, a few choice steers were on sale, and they commanded an advance of 25c, some of this class selling up to $16 per cwt, the highest price ever obtained upon this market. Stockers and feeders, as a rule, closed 25c to 50c per cwt lower. The market indicated buyers were seeking good cattle in each department of the trade, and were willing to pay the price to get them.

Cattle Quotations.

Choice to prime beef steers are quoted at $14 to $16; good to choice, $12 to $14; medium to good, $10 to $12; common to medium, $8 to $10; common off-color light killing steers, $7 to $8; good to choice stockers and feeders, $8 to $9; good to choice stock cows, $6.25 to $6.50; good to choice stock heifers, $7 to $7.50; choice to prime fat yearling butcher cattle, $13 to $14.50; good to choice, $10.50 to $13; medium to good, $8.50 to $10.50; common to medium, $6.25 to $8; choice to fancy heavy beef cows, $8.50 to $9.50; good to choice, $7.50 to $8.50; medium to good, $6.25 to $7.25; cutters, $5.50 to $6; canners, $5 to $5.25; good fat beef bulls, $8.50 to $9.50; heavy sausage bulls, $7 to $8, and light sausage bulls, $6 to $7.

The hog trade again showed an upward trend, and prospects looked rather favorable for the near future. An advance of 25c to 35c per cwt was made the last two days of the week, placing the trade back within about a quarter of the close of the previous week, and while the market is still of a nervous character, prime hogs, or those of good quality and weight, are in good demand and selling well.

The top of yesterday's market was $18.50, with the following quotations prevailing: Choice hogs, 180 lbs up, $18.25 to $18.50; mixed hogs, 160 lbs up, $17.35 to $18.10; 120 to 150 lb pigs, $16.75 to $17.75; 90 to 115 lb pigs, $15 to $16.25; peewee pigs, $12.25 to $13.75; best rough hogs, $17 to $17.25, with half-fat roughs at $13 to $14.

The lamb trade at the close of last week showed a decline of 25c to 50c in comparison with the close of the previous week, while sheep sales were on about a seady basis. However, there was a satisfactory tone to the market, and good stuff meets with ready sales at satisfactory prices. Good to choice lambs quotable at $16 to $16.50; medium to good, $15 to $15.75; culls $11.50 to $12.50; fat sheep, $10; bucks, $7.50 to $8; choppers, $6.50; canners, $4.50 to $5; choice breeding ewes, $13.50 to $14.50; medium to good, $12 to $13, and plain kinds, $9 to $11. Fat goats, $7 to $8.50; kids, $8.50 to $10.50, and buck goats, $2 to $4 per head.

Horses and Mules.

Coffee Market.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—No fresh feature developed in the market for coffee futures today. The opening was 3 to 5 points higher, but the buying seemed to be practically all from one source, and as soon as a few lots had changed hands around 7.74c for December, the market showed a sagging tendency under light scattered selling. December reacted to 7.68c and the market closed net unchanged to 1 point higher. Sales, 11,250. Closing bids: Sept., 7.40c; Oct., 7.49c; Dec., 7.68c; Jan., 7.75c; March, 7.90c; May, 8.04c; July, 8.18c. Spot coffee dull; Rio and 8s, 9c. Santos 4s, 10c. No change was reported in the cost and freight situation.

Owing to the holiday there were no official quotations from the primary markets.

CORN MARKET HIGHER ON FEAR OF FROST

Futures Gain 2½c to 3½c on the Week's Trading—Oats Also Firm.

Virtual disappearance of wheat as a Merchants' Exchange commodity made last week a memorable one in exchange annals. The Federal Government took formal charge of all wheat transactions at the outset of Monday, and thereafter unvarying Government prices were the rule so far as wheat was concerned. As compared with a week ago, corn quotations showed a gain of 2½c to 3½c net, and oats were up 2c to 2½c.

Smoothness which characterized the transfer of wheat business in the Government resulted in some degree from the fact that receipts were only sufficient here and elsewhere to meet current milling requirements. In any event, however, the merchandising of wheat arriving here no longer took place on the exchange, but, except temporarily in the case of millers, was ordered to consist of sending the wheat into a licensed elevator and receiving in lieu of the warehouse receipt a Government check for cash in payment.

It was said the demand for flour showed a material increase now that the value of wheat had been put on a stable basis—namely, $2.20 a bushel, if equal to Number one Northern grade, or correspondingly less, according to quality. The slowness of the movement of supplies was said to be largely due to country dealers' unfamiliaraity with the Government grades.

Corn Market Strong.

Unseasonably cold weather stimulated the upward tendency of the corn market. Opinion was almost unanimous that the plant was not making the progress it should to escape the likelihood of severe damage from frost.

At one time, however, depression in the New York stock market had a decided though transient bearish effect on corn.

Oats showed independent firmness on account of fear that wet weather meant serious hindrance to threshing. Receipts were comparatively small with the seaboard alert to buy at any advantageous chance.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

Cash grain was 4c to 6c up, scarce and wanted.

Cash oats 1½c up and in urgent demand.

Quote No. 3 white oats, 59½@60½c; No. 4 white, 58@59c; No. 2, 59@63c, No. 3, 60c.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Broad demand for corn resulted today from cold weather that increased danger of crop maturity being too long delayed to escape killing frost. The market closed unsettled, 1c to 1⅜c net higher, at $1.15⅝ to $1.15¾ December and 1.11⅝ to $1.11⅞ May.

Oats bulged ½c to ⅞c to 1c, and provisions 2c to 17c.

Investors purchased corn freely, and shorts also covered on a large scale. Prospects of continued unseasonable low temperatures until the middle of next week inspired much of the buying, and caused forgetfulness of the Government estimate of the largest crop on record. Knowledge that the manufacture of whisky would be stopped throughout the country after tonight was also generally ignored as a market factor, the influence on prices having been discounted beforehand.

Profit-taking sales led at times to reactions, but only of a moderate extent. It was denied that there was any likelihood of a change in maximum prices here until after October, if then.

Active call from the seaboard did a good deal to lift the value of oats. Rural offerings were said to have increased somewhat on the advance, but still remained comparatively scarce. A large proportion of the crop was reported to be yet unthreshed.

The lowness of the basic price of wheat as fixed for the Chicago market brought an answer today from the Government food administrator. President Griffin of the Board of Trade said the communication was being analyzed by the Transportation Committee of the board. Receipts here continued scanty and were absorbed by millers.

Latest figures on the supply of wheat in the United States, including the carry-over from last year, made the total 715,000,000 bushels. On the basis of last year's consumption, this would mean about 200,000,000 bushels available for export.

Provisions rose, in response to the Government report showing a reduction of more than 5,000,000 hogs on farms, as compared with a year ago.

COTTON SELLS BELOW 20 CENTS IN THE NEW YORK MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—There was a further decline in the cotton market today, with January contracts selling below the 20-cent level during the early trading. The opening was steady at an advance of 13 points to a decline of 9 points, with near months relatively firm on covering, but soon weakened under a renewal of more or less general liquidations and local and southern pressure.

October broke to 20.03c and January to 19.98c, or 18 to 22 points net lower. Covering was active at the decline, however, and there were rallies of several points before the end of the first hour.

The census report showing 603,513 bales ginned prior to Sept. 1 was about as expected, but the census figure placing last year's world production at 18,365,000 bales, excluding linters, and consumption at 20,180,000, excluding linters, in the United States, seemed to create some bullish feeling around the ring.

Spinners were said to be calling cotton on the bulge during the middle of the morning, but as soon as this demand had been supplied the market broke into new low ground under a renewal of spot house, Liverpool and Southern and local selling. October declined to 20.00c and January to 19.90c or 25 to 26 points net lower. The close was barely steady at a net decline of 21 to 26 points.

Cotton futures closed steady; Oct., 20.2c; Dec., 19.98c; Jan., 19.93c; March, 20.12c; May, 20.25c. Spot quiet; middling, 21.20c.

FORMER ST. LOUISAN NAMED SYMPHONY CONCERTMASTER

Albert Stoessel, However, Must Secure Exemption From Draft to Succeed Hugo Olk.

Dispatches from Boston, where Director Max Zach is spending his vacation, yesterday announced the engagement of Albert Stoessel, gifted young violinist and former St. Louisan, as concertmaster of the Symphony Orchestra, to succeed Hugo Olk. After holding this position for 10 years, Olk has resigned to devote his time to teaching. He was at one time Stoessel's instructor.

Arthur J. Gaines, manager of the orchestra, confirmed the information from Boston, but said the carrying out of the contract depended on whether Stoessel could obtain exemption from the draft. He is 25 years old, and was named in Boston, his present home, as one of those subject to conscription. He has entered a claim of exemption on the ground of dependents. In case it is denied, an effort will be made to persuade Olk to resume his place as concertmaster.

Stoessel is the son of A. J. Stoessel, formerly of 3138 Newstead Avenue, who was for many years a violin player in a theater orchestra here.

Twenty deaths were charged to heart trouble, which was the only disease that equaled the deadlines of pneumonia.

Eight suicides and six homicides were reported. Births for the week were 296.

VANITY FAIR

The most wide-awake of all the new magazines

This is the Night Operator at Vanity Fair. I have a message for you.

Vanity Fair is the most cheerful and stimulating of all the new magazines. A winter of it will keep you in touch with the social, literary, dramatic and artistic skirmishes in American life, and insure you against every form of dullness, boredom and intellectual old age.

The world is whirling faster than it ever whirled before. If you want to keep up with a double-quick winter, you have got to read a double-quick magazine.

Vanity Fair is the look-liveliest, step-liveliest, periodical in America. It prints stimulating humor—lots and lots of it—by the best writers and artists. It views the stage, the arts, the sports, the gaieties and all the enlivening and highly vitalized sides of modern life bravely and cheerfully.

Get the Cheero Spirit —for $1

One little 3x7 dollar will bring you the next five issues of Vanity Fair—and even six, if you fill out and mail the coupon on this page promptly.

You think nothing—in your poor deluded way—of paying $2.00 for a theatre ticket, or $1.50 for a new novel. But you can secure for $1.00—half the cost of a single theatre ticket—an entire winter of VANITY FAIR, and with it more entertainment than you could derive from dozens of plays or a shelf full of novels.

Every Issue Contains:

THE STAGE: Reviews of all that's going on—and coming off—in the theatres; and portraits of who's really who in the New York dramatic spotlight.

THE ARTS: Painless criticisms and peerless illustrations of all the newest and most discussed happenings in painting, literature, sculpture and architecture.

HUMOR: Not the custard-pie school, nor even the Sunday supplement vein, but the most amusing work of our younger and more restrained writers and artists.

ASSORTED NUTS: Portraits and revelations of all the best-known and most carefully assorted nuts, writers, dancers, dramatists, wits and half-wits, beaux—and all the other mad hatters in our great social wonderland.

SPORTS: Every known species of sports; indoor and outdoor, whether heroically masculine or politely ladylike.

ESSAYS AND REVIEWS: The enlivening and unconventional output of our most wakeful essayists, critics, and authors.

THE OPERA AND MUSIC: Operatic stars, composers and conductors—their portraits, plans, quarrels and personalities.

DANCING: All varieties of dances—both wild and hot-house—and their indoor, outdoor, rhythmic and ballroom exponents.

FASHIONS: The last word—pronounced with a Parisian accent—on the smartest clothes for the smartest men and the smartest women.

DOGS AND MOTORS: Photographs and histories of well-built dogs and motors.

DEATHS

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dearly beloved mother, Johanna Lamberty, departed this life three years ago. Not gone from memory, not gone from love, but gone to her fatherly home above; and while she lies in peaceful sleep her memory we shall always keep. Sadly missed by

MR. AND MRS. BETZOLD AND FAMILY. (c)

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Mary Brormann, who died Sept. 8, 1915.

Some time, some day our eyes shall meet
The place we love so well,
And all that is left for memory
Is her grave on a distant hill.

Sadly missed by

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our darling daughter, Edith E. Ruppel, who died Sept. 11, 1914.

We have longed for you, darling
daughter,
Through three long, lonely years.
Our hearts filled with sorrow,
Our eyes bedimmed with tears.
Oh, darling, how we miss you
No one but us can tell;
God who loved you better
Has taken you home to dwell.

Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER AND BROTHER.

In Memoriam.

DAUGHTERS. (c)

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Mrs. Agnes Fitzsimmons, who departed this life Sept. 11, 1916.

One sad year has passed away; sad and sudden was the call for our dear mother; loved by all, with little thought that on that day our dear mother was called away. We could not realize what was said when the message came that she was dead. Day by day we sadly miss her; friends may think the wound is healed, but they little know the grief that's within our hearts concealed. Shall never be forgotten, never from our memory fade; loving hearts will always linger round the grave where she is laid.

Sadly missed by daughters, son and sons-in-law.

MRS. H. J. ZBAREN. (c)

DEATHS

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dearly beloved mother, Johanna Lamberty, departed this life three years ago. Not gone from memory, not gone from love, but gone to her fatherly home above; and while she lies in peaceful sleep her memory we shall always keep. Sadly missed by

MR. AND MRS. BETZOLD AND FAMILY. (c)

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Mary Brormann, who died Sept. 8, 1915.

Some time, some day our eyes shall meet
The place we love so well,
And all that is left for memory
Is her grave on a distant hill.

Sadly missed by

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our darling daughter, Edith E. Ruppel, who died Sept. 11, 1914.

We have longed for you, darling
daughter,
Through three long, lonely years.
Our hearts filled with sorrow,
Our eyes bedimmed with tears.
Oh, darling, how we miss you
No one but us can tell;
God who loved you better
Has taken you home to dwell.

Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER AND BROTHER.

In Memoriam.

DAUGHTERS. (c)

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Mrs. Agnes Fitzsimmons, who departed this life Sept. 11, 1916.

One sad year has passed away; sad and sudden was the call for our dear mother; loved by all, with little thought that on that day our dear mother was called away. We could not realize what was said when the message came that she was dead. Day by day we sadly miss her; friends may think the wound is healed, but they little know the grief that's within our hearts concealed. Shall never be forgotten, never from our memory fade; loving hearts will always linger round the grave where she is laid.

Sadly missed by daughters, son and sons-in-law.

MRS. H. J. ZBAREN. (c)

We come before the readers of this paper with the most stupendous investment opportunity ever placed on the market.

We request a full and complete investigation as to the Company, its officers and its property and as to the correctness of the following statements before investigating.

We are prepared to furnish the necessary facilities for this purpose.

We own a deposit of oil and asphalt combined, located in the State of Oklahoma, 200 ft. in width at the surface and 700 ft. in lineal extent, which has been tested to a depth of 1187 feet. It is estimated to carry values of 18 per cent, to contain 8,616,000 tons of crude material, which at the above figures would refine out 1,428,840 tons of oil and asphalt combined or equal in value when the price of this product is compared to it, an oil well flowing 1500 barrels per day for a period of 40 years.

Several hundred tons were taken from a different but similar portion of the deposit a few hundred yards distant and the residium was shipped to New York and sold, where it brought $7.50 per barrel.

We own this property in fee and our capital stock is only $150,000.

We wish to obtain sufficient funds to equip this property with a refinery.

READ THIS

Right here is where you fellows with a 4-cylinder roll and a 6-cylinder taste can spread out. We have several road men that attend special shows to open agencies only—as a rule they sell these samples at a cut price. I have at last got the boss to let me have a few of these bargains and just now am showing some real hot ones at a price. If you don't see these before buying we both lose money.

FOR SALE AUTOMOBILES

Three of a Thousand Good Auto Investments

Don't harbor the idea that because a car is not brand new, it is not a safe investment.

Good cars are all the time finding their way to the salesroom floor to be sold as SECOND-HAND!

After a car has gone a few hundred or even a few thousand miles, it still is at its BEST, unless it has been abused—the paint is not quite fresh—and its sentimental value is less—that is all.

But you can buy a second-hand car almost any time that will do the work—and SAVE YOU MONEY—BIG MONEY!

NEW YORK CURB PRICES ARE LOWER ON THE WEEK

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Although price movements on the Broad street curb market during the past week were not uniform they were in most cases to materially lower prices, about the only exceptions to the downward movement being the silver mining stocks and a few copper shares. The declines were by no means as extensive as recorded on the New York Stock Exchange, but this was due to the fact that few of the curb issues are included in loan collateral and therefore were not disturbed by the contraction of banking accommodation.

Airplane stocks, in which there was quiet liquidation, were among the weakest features, Curtiss dropping from 40¼ to 37½, and Wright-Martin ranged from 9 to 7⅝. Submarine dropped from 28 to 24¾. Aetna Explosives was fairly well held, ranging from 5¼ to 6, and Air Reduction moved up from 84 to 90.

Independent oil stocks were unsettled to a considerable extent by uncertainty over the Government attitude, but those who have made efforts to obtain knowledge on this subject were positive that no action by the Government will be taken that would put obstacles in the way of the development in the oil fields.

Some Issues Are Weak.

The widest movement in this group was in Midwest Refining which, after announcing the issue of new rights, sold off from 169 to 156. The rights were traded in at 22 to 21¼. Merritt was one of the strong features, advancing from 32½ to 35¾. There was active trading in Tuxpam Star, accompanied by statements that members of the Mexican Petroleum syndicate have taken a large interest in it. This interest is said to give the Mexican Petroleum syndicate control, and assures all necessary financing for marketing the company's production. The Tuxpam property is stated to be close to Mexican Petroleum.

Sinclair Gulf sold down from 20 to the low record of 15. Chevrolet was supplied at concessions constantly through the week, falling from 78 to the new low record of 67, and United Motor dropped from 21¾ to the new low record of 19⅝.

Many of the mining stocks were in good demand all through the week, with Nipissing attracting most attention by its advance from 8¼ to 8¾, because it is regarded as a representative silver stock. Acme copper showed increased activity, advancing from 2 to 2½ and there was active trading in Calumet and Jerome and Jerome Verde.

Magma, advancing from 43 to 47, was followed by a reaction to 45. St. Joseph Lead after advancing from 18½ to 19¼ sold down to 17½, ex-dividend 1¼ per cent.

Declines were general in the bond market. Russian 6½s dropped from 80½ to the low record of 78, and the 5½s sold down to 69.

London Review.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—"Now that the las installment on your liberty loan has been paid in, our market is watching with interest for the details of your next issue. The cables from your side are confusing on the question. They seem to foreshadow a $7,500,000,000 issue; which would presumably provide for retiring the outstanding 3½ per cent of the recent issue. But it is difficult to determine what amounts refer to authorizations and what to any single contemplated issue.

"We hear that special provision will be made, on the lines adopted by this country and Canada, for the subscribing of very small savings; this to be done through issue of special securities similar to our war savings certificates.

"Our market still lacks information as to whether investors in the new loan will be given the option on different terms, to take a taxable or tax free issue. As matters have developed here a tax-free loan, even on the terms of the last one, would probably be the more attractive.

England's New Loan.

"As to the date of our own loan, however, there is still no definite indication; nor is the proposed committee to consider the question of an issue of 'premium bonds' yet appointed. Issue of that kind of securities is not now expected, but in some quarters it is considered that the offer of a large new loan may be preceded by some new form of short term bonds.

"The week's extremely rapid rise in silver attracts great attention, indeed, the whole position of the silver market is interesting. The Indian Government's withdrawal of licenses for private imports of the metal implies a desire to restrict purchasers of silver for Indian requirements to the Indian Government alone. This would greatly reduce competitive bidding. But China's very large needs for silver will probably remain the principal factor in the market, and will suffice to maintain prices at or around the present high level.

"The recent bad weather here has hurt the wheat crop; which makes the question of availability of Indian supplies more important, and has directed attention closely to the solving of difficulties in the way of making exchange remittances to that country.

Cotton Market to Open.

"It is believed that arrangements for reopening the market for cotton futures have practically been completed. The official announcement is expected a few days hence. Existing restrictions will probably still apply to some extent, but it is expected that licenses will be given such as will permit freer operations by importers.

"In the theater of war, Russian developments attract the greater part of the city's attention. While no one is drawing conclusions as to their bearing on the whole war situation, the comment is very general that what has happened in Russia has given democracy the most serious blow that it has sustained in many years.

An Apartment That Understands Women!

Now, here indeed is a most extraordinary situation; An apartment that doesn't claim "efficiency!"

You see it's merely a home. A regular sort of place for comfort-loving persons to live in and enjoy. The woman who designed it thought "efficiency" belonged to offices and factories and things like that; didn't associate the idea wtih homes, you know.

So she just went ahead in her woman's way and put in closets that really accommodate one's clothes and hats and shoes; a convenient shelf or a hook here and there in the "work" part of the house; a "corner" for the broom, the duster and the mop; a floor plug in just the spot—and lots of other little things that women like.

And then she said, "Efficient? Not at all! Simply an apartment that 'understands women'—that's the idea!"

The Colonial dignity of the wainscoted dining room; the broad, inviting fireplace in the living room to shorten the winter's evenings; the ivory and mahogany color treatment throughout, reflecting the ultimate in good taste; the delightful arrangement and cheeriness of the rooms—all these concern anyone who seeks an apartment outside the realm of commonplace.

You may like this apartment. Why not go through it today? It's on the impressively wide and metropolitan Skinker road—northeast corner of Berlin avenue—and overlooks "Parkview," the most exclusive residential district in St. Louis.

Hi-Pointe

THE HIGHEST POINT IN ST. LOUIS

IS there a man or woman in this town who would have a home site, healthful, because high and dry; convenient, because of every civic improvement; desirable, because of surrounding neighborhoods; low priced, because circumstances are fortunately so!

¶ If there be one such man, or one such woman, as a matter of fact, there are thousands anxious indeed to find a place for a home that promises so much.

$40 A FRONT FOOT

¶ It is the greatest value for the least money of any realty in St. Louis.

¶ The investor will find in it a safe depository for such funds as can lie idle for a few months, when the rise in value and price will pay a handsome profit.

¶ Come out today and see Hi-Pointe—Skinker Road and Clayton Road. Take Market Street car direct and ask the conductor to stop at Hi-Pointe. The Hamilton Avenue extension, the new direct line right through Hi-Pointe, may be seen in course of construction.

¶ Buy at Hi Pointe; save money and live long and happily.

ST. LOUIS, MO., SEPTEMBER 9, 1917.

PUTTING A PREMIUM OF $70,000,000 -- UPON COMMON SENSE --

Virtually the entire fortune of the late Henry M. Flagler has become the sole property of a 20-year-old bride, the niece of his second wife, who said of her: "She is one of the few women among the many women I know who is capable of making great wealth do the most good"—The romance of the Flagler millions and how he himself trusted a woman to administer them sensibly

"I SHALL leave her my fortune—she has a wealth of common sense."

So declared the late Mrs. Robert Worth Bingham (remarried widow of the railroad Croesus, Henry M. Flagler) in speaking of her 20-year-old niece, who has just been confirmed as the heir to the bulk of a fortune not far short of seventy millions.

This young girl is without doubt one of the richest women on earth of her years. Few women of whom there is any record have wielded such wealth and power at 20. The domain over which she will hold sway is extra-queenly and only in the record of women who rose to thrones from the scullery is there a comparable advance in fortune.

About 70 years ago a youth in an upstate New York town, one of those drowsy places which call occasional attention to themselves by their unpalatable Indian names, decided, entirely after the manner of rustic boys, to go out West and get rich. This one did it. He worked in general stores, then as a grain and commission merchant, soon as a small capitalist, next as a Standard Oil man and finally as a railroad and empire builder. His name was Henry M. Flagler. The public will long remember him as builder of the Florida East Coast Railway, the man who built a road across the sea to Havana. Otherwise the chief popular interest in this gentleman must rest on the fact that he began with nothing and concluded his life with $70,000,000.

To trace out the complete causation it is necessary to recollect that in middle life Henry M. Flagler married a Philadelphia woman, afterwards known as Mrs. Ida M. Flagler. They lived together in apparent contentment, as Flagler's millions mounted, but the heir who was to have the family wealth did not appear and it became a matter of comment in later years that this fact had been a bitter disappointment to the rail master. In the late '90s Mrs. Ida Flagler began to show signs of mental unbalance, and shortly afterwards she was committed to the care of Dr. Carlos MacDonald and placed in his sanitarium near White Plains. That was in 1897.

In 1901 an apparently innocent measure was introduced into the Legislature of the State of Florida. It provided, sensibly enough, that divorce might be granted a person whose husband or wife was incurably insane and had been in that condition for not less than four years. There can be little question as to the merit of such a law as a progressive divorce statute, even though most states have so far failed to consider it. The Florida Legislature passed the bill after the usual delays and venal jockeying for participation in the profits, for it was understood at Tallahassee that there was spoils in the bill. What this moneyed backing was did not appear until some time after the gubernatorial signature had been affixed.

Then a divorce petition disclosed the purpose. Henry M. Flagler, virtual master of Florida, appeared as complainant and asked that he be freed from Mrs. Ida M. Flagler on the ground that she was and had been for more than four years incurably insane. In other words, here was a flagrant case of a State Legislature being used by a powerful individual for the solution of his private problems. That the law was a just one was entirely forgotten and there was an immediate and violent storm of popular protest. But the law stood; Henry Flagler got his divorce and public puritanism was told to go hang. It must be added that the munificent Flagler set aside a property estimated at from two to three millions for his mad wife and maintained her in the sanitarium at a cost of about $1000 a month. He had no wish to dodge his responsibilities or deal ungenerously with his wife. The will to be free had been his actuation.

The former Mrs. Henry M. Flagler, who turned all of the rail magnate's vast estate over to her niece.

Ten days after the granting of the divorce a concrete motive came to light when Flagler set out from Florida in a special train, attended by a number of friends, and was taken to Wilmington, N. C., and thence to the little nearby hamlet of Kenansville. Here, with his divorce hardly confirmed and the people of Florida still suffering occasional convulsions of indignation, Flagler married Miss Mary Lily Kenan.

Miss Kenan was the daughter of a Confederate veteran and the Kenan family was of the old Carolinian blood. She was locally well known. Her little town of 300 souls bore the name of her family. But certainly she was a poor girl. What wealth had belonged to her family had vanished with the defeat of the Confederacy and the prosperity of her immediate section of the South had not since got beyond the stage of the agricultural. Miss Kenan was then 36. Henry Flagler had passed his seventy-second anniversary. In this way this girl of excellent but poor and obscure family was raised to immense wealth and, unfortunately, a good deal of notoriety. It is said Flagler made her a wedding gift of securities worth four millions. In any event, she was magnificently provided for, and the aged millionaire settled down to enjoy his senectitude in peace and contentment. If, as some of his friends said, he still hoped for an heir, he was again to be disappointed. He continued to live in apparently unalloyed happiness, however, until 1913. Then, at past 84, he went quietly into the wakeless sleep.

When the magnate's will was opened it was found that he had left his immense property almost without division to his widow. The estate was to be held in trust and administered for her benefit, at least while the Florida East Coast Railway and the great string of magnificent Florida hotel properties required much nursing, but the widow was to have an income of $100,000 a year and was to dispose of the entire property at her death. Thus Mary Kenan and her family came to be prospective multimillionaires.

At the time Mary Lily Kenan was married to H. M. Flagler a little 4-year-old girl was playing about the lawn of her father's home in Wilmington, N. C. Her name was Louise Wise, and she was the only child of Mrs. Mary Kenan Flagler's sister. Her father was prosperous in a modest way. His daughter had no reason to hope for a destiny more brilliant than that of hundreds of other young girls growing up in small towns. The marriage of her aunt changed all this. Barring the unlikely contingency of a direct heir, Louise Wise stood in line to inherit the Flagler millions through her aunt. The little girl was not more than 6 when this outcome was accepted as likely, and little Louise Wise was accordingly taken under the wing of her aunt and educated with a view to preparing her for a great inheritance. She was sent to school in New York, finished her American education at the Dobbs School at Dobbs Ferry and was then sent to Paris, where she attended the institution of Mme. Payen.

Last year the engagement of this fortunate girl's fairy aunt was announced in New York. Soon afterward she was married to Judge Robert Worth Bingham of Lexington and Louisville, Ky. Judge Bingham had been Mayor of the latter city, was well known in Kentucky politics and was himself wealthy. After the wedding, which took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones at 5 East Sixty-first street, New York, the couple went to Kentucky to live, and there, after less than a year, Mrs. Bingham died.

Meantime the fortunate niece also had been married, it is said, in compliance with her aunt's wish. Her husband is Laurence Lewis of Cincinnati, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thornton Lewis, who are widely known in Ohio society. She had just passed her twentieth birth anniversary at her aunt's death and had hardly got past the stage of bridal congratulations when death placed her in line for the possession of the great Flagler hoard.

It was, however, generally supposed that the marriage of Mrs. Mary Kenan Flagler would bring about a division of the great estate with Judge Bingham. But the filing of the will, the other

THE FUNNY MAN'S "BEST THING I EVER WROTE"

American newspaper and magazine humorists, after pointing out that their calling is no joke, submit the stories and poems of which they are fondest and which appealed most to readers all over the country -:- -:- -:- -:- -:-

THE annual convention of the funny men of American newspapers and magazines — said by observers to rival in solemnity a similar gathering of undertakers—furnished an occasion this year for gathering a symposium of what the delegates themselves considered their best work. "What was the best thing you ever wrote?" they were asked, and the responses appear on this page.

In the letters accompanying the contributions, most of the humorists bewailed their hard lot. It's no joke, they pointed out, to say things that are expected to make people laugh 365 days in the year, especially when one sits down to a typewriter with the realization that his breakfast has not set well and that this is rent day.

Joe Cone, of Life, Judge and Puck, in writing to Joe Toye of the Boston Post, who made the compilation, was especially proud of the fact that he wrote the first aviation joke that became generally current. It is the one about the aviator who took his wife aloft and in response to her demand that he descend because she had dropped one of the pearl buttons off her coat, declared:

"Aw, keep your seat. That isn't any pearl button. That's Lake Erie."

Although the men who responded all come under the head of humorists and are members of the American Press Humorists Association, which, one of them writes, puts him in a position to borrow a dollar occasionally, not all of them deemed that their work in the field of humor was their best and one or two more serious efforts appear here.

Son of Athens, Ere You Shine.

Son of Athens, ere you shine
These bespattered shoes of mine
Let me on your mind impress
With the utmost earnestness
This, my warning orthodox,
Keep the polish off my socks!

By the gods in heaven above,
By the burning Sappho's love,
By the blood of Scio's vine,
By Anacreon's song divine,
By Parnassus' well-known rocks,
Keep the polish off my socks!

Son of Athens, hear my vow,
There will be one Helva row,
Take it even now from me.
It will beat Thermopylae,
So, if you'd escape some shocks,
Keep the polish off my socks!

By WALT MASON (UNCLE WALT).

The Little Green Tents.

The little green tents where the soldiers sleep, and the sunbeams play and the women weep, are covered with flowers today; and between the tents walk the weary few, who were young and stalwart in 'sixty-two, when they went to the war away. The little green tents are built of sod, and they are not long and they are not broad, but the soldiers have lots of room; and the sod is part of the land they saved, when the flag of the enemy darkly waved, the symbol of dole and doom. The little green tent is a thing divine; the little green tent is a country's shrine, where patriots kneel and pray; and the brave men left, so old, so few, were young and stalwart in 'sixty-two, when they went to the war away.

By ROY MOULTON.

Roy K. Moulton decided that his description of Sylveste, the street piano man, was the most popular. And he heard the greatest response from the little tale of Sylveste going to the piano manufacturer to have the record of the "Marseillaise" put in his street piano—only to find when he was picked up in the dust, after being tumbled and rolled by a whole gang of patriots that the manufacturer had surreptitiously slipped into the machine the record of "Die Wacht Am Rhine."

He added:

"In 1899 I invented the story about the man whose hair was falling out and who went to the doctor and asked him if he knew of anything good to keep the hair in.

"The doctor said: 'Yes, a cigar box.'

"This joke has found a place in every minstrel show since and in several musical comedies.

"This gag has haunted me for years.

"I saw it only last week in the Detroit Free Press, credited to the Salt Lake Republican. It is favorite with exchange editors, and I run across it at least once a week.

"I am cured and have not written a gag in 15 years."

By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS (Houston Daily Post).

And just to think, I entered this humorist game to get away from work! Foolish man that I was! Before doing this I was a care-free stereotyper. All I had to do was to get to work at 2:30 a. m. and pour hot metal until 6:30 p. m. and all the rest of my time was my own to do with as I pleased; and now look at me! When you ask me how I came to break into the game, I must reply in the words of old Father Adam: "It was the woman." Every time a neighbor of ours would get a new tin Lizzie or a new dog or a new pair of pants, Mrs. Lewis would look at me as if I were a bug, and without being a mind reader I could tell that she was thinking: "Why didn't I marry a man like that?" So, in self-defense, I had to become a humorist. I hope that the Great Engineer, when he punishes me for it, will take into consideration how I was forced into it.

By JOHN D. WELLS (Buffalo Evening News). Whom the late Elbert Hubbard called "the logical successor to James Whitcomb Riley".

I think the verse, "An Old Sayin' of Mother's," published in the Fra, is probably as widely read as anything I ever wrote. I can't see the merit in it myself, but apparently other people do. I am disposed to take their word for it.

An Old Sayin' of Mother's.

The older that a body gits
The better, seems t' me,
He recollects the folks and jokes
An' things that used t' be;
Like other night, whilst settin' there
An rompin' through the years,
An' driftin' on the back'urds way,
I swan I heerd my mother say:
"Go wash your neck an' ears!"

It took me back fer forty years,
An' I's a boy again,
With same dislike fer water that
Was natural to me then;
I seemed t' feel my speerit rise,
An' feel my boyish tears
A-rollin' down in same ol' way,
Like when my mother used t' say:
"Go wash your neck an' ears!"

Clean neck an' ears, you reckolect,
Was purt' nigh' disgrace—
There wan't no sense in washin' 'cept
Perhaps a body's face!
We used t' think that mas was made
To add to boyish keers,
An' stand around in bossin' way,
When boys was tiredest, an' say:
"Go wash your neck an' ears!"

An' yit I'll warrant that tonight
You'd like t' go to bed
In same ol' room, with locust bloom
A-droopin' overhead
On shingle roof, a' hold yer breath
With all your boyish fears,
An' hear yer mother softly creep
Upstairs an' ask y': "Gone to sleep?—
Did y' wash yer neck an' ears?"

By J. A. WALDRON (Editor of Judge).

J. A. Waldron, the editor of Judge, personally liked the satire that he wrote for that publication better than any verse he had fabricated. But the poem from which he had heard the most comment was the following:

The Cave Man.

The cave man must have been a mutt
Say those who've conned his occiput.
Bewhiskered, hairy and uncouth,
He was a sorry sight in sooth.
Whenever he felt need of grub
He sallied for it with a club,
And when he'd got it, tooth and paw
Reduced it while he wolfed it raw.
If mate he wanted, forth he'd fare
And drag a damsel by the hair;
While if a rival he should meet
He'd methods use now obsolete.
The things that make life happy here
He never knew, and yet I fear
The cave man, were he with us now,
Some of our ways would disavow.
He never knew of fancy booze,
Or safety razors, or tight shoes.
Although his hair may have been greased,
He did not have his trousers creased.
When Summer on its job was bent,
He loafed and dreamed and naked went;
In Winter he thought not of coal,
But hibernated in his hole.
No modish clothes or social ways
Brought worried nights or weary days.
No market tape or politics,
Or book purveyors or gold bricks
His mind disturbed, or worry that
He needed massage for his fat.
He did not twist his neck awry
To glimpse a slit skirt passing by,
He surely lacked some things of worth—
But then the cave man had the earth.

By NEWTON NEWKIRK (Boston Post).

Newton Newkirk said the funniest thing he ever saw was at a county fair held near Bingville.

There was a farmer lying on his back out on the race course watching the balloon ascension. Newt asked the farmer why he didn't stand up, and the farmer says:

"Stand up, you durn fool! I've got a stiff neck!"

By EDGAR A. GUEST (Detroit Free Press).

It takes a heap o' livin' in a house t' make it home,
A heap o' sun and shadder, an' you sometimes have t' roam
An' hunger fer 'em somehow, with 'em allus on yer mind.
It don't make any differunce how rich yer get t' be,
Until somehow yer soul is sort o' wrapped round everything.

Home ain't a place that gold can buy or get up in a minute,
Afore it's home there's got t' be a heap of livin' in it;
Within th' walls there's got t' be some babies born, an' then
An' grajerly as time goes on, yer find yer wouldn't part
With anything they ever used—they've grown into yer heart;
The old high chairs, the playthings, too, the little shoes they wore
Yer hoard; an' if yer could ye'd keep th' thumb marks on th' door.

An' in the stillness o' the night t' see Death's angel come,
Fer these are scenes that grip the heart, an' when yer tears are dried,
Yer find the home is dearer than it was an' sanctified;
An' tuggin' allus at yer are the pleasant memories

An' learn t' love th' things ye have by usin' 'em each day;
Even the roses 'round the porch must blossom year by year
Afore they 'come a part o' you, suggestin' someone dear
Who used t' love 'em long ago, and trained 'em jes' t' run
Ye've got to love each brick and stone from cellar up t' dome,

The Atavistic Maid.

Listen, sweetheart, to my plea;
Cut this highly cultured game.
All this fine gentility
Grows to be exceeding tame.
What I want is low-brow love,
Heavy, knock-down, cave-man stuff,
I'm no cooing turtle dove.
Treat me rough, kid; treat me rough!

Can the soft and weepy sighs,
Chop the meek and humble pose;
I'm no cut-glass raffle prize,
I'm no fragile little rose.
Grab me with a python grip,
If I struggle, call the bluff.
Want my love? Then take the tip,
Treat me rough, kid; treat me rough!

I don't want my hand caressed
With a nice, respectful peck;
Yank me wildly to your chest,
If I fight you, break my neck!
Please don't be a gentle dub
Spilling la-de-dah-ish guff.
Woo and win me with a club.

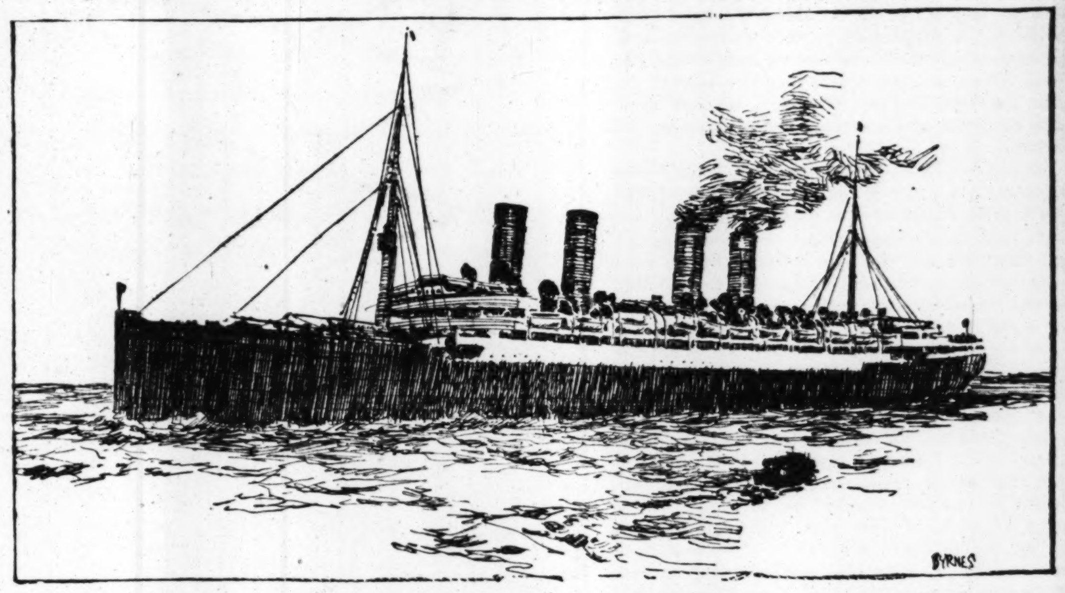
The Karlsruhe's First Skirmish and Her Escape From Four British Cruisers

In a continuation of his diary, Lieutenant Aust, of the famous German commerce raider, tells how the Karlsruhe engaged the British cruiser Bristol at night and then, knowing that other English warships were in the vicinity, left her adversary far behind in a contest of speed—He relates also how the raider, running low on coal, dared to put into a port for a fresh supply -:- -:-



"The Kronprinz turned her broadside toward us. The Captain went over in the cutter to give her Captain orders."

THE war diary of Lieutenant Aust, who was adjutant of the Karlsruhe, began in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch Magazine. It is a detailed record of the operations of the raider from the out break of the war until it was mysteriously destroyed a few months later.

In the first installment, Lieutenant Aust told of conveying former President Huerta of Mexico and his family to Kingston, Jamaica on the German cruiser Dresden, which then proceeded to Port Au Prince, Haiti, where Lieutenant Aust and his chief, Captain Koehler, were transferred to the Karlsruhe. When the news that Germany and England were at war was received the Karlsruhe was cruising in the vicinity of Havana and immediately started on her career as a commerce destroyer.

The first event of the war, so far as the Karlsruhe was concerned, was the stopping of an Italian steamer, which was allowed to proceed. Then the cruiser got into wireless communication with the steamer Kronprinz Wilhelm, which Captain Koehler determined to fit out as an auxiliary, and arrangements were made for a rendezvous. The diary continues from that point.

6 AUGUST. At daylight, about 7 o'clock, we sighted a steamer dead ahead on course opposite to ours. As we could not make her out and, as the radio communication showed that an English cruiser was not far away, we went to "general quarters."

Soon thereafter the steamer turned to starboard and showed us her broadside. We immediately recognized her as the speedy liner "Kronprinz Wilhelm." The "KARLSRUHE" headed for her, stopping on her starboard side. Our Captain went over in a cutter in order to give his orders to her Captain.

About a quarter of an hour later he came back and then brought our ship alongside the steamer's port side, heading S. S. E. In this way the cruiser was amply protected from the wind and wave by the steamer. Even so, the vessels worked very heavily and would not have lived through it had we not used the wood and rope fenders which we had prepared for this purpose on the preceding day.

The work of shifting over the guns and ammunition began at once. Also the unnecessary boats, motor launches and gig were sent over to the "Kronprinz Wilhelm." Every means was employed to hurry the work. The bands played on each ship and caused the men's spirits to rise, resulting in many remarks being exchanged from ship to ship. The lookouts, however, were doubled on each ship.

In the middle of these proceedings the lookout in the foretop reported, about 10:15, a smoke cloud to S. by W. Soon two masts, then three smokepipes and then the high bridge of the vessel could be distinctly seen against the clear background. It was patent to all of us that this was the well-known silhouette of a cruiser of the "Suffolk" type, and we guessed she was the "BERWICK;" that is, the officers guessed that because she was the most likely one to appear; the men thought so because she was to them the best known of all the ships of that class.

According to the English press we learned later on that she was the "SUFFOLK." We had mistaken the Admiral's flag for a top flag and were pleased because we thought she had decorated herself preparatory to battle.

The enemy cruiser then headed about N. E. She did not seem to see us until after her bridge was well above the horizon. And then, for the first time, she turned toward us.

As soon as the Captain recognized the vessel as an enemy, he stopped the work on both our ships. Officers and men that were to exchange ships quickly jumped aboard. The lines were cast off. The "KARLSRUHE" went astern at full power, "Kronprinz Wilhelm" ahead, and the ships drew apart to the strains of the bands, ours playing "The Watch on the Rhein" and theirs "Deutschland, Deutschland, Ueber Alles," and amid thundering cheers of the crews. "The "Kronprinz Wilhelm" was towing our motor boats and the Captain's gig astern, and these soon found their watery graves.

Then, for the second time that day, the "KARLSRUHE" went to "general quarters." The "Kronprinz Wilhelm" proceeded on a N. N. E. course, the "KARLSRUHE" on a N. by W. course, and soon each disappeared over the horizon.

We had just enough time to convert the "Kronprinz Wilhelm" into an auxiliary cruiser. At the last minute our navigator, Lieut. Thierfelder, took command of the latest acquisition to the Imperial German Navy, accompanied by the best wishes of all of us.

The "KARLSRUHE" received three officers of the reserve, Lieutenant of Reserves Frese, who took over Thierfelder's duties, and Ensigns of Reserves Hentchel and Eyring. In addition, the steamer transferred some stores to us.

The Englishman took up the pursuit of the "KARLSRUHE," which was fine for the "Kronprinz Wilhelm," as it gave her time to complete her fitting out, mounting of guns, etc.

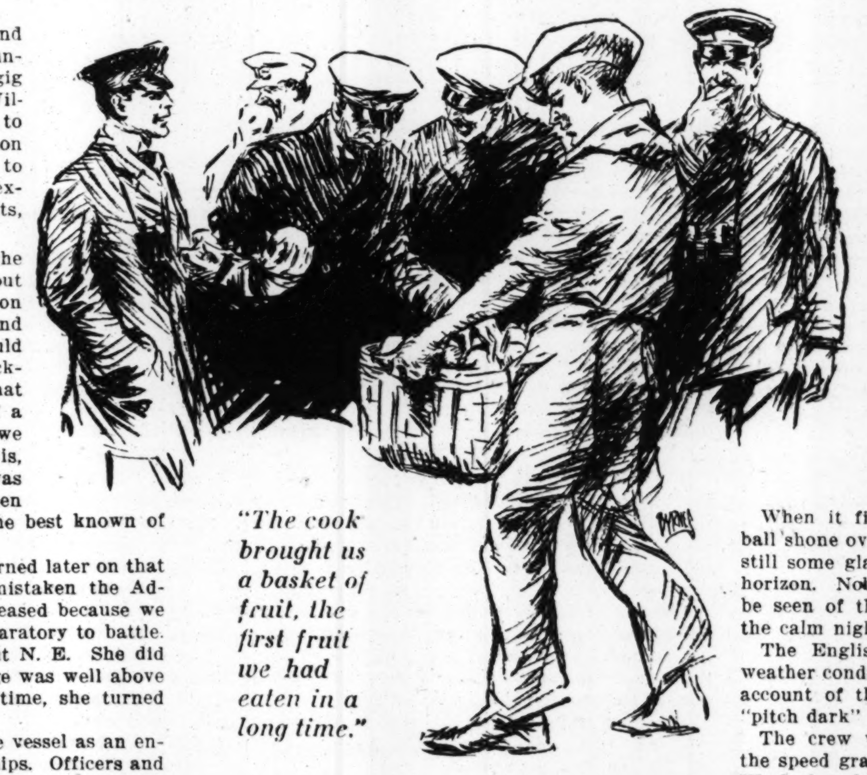
According to the aforementioned newspaper article, the English Admiral thought he had interrupted us while coaling from the liner, and so he had caught us short of fuel.

The "KARLSRUHE" was making 21 knots. The speed of the enemy was estimated at not over 19 knots. She seemed to be losing rapidly. We could still see her smoke clouds, which, like ours, rose vertically, until 4 p. m.

All hands on the "KARLSRUHE" were in great glee. We were pleased that we had been able to finish the work of fitting out the auxiliary cruiser. We were not very happy, however, to have to run from the enemy. But everybody thoroughly understood how useless it would have been to have engaged the enemy, heavily overpowering us in everything but speed. We all knew that our task was a far different one, namely the destruction of enemy commerce, and we had just reached the point where we could begin our operations. This would cause much more discomfort to our pursuer.

All the officers, except those on duty at other places, gathered on the bridge. The cook brought up a basket of apples and oranges that we had received from the "Kronprinz Wilhelm." We all pitched in and ate our fill of the fruits which we had been denied for so long.

When she left Kiel the "KARLSRUHE" shipped two Chinamen for laundry work. When war broke out they clamored incessantly; they would soon be shot to pieces, therefore they begged the Captain to put them ashore as soon as possible. On this day we discovered that they were missing. They had taken the opportunity to ship aboard the great and therefore more trustworthy steamer that mounted no "boom-booms," as they called our guns. The poor devils had jumped from the frying pan into the fire. I wondered what they thought when they finally saw that the steamer, instead of 12-10.5 cm. guns, mounted 2-8.8 cm. guns!



"The cook brought us a basket of fruit, the first fruit we had eaten in a long time."

Meantime the "KARLSRUHE" decreased speed and proceeded to the northward.

At 7:40 p. m. the alarm was sounded. For the third time in one day the men manned the guns.

A totally darkened ship appeared on the port beam. The range was about 6000 meters. In the moonlight we could make out the silhouette of a long, low vessel, with at least three smokepipes. We immediately remembered the small English cruiser "BRISTOL," our friend of Puerto Mexico.

The enemy soon opened fire, which we answered immediately. For about an hour the two ships steamed parallel courses. Each wished to get forward of the other's beam. This finally resulted in a speed of 25 knots.

At first the enemy managed to keep up the speed, but after 8 o'clock she fell behind. Her fire grew weaker and finally ceased entirely. Then the "BRISTOL" was engulfed in our heavy, impenetrable smoke clouds, so that we also had to cease firing.

There was no special advantage in continuing a fight through the night, so the Captain decided not to fire any longer. A night engagement, even in calm, clear weather, is always full of uncertainties and the result may not depend on the same factors that decide a day battle. Furthermore, we knew that the two armored cruisers, "LANCASTER" and "ESSEX," were to the northward of us, while to the southward were the "SUFFOLK," our pursuer, and the "BERWICK." It was a dead sure thing that the "SUFFOLK" had, that forenoon, endeavored to set all the other cruisers on our trail. Therefore we tried our best to jam his radiograms. Our position amid the enemy cruisers would soon be given away by these radios. We could therefore assume that one or more of the armored cruisers would sooner or later appear on the scene of battle. Then our fate would have been sealed after only two days of warfare and before we had actually been able to accomplish our main mission.

Therefore, the Captain decided to break off the fight, and, at all costs, to save the ship for commerce destruction.

During the short fight the "KARLSRUHE" was not hit, even though the enemy salvos landed close both forward and abaft the ship. We were not certain whether the enemy was hit or not.

The chase and the high speed during the fight had reduced our fuel supply to such a point that the Captain decided to run to some neutral harbor and coal ship. It was not wise to select one of the North American ports because of the risk of having another pursuit by one of the northerly armored cruisers, especially if one of these managed to get between us and the coast.

During the fight we steered a northeasterly course. About 10 o'clock the Captain brought the ship about and headed for Porto Rico. We hoped our change of course would not be noted by the enemy, because we did it under the concealment of our smoke clouds and the heavy smoke mist that hung close to the water. We saw no more of the enemy that night. We did not know whether she was following us or not. Speed was gradually reduced to 16 knots.

7 AUGUST. There was every expectation of our being engaged the following morning. Before daylight all the officers gathered on the bridge when the Captain took the precaution to send the crew to "general quarters." Quartermasters were sent to augment the usual lookouts. We were all at high tension, wondering in which direction the first smoke cloud would appear. It grew lighter and lighter, while the tension increased.

When it finally became light and the blood-red sun ball shone over the quiet surface of the ocean there were still some glasses searching the clear, sharp line of the horizon. Nobody could believe it; there was nothing to be seen of the enemy. In spite of the moonlight and the calm night, she did not see us come about.

The English seem to make peculiar entries of the weather conditions in their navy records. In the English account of the engagement the night was recorded as "pitch dark" and the sea as "heavy"!

The crew was relieved from "general quarters" and the speed gradually reduced to 12 knots during the day. We had to be economical with our fuel if we hoped to reach Porto Rico. At 12 knots we consumed the least amount of coal.

But we were destined to have another scare this day. The radio officer reported to the Captain that the radio signals of an English man-o'-war were increasing in strength. About 7 a. m. this became so strong that we estimated that an English cruiser was close at hand and converging on our course.

The next hours were very critical ones for the "KARLSRUHE." We could not take many chances with our rapidly disappearing coal supply. The speed must not be increased, as the coal consumption would increase with each knot.

We estimated that the unseen enemy must be one of the "Suffolk" type of armored cruisers. Excepting the "BRISTOL" there were no other ships than armored cruisers in the West Indian waters. The English press reports confirmed our opinions. According to these reports this vessel could have been none other than the "BERWICK," which was returning from her unsuccessful pursuit of the "Kronprinz Wilhelm."

Had the armored cruiser come in sight and had we endeavored to escape by increasing speed, we would have faced the probability of having to burn our last ton of coal at sea. On the contrary, had we chosen to fight, the result of such an unequal battle would never have been in doubt. In either case, we would have reached the end of our string before we really had begun. All in all, the second choice seemed to offer the best results. We could then at least hope to do as much damage as possible to the enemy.

Abut 10 o'clock the unseen foe "yelled" the loudest. Then she gradually grew quiet. She had passed us under the horizon.

We had left some anxious moments behind us. Waiting for the end without being able to do anything, without being able to properly defend ourselves, was not a feeling calculated to raise the spirits. But each one kept his thoughts to himself. We will always remember the bearing of our Captain during these hours, probably the worst hours for him in the entire war. What was in the mind of this man who outwardly appeared so calm that he raised the spirits of all who came near him? He had not left the bridge since the fight and was only persuaded to give himself up to a few hours' sleep in a cane chair that had been brought up on the bridge for him. In this way days and weeks of greatest physical and mental strain were passed through. And in spite of it all his confidence carried him through.

8 AUGUST. This day the crew did the hardest and most strenuous work since the war began. They worked in two watches in the bunkers trimming the coal down toward the boilers. Because of the terrible heat they stripped until almost naked and, when their hours of rest arrived, they lay like Moors on the decks under the awnings that had been spread to protect them from the sun's rays.

Our only real protection these days was the watchfulness of our lookouts.

SAN JUAN DE PORTO RICO.

9 AUGUST. At daylight the "KARLSRUHE" came into the harbor of San Juan de Porto Rico. It was Sunday. Everything ashore was deadly quiet. Soon, however, the town woke up. In spite of the early hour a crowd gathered at the landing place and along the beach

As we learned later, the reports of our fight had already been received. And, for the first time, we became acquainted with the English lies. All newspapers had reported a victory for the English. The "KARLSRUHE" had been heavily damaged and then surrendered. The "captured" vessel had been towed to Kingston. The report was, of course, believed, just like everything that England and France report is accepted as holy gospel in America. An American reporter who came aboard with an old American General a. D. soon after our arrival declared very decidedly that we were not the "KARLSRUHE," because she had been "captured," but, of course, we evidently did not know that; instead we were the "STRASSBURG" and had merely changed our name! I hope he still remains in ignorance. The press also brought the report that the "GOEBEN" and "BRESLAU" had been "captured" in the Mediterranean. But we hoped that they had suffered the same "fate" that we had.

At the beginning of the war the word "captured" played a most remarkable role in the English foreign press. Several German Generals, more often the Crown Prince, untold soldiers, usually whole divisions and corps, were "captured" daily. It was lucky for us that we learned the meaning of this word so early in the war. And so we knew that it simply represented pleasant wishes and that it could not be interpreted literally. By and by even this word was used less frequently.

The old General assured us of his pro-German sympathies. He had been in Germany many years ago and, for this reason, spoke very feelingly. I was inclined to believe him when, on his hearing the name "Koehler," he recalled the incidents of April of this year at Tampico, Mexico. At that time our Captain had taken 900 American citizens, mostly women and children, under the protection of the German flag, saving them from the violence of the Mexican mobs, while the American cruisers steamed downstream and out into the roadsteads, leaving their fellow citizens to their fate.

The steamer "Odenwald" of the Hamburg-American Line lay in harbor. On sighting her we had hoped for coal. But she had none. However, the Captain was prepared to immediately transfer provisions to us, and also sent over 13 war volunteers and five reservists. This addition to our crew was very opportune.

As soon as we arrived, our Captain hurried ashore to hunt up our Consul. It was our bad luck to have arrived on a Sunday. The German Consul, like all the prosperous business people, lived in the suburbs and across the beautiful bay from the town, so he had to be summoned by telephone. He arrived as quickly as possible and, assisted by the manager of the Hamburg-American Line, took all the means at his disposal to get all the necessities for us. Later on the Captain thanked both these gentlemen in the most glowing terms.

Shortly after 9 o'clock we went alongside a coal barge that was said to hold 550 tons. Another, with 250 tons, was afterward taken on the port side. The coaling apparatus was primitive and inefficient. Therefore, the rate of coaling was very slow, even though the exhausted men, despite the glowing heat, worked like fiends. It took four hours to take the first 300 tons. The contents of the barges, American property, was more coal dust than lumps. But in spite of the efforts of the Germans, it was impossible to get better coal.

The entire crew of the "Odenwald" pitched in and assisted coaling. They did this voluntarily. In the evening, when they returned to their ship in their boat, our men thanked them with three cheers.

The only cables in San Juan are English and French. As you may imagine, as soon as we arrived, all the cables were immediately put to use. The enemy Consuls had attended to that. Even the American radio station, that pretended to be strictly neutral, had a lot to gossip about on that day. With whom was the station so friendly? Certainly not with the other neutral shore stations, that could learn the news over the land cables just as easily. The coaling was finished about 7 p. m. We had taken about 500 tons; that was exactly the amount necessary to reach the nearest neutral harbor.

From the German colony we received our first gifts—cigars, cigarettes and fruit.

Shortly after sunset we received the report that two enemy cruisers were approaching the island from the eastward at high speed. The Captain did not believe the report. He himself climbed up in the foretop and took me with him. Despite the best glasses and the most careful searching we could not discover the ships. And then darkness closed down.

The report did not seem to be entirely trustworthy. If there had been any English warships in the neighborhood they would most certainly have received the news of our presence rapidly enough. Even though the Captain did not believe the reports, still we had to prepare for a possible meeting on going out to sea.

When the "KARLSRUHE" left San Juan, totally darkened except side and masthead lights (and even these were doused as soon as we cleared the harbor) it was pitch dark and then a tropical rainstorm like a cloudburst fell, so that, after a very short time, we lost sight of the lights of San Juan. If we had passed any enemy ships it would have been impossible for them to have seen us or for us to have sighted them.

This weather kept up until 9 o'clock. Then it cleared up and the moon came out, lighting up the night with the usual tropical clearness. About 10 o'clock we were abeam of the light on Cape San Juan, the N. E. end of the island. Then the Captain brought the ship on a southerly course and took her through the narrow, dangerous passage to the eastward of the island.

This dangerous passage was made easier, if not entirely possible, by the light of the moon. Had the weather, that greeted us on leaving San Juan, held out the Captain would probably have decided against risking this passage. Twice in one night did the heavens favor us!

CURACAO.

10 AUGUST. Anyone, even a layman, could tell by our draft that we still needed coal. The Englishman thought we would head for St. Thomas to get coal. Even while we were still in San Juan they were speaking of that.

Between 11 and 12 o'clock the Captain enlisted the 13 volunteers from the steamer "Odenwald." The officers not on watch gathered on the poop. Because of the seriousness of the times all special ceremony was omitted, a fact which touched the hearts of all.

12 AUGUST. At dawn on 12 August the "KARLSRUHE" entered Wilemstad.

In San Juan we heard various rumors regarding the attitude of the Netherlands. Even though we could not believe all we heard we did not know what our reception might be. Further, it was possible that we might meet an enemy ship there. Therefore, the Captain had all the crew at battle stations.

But soon everything came to life; the forts began to signal, bugles were blowing and the garrison sounded the alarm.

The soldiers swarmed out along the beach and from behind the quay walls. We could not decide whether they were drawn out merely to see us or whether they were preparing to defend themselves. Here and there they peeped with curiosity from behind the rocky blocks and the corners of the sea wall at the approaching enemy. Meantime, our pilot flag flew in plain sight, and although we had approached very closely, nobody paid any attention to it. After a long wait a steamboat came out of the narrow entrance of the harbor into the outer roadstead and headed for us. Then the Captain sounded the retreat from battle stations and had all ammunition sent below. In addition to the pilot the pinnace brought out the Captain of the coast defense vessel, "Jacob von Heemskerk," who was also a Commodore. He was a small, nervous man, who spoke German fluently. In spite of his friendly attitude, we could not help but notice that his careworn face showed signs of much anxiety.

He came in accordance with the Governor's orders and promised us coal, but also warned us of the possibility of their receiving a report most any minute announcing the declaration of war between Holland and Germany. The Governor did not know exactly what attitude to assume. For several days he had received no orders from his Government. The cables were English and French and for several days the press had been spreading all sorts of war rumors of English-French origin, which he, of course, did not believe.

The Dutchman was pleased with our friendly attitude and the "KARLSRUHE" proceeded on into the inner harbor.

Wilemstad is so clean and European that we would have thought we were back in Holland had it not been for the many negroes.

In the middle of this picture of peace, undisturbed even by the presence of the old forts, we presently came on a picture of war. In the inner harbor, on either side of the narrow entrance, lay the two coast defense vessels, "Jacob von Heemskerk" and "Kortenaer" (an old friend from Mexico), all stripped and cleared for action. The muzzles of their guns were trained on the entrance and pointing directly at us, as if we were poor sinners being brought back to trial.

The "KARLSRUHE" went alongside the wharf of Maduro & Sons, chief of this company being the Austrian Consul. As soon as we had secured the Captains of the two coast defense vessels came aboard. Capt. Van der Wal, commanding the "Kortenaer," was well known to Commander Koehler and to me from the Mexican disturbances. He and his countrymen had received many favors from the Captain of the "DRESDEN" at that time. He immediately greeted us with undisguised pleasure. They came at the Governor's direction, to tell us that there was no objection to our taking coal. They allowed us 1200 tons. The Captain later on told us that they had asked him to give his promise to intern the ship in case the declaration of war should arrive. Of course, the Captain rejected this proposal. The Hollanders had to be satisfied with that.

Commander Koehler left the ship with them to make his call on the Governor. On his return he said that the Governor had been complaining about the English and the French Consuls, who had changed all the European reports and who bothered him with all sorts of requests looking toward the interning of the German cruiser.

Meantime, about 8 a. m., the coaling began. The coal was good, the coaling apparatus efficient, and by 7 p. m. we had taken 1100 tons aboard.

During the coaling a Peruvian torpedo boat arrived. Somebody started the rumor that she was a disguised Frenchman or that she was about to be sold to the French. In addition there were said to be armored cruisers, French ones this time, outside the harbor. The originators of these yarns had no luck this time. Our men already knew from the San Juan affair just how much of this to believe.

When we arrived off Wilemstad, two steamers appeared at the same time. One of them went on in just ahead of us. It was the American steamer "Philadelphia." The other, as soon as she made us out, headed for territorial water at top speed and disappeared into the inner harbor. Later we discovered that she was the German steamer "Stadt Schleswig" of the H. C. Horn Co. of Schleswig. She had taken us for an English warship.

The captain of this steamer, Zimmerman, placed his ship at our disposal. She was in ballast and bound for Mexico. As in the case of the "Odenwald" at San Juan, so also here did the men of the "Stadt Schleswig" volunteer to come over and help our men coal ship.

The steamer "Philadelphia" came from Caracas and had several Germans, among them reserve army officers, who were trying to get home. They reported aboard the "KARLSRUHE," but could not be accepted, as they were not fitted for sea service.

That afternoon the Captain took a ride in an auto with our Consul out to an ostrich farm on the island. The trip refreshed him very much and he was well pleased with it.

In honor of our presence many pamphlets were circulated. They told of great French successes (less for the English, which was to us very suspicious; in San Juan it was just the reverse!) and terrible things for the Germans. The barbarians had overrun Holland. In spite of their heroic defense the Hollanders were forced to give way to the overpowerful invaders. The trail of the Germans was marked by the most terrible atrocities, etc., etc.

If I am not mistaken the Governor confiscated these pamphlets and forbade their being published again.

The German colony and the firm of Maduro & Sons sent us presents, cigars and Curacao brandy. One must not criticise presents, but the brandy soon suffered the same fate as did the famous "gift cigars" on our home front.

Shortly before 8 p. m. the "KARLSRUHE" departed, accompanied by the cheers of the crew of the "Stadt Schleswig," that lay on one side of the narrow entrance, and of the Germans on the steamer "Philadelphia" that lay on the other side. While we were sliding out all the German throats sang "Deutschland, Deutschland, Ueber Alles," and we all joined in with great vigor.

An hour later the moon rose in the clear, starry heavens and lighted our way, just as it did the night we left San Juan.

OUR FIRST CATCH.

13-17 AUGUST. We were slowly steaming an easterly course along the coast of Venezuela. We had hoped to meet enemy steamers here, as many English and French lines passed along this region en route to Caracas.

The Man Who Is Directing Italy's Big Drive

Gen. Luigi Cadorna, who has been a soldier since his boyhood, has made a life-long study of the difficult ground over which his army is now fighting and he has the confidence of his men because he never uselessly sends them into battle—He is the only allied-general, in supreme command when his country entered the war, who has not been demoted or "promoted"—A remarkable memory one of his chief characteristics -:- -:- -:-

"WHY don't the Italians do something?" is a question which has a familiar sound. Nearly everybody in America who is at all interested in the war news—and who is not?—has been asking it for many months of anyone who would listen. And it invariably happened that the other gave it up and they parted shaking their heads.

It is not yet known just why the Italians didn't do something all those months, but they are of a certainty doing something now, or did something when they launched their recent offensive against the Austrians on the Isonzo. Their long inactivity probably was due to the fact that they were getting ready, and when they got ready they struck.

If the people of America, and doubtless of other countries, asked that question so persistently, what must the people of Italy have been saying to one another when, day after day and week after week, there came no news from the front? What they said must have caused the ears of the Commander in Chief of the two millions of Italians in the field to tingle, which brings us down to a consideration of that same Commander in Chief, Gen. Luigi Cadorna.

At the present writing Gen. Cadorna has a distinction which is shared by none of the allied Generals, and very few of the German. He is the only allied commander who has not been removed or "promoted" since his entrance upon the stage in the world war. From present indications peace will find Gen. Cadorna occupying the same position that he does today, for he has the confidence of his King, his people and his army, and the respect of the other allied commanders.

Figuratively speaking, Gen. Cadorna put on a uniform when he was a mere boy and since has never taken it off. He entered a military school in 1860 and when only 18 years old was made a Second Lieutenant on the General Staff. But his career was virtually assured, for he came from a fighting family, being a grandson of the Cadorna who led an army against the French when they invaded Piedmont, and a son of Count Raffael Cadorna, who led the Italian troops into Rome in 1870 and turned the city over for a capital to the kingdom of Victor Emmanuel the Second. The father, too, fought with the French in the Crimea and before commanding the army that marched on Rome was Minister of War in Tuscany. He it was who suppressed the uprisings in Sicily and Emilia, two of the most bloody in the history of the new kingdom.

Five years after he had been attached to the General Staff young Cadorna was made a Captain, and about this time became the author of a series of pamphlets on the different zones of the Italian frontier, which proved to be highly instructive in a military sense. This and subsequent study of the ground over which the Italian and Austrian armies are now fighting is standing him in good stead now. He did not stop there, but throughout his life he has made his brain a remarkable storehouse of information concerning the territory on the northern boundary of Italy and he knows in detail the difficulties and natural advantages of the most obscure routes and paths of that territory, especially among the Alps.

When a Captain, Cadorna also wrote a book on the Franco-Prussian War which revealed in him an unusual knowledge of military affairs. Then when he was made a Major in 1883 he revolutionized the system of tactics in use by the Italian army. In 1892, when he was 42, he was made a Colonel of Bersaglieri and for the first time was given an opportunity to demonstrate his fitness as a disciplinarian as well as a tactician. His promotion to a major-generalship came six years later and he was only prevented by politics from becoming the successor to Gen. Saletta, Chief of the General Staff, when that officer was retired by reason of age. The post was given to Gen. Pollio, and then fell to Cadorna, who in the meantime had distinguished himself in the Italian army maneuvers when, as the head of one of the two armies, he conducted a tactical retreat which was criticised as a defeat, and turned it into an offensive that proved to be one of the most important operations of the maneuvers.

GEN. LUIGI CADORNA.

One of the most remarkable traits possessed by Gen. Cadorna is his prodigious memory. It has already been noted that he carries in his head a picture, down to the last detail, of the terrain over which his army is fighting. A more concrete instance of his powers of retention is afforded in the story of how, in the early days of the mobilization of his army in 1915, he prevented one of the cars of a military train from going to the wrong destination. He was riding past the train in his automobile when a mere number on a car loaded with munitions was sufficient to inform him that the car was attached to the wrong train. At that time hundreds of munition trains were moving to all parts of Italy. Gen. Cadorna often astonishes members of his staff with feats of memory like this.

Gen. Cadorna's great popularity with his soldiers undoubtedly is due to his thoughtfulness of them. He never has sent them uselessly into battle. As a result there obtains in the Italian army a high morale and a willingness among the men to vigorously carry out any order which they may receive, knowing that none is given without reason and unless the commanders are morally certain that important results will be achieved. Gen. Cadorna has inspired his under officers with the same feeling, so that one of them, Gen. Ricordi, who fell on the Carso, was especially proud of the military medal which he had received because it was given him for having "with considerate daring led his men to the attack." Gen. Cadorna believes that it is a crime to expend one life wantonly, but at the same time he does not hesitate to sacrifice thousands of lives if he believes that it is necessary to win his objective.

Personally, Gen. Cadorna is a large man, powerful and energetic, but simple, unassuming and optimistic and at times exhibiting a slight touch of humor. His power of command is enhanced by the peculiarly clear and ringing tone of his voice. He is devoted to Italy with a wholeheartedness that often is commented upon by persons with whom he has talked.

Gen. Cadorna, it has been said, never takes any half-way measures. With him there is always the right and the wrong; never any middle ground and he never hesitates an instant to array himself on the side of what he believes to be right. In the handling of his army, the petty details which would harass many another man give him little concern. When, in the early days of the war, the great military station at Udine was being built, and Austrian airplanes were still frequently raiding the city, it was necessary, if the work was to be finished on time, that the tracks be lighted for work at night. But none of the officers in charge were willing to take the responsibility of ordering that this be done, and finally an officer, after vainly endeavoring to induce someone in authority to give the order, called upon Gen. Cadorna and explained the situation.

"Are the night shifts necessary?" the General asked.

He was told that they were.

"Se e necessario, si faccio" (If it is necessary, let it be done), was his immediate reply, and he turned to perusing a mass of reports on his table, which he had been doing when interrupted. As it turned out, no casualties attended the work, but it was made possible only by the General's decision.

Last spring there was considerable talk about the possibility of a renewed Austrian offensive through the Trentino. When the gossip was carried to Cadorna, he said simply: "Never worry about their coming or not coming. I have got ready as if they were to come, and a lot of them, too. That's all."

Cadorna knew whereof he spoke, for while the Austrians did not come, it is well known that, even though he launch an offensive to the east, he is powerful enough to stem a tide from the north.

Gen. Cadorna's quiet determination is best exemplified by a story told in the early days of the war. A General, a brilliant and capable officer holding a very high office, was known to have political views favorable to Germany, and therefore averse to Italy entering the war. Cadorna, as soon as he was appointed to supreme command by the King, sent for this man and spoke about as follows:

"I am aware that you entertain opinions at variance with those that determined the present situation; and since, notwithstanding this fact, I have the highest esteem and consideration for your ability as an officer, it would make me highly uncomfortable to have you so near me, in such a high position, knowing all the time that at heart you disapprove the situation, though I am sure that you would do your duty.

"Probably you would have filled my place better than I may be able to do, but since the King has put me into it, I mean to hold it to the best of my ability and without swerving."

A favorite phrase of Gen. Cadorna's is, "We are doing nicely, thank you," and those who know him declare that this is the best index to the man himself. He never is easily elated by success and at all times is calmly confident in his own strength and that of his men.

When Italy declared war upon Austria, Gen. Cadorna was just a little under 65 years of age. He comes from the North of Italy, from the borderland of Lago Maggoire, between Lombardy and Piedmont. In Pallanza still can be seen the house of his forefathers, although it has passed out of the hands of his family. It is still marked, however, with the family crest. In him are to be observed all of the Lombard uprightness and open-heartedness and his exuberant vitality, fitting in with the traditions of the bersaglieri, to whom he belongs, has endeared him to the Southern people.

Gen. Cadorna keeps in touch not only with the movements of his own army, but is intensely interested in what the French and British and other allies are doing. When he can find time he visits the front in France, and after one of these excursions, on which he was taken to Verdun, he was quoted as declaring that in his opinion the fortress never would be taken. This from a man who is one of the foremost military leaders in Europe, and who has devoted his whole life to a study of things military, should carry weight.

By Paul Farish, formerly of St. Louis.

MIDNIGHT. It was one of those clear and brilliant nights common to Paris in July. The streets were deserted; here and there a dim street lamp emitted a dull glow. Not a sound in the air save the occasional toot of a belated taxicab, for the tramways had ceased running long ago. Paris was asleep.

Suddenly, in the far distance, a faint, weird sound broke the stillness of the night. Again it was repeated, this time a little nearer. A third time we heard it, now more distinctly. It is the queer rise and fall of the Paris fire alarm—pam—poum—pam—poum. Here comes the fire truck up the street, and suddenly issues a terrific, wailing screech that sends a chill up and down the spine. It has the volume and uncanny sound of a steamer's fog horn, but a thousand times more impressive in the midnight air. Just under the window, as the monster slows to shift gears for the grade ahead, he emits another long-drawn-out and fearful shriek, to wake any poor citizen who has failed to hear his first calls. No doubt possible, it is the air alarm. "Alerte No. 2." Enemy aircraft are within 40 miles of Paris.

As if by magic the iron shutters peculiar to the modern French apartment houses are flung open; heads bob out on every side. The night is so clear that the stars seem at arm's reach. Here and there, behind drawn curtains, the light is turned on just long enough to find a wrap of some kind, then out again; otherwise the watchful citizens in the street below hail the careless occupant with loud cries. We hear the siren making its round, now nearer, now farther, till finally it dies away in the distance. On every balcony, at every window, and in the streets black silhouettes gather; a low murmur arises, neighbors discussing the possibilities of the raiders being Zeppelins or airplanes. Suddenly some voice exclaims, "Look there!" All eyes are turned skywards, for far up in the heavens like some great planet, a flag plane signals to her squadron with red and green lights. Now we see all around her the blinking yellow lights of the planes; we hear the hum of motors in every direction, as if we were near a huge beehive. Here and there a great beam of light shoots from the earth, picks up an airplane, follows it a second, then swings away and goes out with a suddenness that hurts the eyes. In the meantime we hear sounds of a discussion in the street below. Two bicycle policemen have alighted in front of the lamp post which adorns the corner. From the noise and gestures, it is evident that an argument is taking place. The question seems to be which policeman has the right to extinguish this lamp? They do not seem to reach a conclusion very rapidly, although advice is freely given from the balconies above. Finally, through failure to agree, the policemen ride off, leaving the lamp lit. Some wag remarks that a bucket of water from the window would have been more effective.

After this interruption the overhead sky again becomes the center of interest. The aerial fleets of the defense of Paris have taken their battle stations; at every level of the upper air a squadron of fleet airplanes cruises, and their lights cross and recross till one wonders how they fail to collide. High up, and heading north with terrific speed, their motors roaring, is a squadron of Nieuports, whose mission it is to act as advanced guards; then, lower, the heavily armed aero-cannons follow their circular course over the outlying districts; over the suburbs float the huge three-seaters, their high-powered motors humming. It is a wonderful display of aerial force.

But the enemy fails to appear. Perhaps he is frightened at the sight of the great preparations being made to greet his arrival, and has deferred his visit. Little by little the balconies empty, and only a few curious remain at the windows; for Paris' guardian angels are at work.

And, in fact, in a few minutes, the fire truck comes down the street, this time sounding the joyful bugle notes, "All's clear."

The Story of Emma McChesney

BY EDNA FERBER

Chapter Eleven .·. Miss Morrissey Helps

IT was Fat Ed Meyers of the Sans-Silk Skirt Co. who first said that Mrs. Emma McChesney was the Maude Adams of the business world. It was on the occasion of his being called to the carpet for his failure to make Sans-silks as popular as Emma McChesney's famed Featherlooms. He spoke in self-defense, heatedly.

"It isn't Featherlooms. It's McChesney. Her line is no better than ours. It's her personality, not her petticoats. She's got a following that swears by her. If Maude Adams was to open on Broadway in 'East Lynne,' they'd flock to see her, wouldn't they? Well, Emma McChesney could sell hoopskirts, I'm telling you. She could sell bustles. She could sell red woolen mittens on Fifth avenue!"

The title stuck.

It was late in September when Mrs. McChesney, sunburned, decidedly under weight, but gloriously triumphant, returned from a four months' tour of South America. Against the earnest protests of her business partner, T. A. Buck, president of the Buck Featherloom Petticoat Co., she had invaded the southern continent and left it abloom with Featherlooms from the Plata to the canal.

Success was no stranger to Mrs. McChesney. This last business victory had not turned her head. But it had come perilously near to tilting that extraordinarily well-balanced part. A certain light in her eyes, a certain set of her chin, an added briskness of bearing, a cocky slant of the eyebrow revealed the fact that, though Mrs. McChesney's feet were still on the ground, she might be said to be standing on tiptoe.

When she had sailed from Brooklyn pier that June afternoon, four months before, she had cast her ordinary load of business responsibility on the unaccustomed shoulders of T. A. Buck. That elegant person, although president of the company which his father had founded, had never been its real head. When trouble threatened in the workroom, it was to Mrs. McChesney that the forewoman came. When an irascible customer in Green Bay, Wis., waxed impatient over the delayed shipment of a Featherloom order, it was to Emma McChesney that his typewritter protest was addressed. When the office machinery needed mental oiling, when a new hand demanded to be put on silk work instead of mercerized, when a consignment of skirt material turned out to be more than usually metallic, it was in Mrs. Emma McChesney's little private office that the tangle was unsnarled.

She walked into that little office, now, at 9 oclock of a brilliant September morning. It was a reassuring room, bright, orderly, workmanlike, reflecting the personality of its owner. She stood in the center of it now and looked about her, eyes glowing, lips parted. She raised her hands high above her head, then brought them down to her sides again with an unconsciously dramatic gesture that expressed triumph, peace, content, relief, accomplishment, and a great and deep satisfaction. T. A. Buck, in the doorway, saw the gesture—and understood.

"Not so bad to get back to it, is it?"

"Bad! It's like a drink of cool spring water after too much champagne. In those miserable South American hotels, how I used to long for the orderliness and quiet of this!"

She took off hat and coat. In a vase on the desk, a cluster of yellow chrysanthemums shook their shaggy heads in welcome. Emma McChesney's quick eye jumped to them, then to Buck, who had come in and was surveying the scene appreciatively.

"Sorry—no. The office staff did that. There's a card of welcome, I believe."

"Oh," said Emma McChesney. The smile was still there, but the radiance was gone.

She seated herself at her desk. Buck took the chair near by. She unlocked a drawer, opened it, rummaged, closed it again, unlocked another. She patted the flat top of her desk with loving fingers.

"I can't help it," she said, with a little shamed laugh; "I'm so glad to get back. I'll probably hug the forewoman and bite a piece out of the first Featherloom I lay hands on. I had to use all my self-control to keep from kissing Jake, the elevator man, coming up."

Out of the corner of her eye, Emma McChesney had been glancing at her handsome business partner. She had found herself doing the same thing from the time he had met her at the dock late in the afternoon of the day before. Those four months had wrought some subtle change. But what? Where? She frowned a moment in thought.

Then:

"Is that a new suit, T. A.?"

"This? Lord, no! Last summer's. Put it on because of this July hangover in September. Why?"

"Oh, I don't know"—vaguely—"I just—wondered."

There was nothing vague about T. A. Buck, however. His old air of leisureliness was gone. His very attitude as he sat there, erect, brisk, confident, was in direct contrast to his old, graceful indolence.

"I'd like to go over the home grounds with you this morning," he said. "Of course, in our talk last night, we didn't cover the South American situation thoroughly. But your letters and the orders told the story. You carried the thing through to success. It's marvelous! But we stay-at-homes haven't been marking time during your absence."

The puzzled frown still sat on Emma McChesney's brow. As though thinking aloud, she said:

"Have you grown thinner, or fatter or—something?"

"Emma, I want to tell you now that—that mother—she—I lost her just a few weeks after you sailed."

Emma McChesney gave a little cry. She came quickly over to him, and one hand went to his shoulder as she stood looking down at him, her face all sympathy and contrition and sorrow.

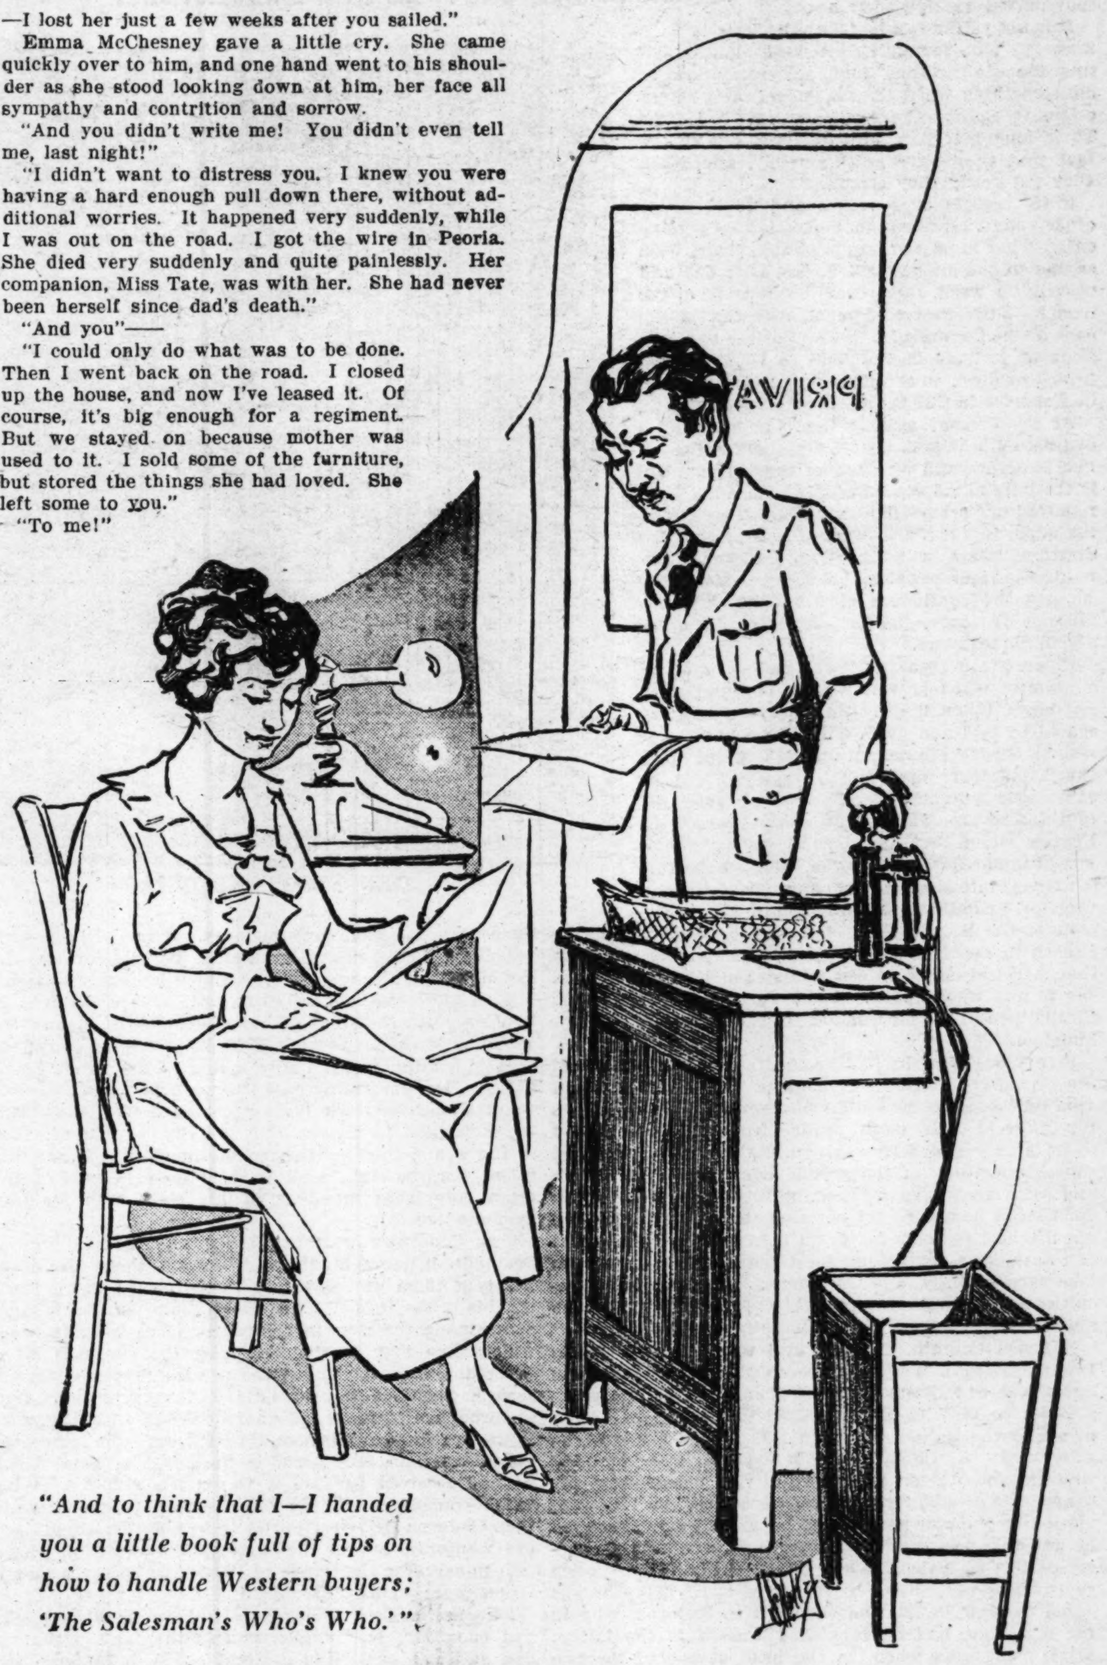
"And you didn't write me! You didn't even tell me, last night!"

"I didn't want to distress you. I knew you were having a hard enough pull down there, without additional worries. It happened very suddenly, while I was out on the road. I got the wire in Peoria. She died very suddenly and quite painlessly. Her companion, Miss Tate, was with her. She had never been herself since dad's death."

"And you"——

"I could only do what was to be done. Then I went back on the road. I closed up the house, and now I've leased it. Of course, it's big enough for a regiment. But we stayed on because mother was used to it. I sold some of the furniture, but stored the things she had loved. She left some to you."

"To me!"



"And to think that I—I handed you a little book full of tips on how to handle Western buyers; 'The Salesman's Who's Who.'"

"You know, she used to enjoy your visits so much, partly because of the way in which you always talked of dad. She left you some jewelry that she was fond of, and that colossal old mahogany buffet that you used to rave over whenever you came up. Heaven knows what you'll do with it! It's a white elephant. If you add another story to it, you could rent it out as an apartment."

"Indeed I shall take it, and cherish it, and polish it up myself every week—the beauty!"

She came back to her chair. They sat a moment in silence. Then Emma McChesney spoke musingly.

"So that was it." Buck looked up. "I sensed something—different. I didn't know. I couldn't explain it."

Buck passed a quick hand over his eyes, shook himself, sat up, erect and brisk again, and plunged, with a directness that was as startling as it was new in him, into the details of Middle Western business.

"Good!" exclaimed Emma McChesney. "It's all very well to know that Featherlooms are safe in South America. But the important thing is to know how they're going in the corn country."

Buck stood up.

"Suppose we transfer this talk to my office. All the papers are there, all the correspondence—all the orders, everything. You can get the whole situation in half an hour. What's the use of talking when figures will tell you."

He walked swiftly over to the door and stood there waiting. Emma McChesney rose. The puzzled look was there again.

"No, that wasn't it, after all," she said.

"Eh?" said Buck. "Wasn't what?"

"Nothing," replied Emma McChesney. "I'm wool gathering this morning. I'm afraid it's going to take me a day or two to get back into harness again."

"If you'd rather wait, if you think you'll be more fit tomorrow or the day after, we'll wait. There's no real hurry. I just thought"——

But Mrs. McChesney led the way across the hall that separated her office from her partner's. Halfway across, she stopped and surveyed the big, bright, busy main office, with its clacking typewriters and rustle and crackle of papers and its air of concentration.

"Why, you've run up a partition there between Miss Casey's desk and the workroom door, haven't you?"

"Yes; it's much better that way."

"Yes, of course. And—why, where are the boys' desks? Spalding's and Hutchinson's, and—they're all gone!" She turned in amazement. "Break it to me! Aren't we using traveling men any more?"

Buck laughed his low, pleasant laugh.

"Oh, yes; but I thought their desks belonged somewhere else than in the main office. They're now installed in the little room between the shop and Healy's office. Close quarters, but better than having them out here where they were inclined to neglect their reports in order to shine in the eyes of that pretty new stenographer. There are one or two other changes. I hope you'll approve of them."

"I'm sure I shall," replied Emma McChesney, a little stiffly.

In Buck's office, she settled back in her chair to watch him as he arranged neat sheaves of papers for her inspection. Her eyes traveled from his keen, eager face to the piles of paper and back again.

"Tell me, did you hit it off with the Ella Sweeneys and the Sadie Harrises of the great Middle West? Is business as bad as the howlers say it is? You said something last night about a novelty bifurcated skirt. Was that the new designer's idea? How have the early buyers taken to it?"

"Stop it! You make me feel like Rheims Cathedral. Don't bombard until negotiations fail."

He handed her the first sheaf of papers. But, before

Convincing Grandma That Joshy Joe Was Right

Her mother didn't vote and her grandmother didn't vote, and her grandmother wouldn't let her girls get any book larnin'; therefore the old ways was good enough for her, but when she discovered that a really truly suffragist could have a grandson who was almost the living image of her daughter's little Silas her mind "jist natchelly changed, that's all" -:- -:- -:-

"La Belle," I said, "I am beginning to think that a plague or something has stripped the globe of all its inhabitants."

By Alice Curtice Moyer-Wing.

"Well," she said, "you ain't sich a awful bad lookin' woman, not so plumb awful. Leastways," she qualified, "I've saw 'em wuss, sometimes. But I'm jist plumb certain that thar's a screw loose somewhars."

It was dog days. Remember the kind we used to have when we were youngsters? I wouldn't undertake to say how many years ago—but you remember them? Well, it was one of those. There was the same warm sizzle in the air, the same heat waves that dazzled your eyes and sent streams of perspiration trickling down your spinal column.

You remember, don't you, how you were told to stay out of the water during dog days? It was all covered over, you know, with a green scum when it stood in the deeper holes of the small streams, and it was haunted by the old, outcast snakefeeder. Remember how you used to follow this old reprobate, and how you imagined you detected him in the act of his nefarious calling as he darted hither and thither just ahead of you? For the life of you, you could never understand how the rattlers and boaconstrictors could hide themselves so swiftly and secretly nor why so harmless at these times—but that was just part of the game, of course, and you accepted it as such.

And there was the devil's darning needle that would sew up your ears if you didn't watch out! Remember him?

Well, it was a day to encourage all these things to happen, that is, if you chance to dwell in a land where pools and children and snakefeeders live happily together.

All the long, hot morning La Belle and I had panted from thirst in a waterless region of the Ozark Flat Woods. We followed dim, worn trails, passed old, deserted cabins and abandoned clearings, each the pitiful evidence of a struggle between man's desire to sit under his own fig tree and the stern forbiddingness of the region—and the latter had won.

"La Belle," I said finally, as we stopped in the shade to breathe a moment, "I am beginning to think that a plague, or something, has stripped the globe of all its inhabitants and that you and I are the only living creatures left upon its sweltering surface."

And then something happened to us when we least expected it, which is often the case, and as is also often the case, La Belle directed the act. Pulling a free use of the rein, she left the trail, selected the most favorable way through the trees and underbrush, and in 10 minutes had brought us to a spot where man, and not the region, had prevailed.

There was a comfortable old log house and some prosperous fields. There was a barn to our left and some farming utensils scattered about. And it was noon. I imagined I caught the odor of biscuits and frying bacon, and I saw La Belle looking with covetous eyes at some sheaf oats in the barnyard.

But alas for human expectations! The first part of the story describes the greeting we received.

"Yes," she repeated, frowning, "thar must be a screw loose somewhars. Besides, this is washday and we wasn't expecting strange company. And another thing, I don't want to vote. My mother didn't vote and my grandmother didn't. My grandmother wouldn't let her girls git any book larnin' nuther, and they growed to be nice women and good mothers. I didn't go to school none myself, and Joshy Joe and me purty nigh parted when he sent our Marthy to town to high school. Joshy Joe is plumb nigh sighted in some things. I was a-tellin' him this mornin' what I thought about you, jist a-lowin' you would be along some of these times, and he says: 'Susie,' he says, 'my grandfather plowed the first field of this here farm with a ox team and a old wooden plow. I am a-plowin' the same field with a good span of mules and a ridin' plow. I git a heap more corn than my grandfather and i git it with a heap less work. They's new ways and they's old ways,' he says. 'But jist give me the new ways,' he says, 'ever time.' Joshy Joe is shore aggervatin'.

"And I jist says to him: 'It don't make no difference, Joshy Joe, what you say. The old ways is still good enough fer me. I don't want to vote. My grandmother didn't vote, and my mother didn't, and I don't aim to nuther, unless I change my mind, which I don't aim to do.' "

A baby trotted out and caught her dress. She bent to lift him in her arms and looked at me again, keenly.

"Of course you cain't never have a grandchild," she said condescendingly.

For the first time that long forenoon I laughed.

"His name is Silas," she continued proudly. "Good old Bible name."

"It is," I agreed. "Mine is named Paul."

"Paul is shore a funny name fer a horse—er maybe it's a dog."

"It's my grandson that's named Paul," I explained.

I handed her a snapshot picture that I carried about with me. His name was written at the bottom. "P-a-u-l," she spelled out. "It shore looks like that was his name," she admitted. "Is he shore enough your grandchild? Can he walk and talk? How old is he? Why that's jist the age of mine—17 months. Paul and Silas! Ain't that a plumb sight?"

She looked at me again and this time her stare was a little less hard. "How old air you?" she asked abruptly.

I stammered a little and told her.

"You shore don't look it," she said.

"Neither do you," I returned.

"My daughter," she continued presently, "is here with her baby, spendin' the summer with us. All the way from Pennsylvany," she added proudly.

"It's odd, but mine's from the same State," I said, "and she and the baby are in the woods with us this summer."

"Mine is named Paul."

"Law! You shore cain't expect me to believe that. It jist cain't be so, that things could be exactly alike that a-way. Could it? Still, strange things shore do happen. And Paul and Silas! It don't look like it could be the truth. They was in jail together, wasn't they?

"Say! I had most fergot that babies could be so sweet. But this little feller, why I don't believe half the time, hardly, that he's human. Seems like he must be jist a—a"—

"Cupid," I said. "Or a little angel, perhaps."

"That's it," she agreed. "And he's so funny, too, always a-smilin' and a-laughin' and cuttin' up little tricks and a-lookin' so cute. Sometimes I shore think he's jist some kind of a little somethin' that—that"——

"That lived in the woods," I suggested, "and that was captured while out driving in his butterfly chariot."

"Shore! That's him."

"Shore! Leaves all his other playthings in the shade. Jist carries it around by the handle, a-whackin' every little thing he comes to."

"And he has a funny little trick of hiding things in a knothole that goes through to the ground, out in the storeroom," I said.

"Shore! That's Silas to a T."

"It's Paul I'm trying to describe," I said.

"It shore couldn't be nobody but Silas," she declared. "And, say! They's been jist two other babies in the world that ever did come up anywhars nigh to him fer cuteness and they was babies more than 20 years ago. One of 'em is my grandchild's mother and the other is her brother."

"I've said the same thing dozens of times," I said, laughing.

"Is his curls yaller?" she asked, scrutinizing the picture.

"And he has little bangs in front like Silas. And dressed cool fer summer like Silas. Say! their pitchers tuck dressed the same way ort to look purty nigh like twins."

"Of course," she resumed, breaking a short silence, "I ain't sayin' that any baby anywhars can come up to Silas in looks, but"——

And then we looked at each other—understandingly—and laughed together in a way that made us kin.

"Say!" she said, "I put on a big kettle of cornfield beans this mornin' and we're goin' to have fresh beets to eat with 'em. And they cain't nobody come up with Marthy makin' corn bread. She jist stirs it up, kinder careless like, with sour cream and eggs and bakes it quick. It jist natchelly melts in your mouth. We'll give La Belle some oats and pump some fresh water fer her.

"And say!" confidentially, "I reckon Joshy Joe was right. He said all the time he'd bet you was a shore-enough woman. And he says that women has jist natcherly got to take some interest in things outside the home or the home, itself, will have a big chance for goin' to the devil. He says they ain't much encouragement tryin' to raise up your childern right and then have to turn 'em loose in a world where women ain't no say-so. I jist reckon likely, that I've made a plumb gawm of the whole thing and have been a-barkin' up the wrong tree all the time.

"You know, I said I wouldn't never want to vote till I had changed my mind. Now don't say a word about it to Joshy Joe. I'll tell him myself when I git round to it and am good and ready. But I'll tell you fer fear I don't git another chance: My mind is changed. A person that can have a grandchild like Silas! Well, my mind is jist natchelly changed, that's all. If women can vote an' be grandmothers, too, I'm fer it."

she began to read: "I'll say this much: Miss Sharp of Berg Bros., Omaha—the one you warned against as the human cactus—had me up for dinner. Well, I know you don't, but it's true. Her father and I hit it off just like that. He's a character, that old boy. Ever meet him? No? And Miss Sharp told me something about herself that explains her porcupine pose. That poor child was engaged to a chap who was killed in the Spanish-American War, and she"——

"Kate Sharp!" interrupted Emma McChesney. "Why, T. A. Buck, in all her vinegary, narrow life, that girl has never had a beau, much less"——

"Emma McChesney, you haven't developed—er—claws, have you?"

With a gasp, Emma McChesney plunged into the papers before her. For 10 minutes the silence of the room was unbroken except for the crackling of papers. Then Emma McChesney put down the first sheaf and looked up at her business partner.

"Very," answered T. A. Buck, and handed her another set.

Another 10 minutes of silence. Emma McChesney reached out a hand for still another set of papers. The pink of repressed excitement was tinting her cheeks.

"Practically, yes."

"T. A. Buck," she slapped the papers before her smartly with the back of her hand, "this means you've broken our record for Middle Western sales!"

"Yes," said T. A. quietly. "Dad would have enjoyed a morning like this, wouldn't he?"

Emma McChesney stood up.

"Enjoyed it! He is enjoying it. Don't tell me that T. A. Senior, just because he is no longer on earth, has failed to get the joy of knowing that his son has realized his fondest dreams. Why, I can feel him here in this room, I can see those bright brown eyes of his twinkling behind his glasses. Not know it! Of course he knows it."

"D'you know, I felt that way, too."

Suddenly Emma McChesney began to laugh. It was not all mirth—that laugh. Buck waited.

"And to think that I—I kindly and patronizingly handed you a little book full of tips on how to handle Western buyers, 'The Salesman's Who's Who'—I, who used to think I was the witch of the West when it came to selling! You, on your first selling trip, have made me look like—like a shoestring peddler."

"It's true. And now that I know, it explains a lot of things that I've been puzzling about in the last 24 hours."

"What kind of things?"

"The way you look and act and think. The way you carry your head. The way you sit in a chair. The very words you use, your gestures, your intonations. They're different."

Which remark, while not a particularly happy one, certainly was not in itself so unfortunate as to explain why Mrs. McChesney should have turned rather suddenly and bolted into her own office across the hall and closed the door behind her.

T. A. Buck, quite cool and unruffled, viewed her sudden departure quizzically. Then he took his cigar from his mouth and stood eyeing it a moment with more attention, perhaps, than it deserved, in spite of its fine aroma. When he put it back between his lips and sat down at his desk once more he was smiling ever so slightly.

Then began a new order of things in the offices of the T. A. Buck Featherloom Petticoat Co. Feet that once had turned quite as a matter of course toward the door marked "Mrs. McChesney," now took the direction of the door opposite—and that door bore the name of Buck. Those four months of Mrs. McChesney's absence had put her partner to the test. The acid test had washed away the accumulated dross of years and revealed the precious metal beneath. T. A. Buck had proved to be his father's son.

If Mrs. McChesney noticed that the head office had miraculously moved across the hall, if her sharp ears marked that the many feet that once had paused at her door now stopped at the door opposite, if she realized that instead of, "I'd like your opinion on this, Mrs. McChesney," she often heard the new, "I'll ask Mr. Buck," she did not show it by word or sign.

The first of October found buyers still flocking into New York from every state in the country. Shrewd men and women, these—bargain hunters on a grand scale. Armed with the long spoon of business knowledge, they came to skim the cream from factory and workroom products set forth for their inspection.

For years it had been Emma McChesney's quiet boast that of those whose business brought them to the offices and showrooms of the T. A. Buck Featherloom Petticoat Co., the foremost insisted on dealing only with her. She was proud of her following. She liked their loyalty. Their preference for her was the subtlest compliment that was in their power to pay. Ethel Morrissey, whose friendship dated back to the day when Emma McChesney had sold Featherlooms through the Middle West, used to say laughingly, her plump, comfortable shoulders shaking, "Emma, if you ever give me away by telling how many years I've been buying Featherlooms of you, I'll—I'll call down upon you the spinster's curse."

Early Monday morning Mrs. McChesney, coming down the hall from the workroom, encountered Miss Ella Sweeney of Klein & Co., Des Moines, Io., stepping out of the elevator. A very skittish Miss Sweeney, rustling, preening, conscious of her dangling black earrings and her Robespierre collar and her beauty patch. Emma McChesney met this apparition with outstretched, welcoming hand.

She led the way, not noticing that Miss Sweeney came reluctantly, her eyes on the closed door across the way.

"Sit down," said Emma McChesney, and pulled a chair nearer her desk. "No; wait a minute! Let me look at you. Now, Ella, don't try to tell me that that dress came from Des Moines, Iowa! Do I! Why, child, it's distinctive!"

Emma McChesney, radiating good will and energy, went on:

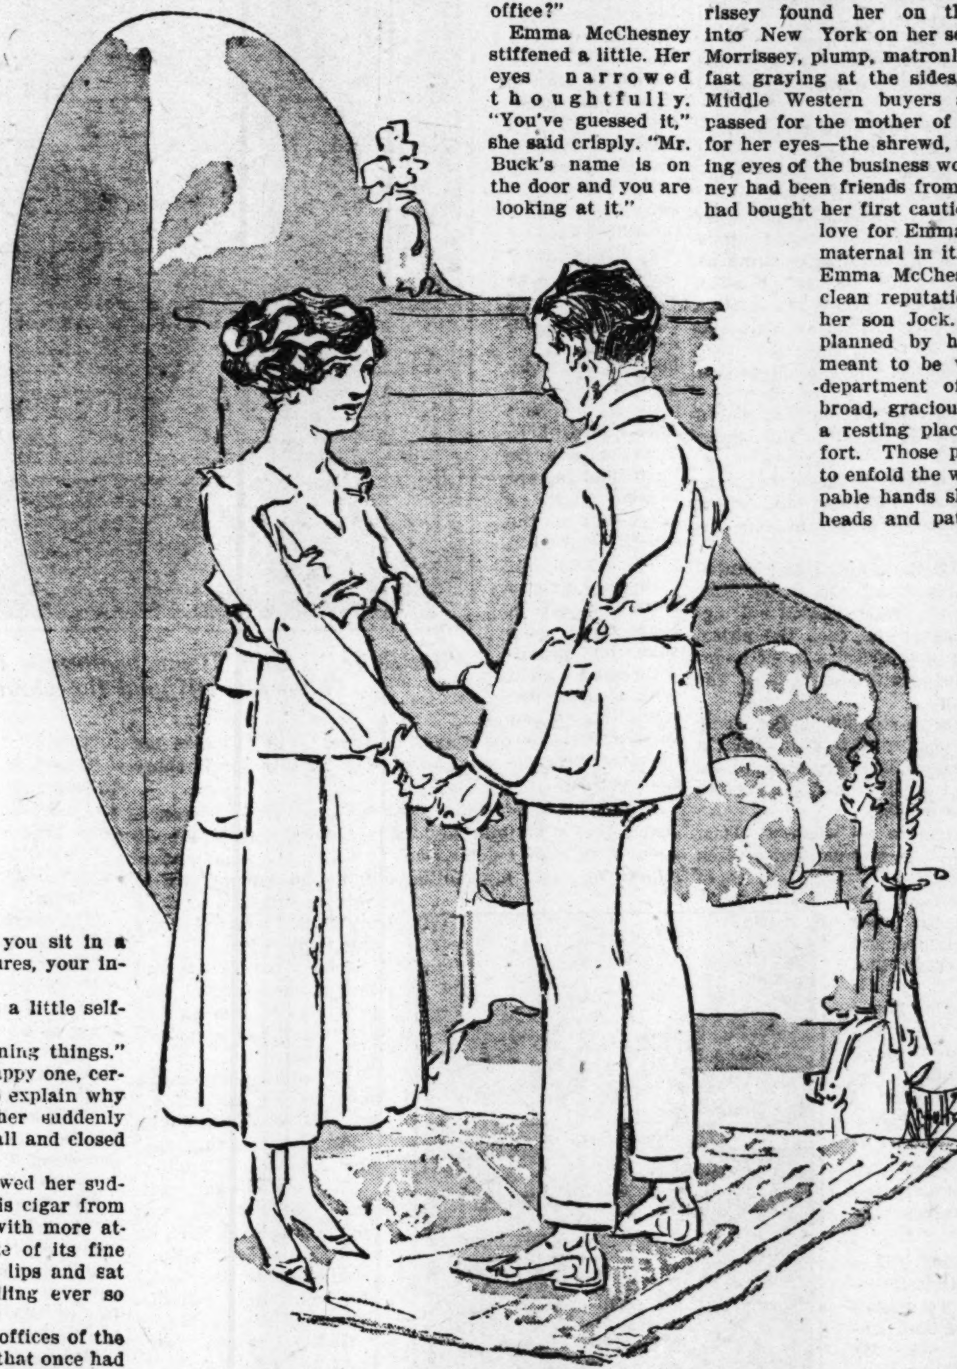
"Wait till you see our new samples! You'll buy a million dollars' worth. Just let me lead you to our new Walk-Easy bifurcated skirt. We call it the 'one-stepper's delight.'" She put a hand on Ella Sweeney's arm, preparatory to guiding her to the showrooms in the rear. But Miss Sweeney's strange reluctance grew into a resolve. A blush, as real as it was unaccustomed, arose to her bepowdered cheeks.

"Is—I—that is—Mr. Buck is in, I suppose?"

"Mr. Buck? Oh, yes, he's in."

Miss Sweeney's eyes sought the closed door across the hall. "Is that—his office?"

Emma McChesney stiffened a little. Her eyes narrowed thoughtfully. "You've guessed it," she said crisply. "Mr. Buck's name is on the door and you are looking at it."



"But promise me one thing, T. A. Promise me that when you come home for dinner at night, you'll never say, 'Good Heavens, I had that for lunch.'"

"You want to see Mr. Buck?" asked Emma McChesney quietly.

Miss Sweeney simpered down at her glove tips, fluttered her eyelids.

"Well—yes—I—I—you see, I bought of him this year, and when you buy of a person, why, naturally, you"——

"Naturally; I understand."

"Mr. Buck, Miss Sweeney of Des Moines is here, and I'm sure you want to see her. This way, Miss Sweeney."

Miss Sweeney, sidling, blushing, fluttering, teetered in. Emma McChesney, just before she closed the door, saw a light spasm cross Buck's face. It was gone so quickly and a radiant smile sat there so reassuringly, that she wondered if she had not been mistaken, after all. He had advanced, hand outstretched, with:

"Miss Sweeney! It—it's wonderful to see you again! You're looking"——

The closed door stifled the rest. Emma McChesney, in her office across the way, stood a moment in the center of the room, her hand covering her eyes. The hardy chrysanthemums still glowed sunnily from their vase. The little room was very quiet except for the ticking of the smart, leather-encased clock on the desk. The closed door shut out factory and office sounds. And Emma McChesney stood with one hand over her eyes. So Napoleon might have stood after Waterloo.

After this first lesson Mrs. McChesney did not err again. When, two days later, Miss Sharp of Berg Bros., Omaha, breezed in, looking strangely juvenile and distinctly anticipatory, Emma greeted her smilingly and waved her toward the door opposite. Miss Sharp, the erstwhile bristling, was strangely smooth and sleek. She glanced ever so softly, sighed ever so flutteringly.

"Working side by side with him, seeing him day after day, how have you been able to resist him?"

Emma McChesney was only human after all.

"By remembering that this is a business house, not a matrimonial parlor."

The dart found no lodging place in Miss Sharp's sleek armor. She seemed scarcely to have heard.

"My dear," she whispered, "his eyes! And his manner! You must be—watchamaycallit—adamant. Is that the way you pronounce it? You know what I mean."

"Oh, yes," replied Emma McChesney evenly. "I—know what you mean."

She told herself that she was justified in the righteous contempt which she felt for this sort of thing. A heart-breaker! A cheap lady killer! Whereupon in walked Sam Bloom of the Paris Emporium, Duluth, one of Mrs. McChesney's stanchest admirers and a long-tried business friend.

The usual thing: "Younger than ever, Mrs. McChesney! You're a wonder—yes, you are! How's business? Same here. Going to have lunch with me today?" Then: "I'll just run in and see Buck. Say, where's he been keeping himself all these years? Chip off the old block, that boy."

So he had the men, too!

It was in this frame of mind that Miss Ethel Morrissey found her on the morning that she came into New York on her semi-annual buying trip. Ethel Morrissey, plump, matronly-looking, quiet, with her hair fast graying at the sides, had nothing of the skittish Middle Western buyers about her. She might have passed for the mother of a brood of six if it were not for her eyes—the shrewd, twinkling, far-sighted, reckoning eyes of the business woman. She and Emma McChesney had been friends from the day that Ethel Morrissey had bought her first cautious bill of Featherlooms. Her love for Emma McChesney had much of the maternal in it. She felt a personal pride in Emma McChesney's work, her success, her clean reputation, her life of self-denial for her son Jock. When Ethel Morrissey was planned by her maker she had not been meant to be wasted on the skirt and suit department of a small-town store. That broad, gracious breast had been planned as a resting place for heads in need of comfort. Those plump, firm arms were meant to enfold the weak and distressed. Those capable hands should have smoothed troubled heads and patted plump cheeks instead of wasting their gifts in folding piles of petticoats and deftly twitching a plait or a tuck into place. She was playing Rosalind in business when she should have been cast for the Nurse.

She entered Emma McChesney's office, now, in her quiet, blue suit and her neat hat, and she looked very sane and cheerful and rosy-cheeked and dependable. At least, so Emma McChesney thought, as she kissed her, while the plump arms held her close.

"Well, Emma McChesney, flourish your Featherlooms for me. I want to buy and get it over, so we can talk."

"Are you sure that you want to buy of me?" asked Emma McChesney, a little wearily.

"What's the joke?"

"I'm not joking. I thought that perhaps you might prefer to see Mr. Buck this trip."

Ethel Morrissey placed one forefinger under Emma McChesney's chin and turned that lady's face toward her and gazed at her long and thoughtfully—the most trying test of courage in the world, that, to one whose eyes fear meeting yours. Emma McChesney, bravest of women, tried to withstand it, and failed. The next instant her head lay on Ethel Morrissey's broad breast, her hands were clutching the plump shoulders, her cheek was being patted soothingly by the kind hands.

Now, now—what is it, dear? Tell Ethel. Yes; I do know, but tell me, anyway. It'll do you good."

And Emma McChesney told her. When she had finished:

"You bathe your eyes, Emma, and put on your hat and we'll eat. Oh, yes, you will. A cup of tea, anyway. Isn't there some little, cool, fool place where I can be comfortable on a hot day like this—where we can talk comfortably? I've got at least an hour's conversation in me."

With the first sip of her first cup of tea, Ethel Morrissey began to unload that burden of conversation.

"Emma, this is the best thing that could have happened to you. Oh, yes it is. The queer thing about it is that it didn't happen sooner. It was bound to come. You know, Emma, the Lord lets a woman climb just so high up the mountain of success. And then, when she gets too cocky, when she begins to measure her wits and brain and strength against that of men, and finds herself superior, he just taps her smartly on the head and shins, so that she stumbles, falls and rolls down a few miles on the road she has traveled so painfully. He does it just as a gentle reminder to her that she's only a woman, after all. Oh, I know all about this feminist talk. But this thing's been proven. Look at what happened to—to Joan of Arc, and Becky Sharp, and Mary Queen of Scots, and—yes, I have been spending my evenings reading. Now, stop laughing at your old Ethel, Emma McChesney!"

"You mean me to laugh, dear old thing. I don't feel much like it, though. I don't see why I should be

How a Yankee Invention Enabled British to Blow Up Hindenburg Line

By use of the pipe-forcing jack, a big order for which was filled in this country for the English, Haig's engineers for two years were enabled to run pipe lines of destruction to the German trenches unknown to the enemy and in defiance of their most delicate microphones—It marks a new step in subterranean operations, which in previous wars were employed only in a crude way -:- -:- -:-

WHEN that man-made volcano, extending for 10 miles between Ypres and Armentieres erupted in the early dawn of a day last June, utterly demolishing that part of the famous Hindenburg line, spreading terror among the German troops fortunate enough to escape from the awful cataclysm, and allowing the British infantry which swept over the craters an almost uninterrupted passage, military men all over the world marveled. They marveled not so much at the immensity of the thing, that thousands of tons of explosives had been employed and the operation carried out on the grandest scale known to history, as at how the British had been able to accomplish it.

Scarcely anybody will grant to the British a superior knowledge of mining or any other physical branch of modern warfare. In their 40 years of preparation for the present conflict, the Germans by no means neglected to learn all there was to know about subterranean operations and in fact they were among the very first to turn to them in the present struggle. Yet for two years prior to that morning on the western front when the earth was split open with a detonation that rocked the countryside for miles, British sappers and engineers had been digging a long series of tunnels from their trenches, under No Man's Land, to points under the German positions.

The Germans, doubtless, were doing the same thing, but their plans comprehended only the normal activity of this kind on a part of the line which had been deadlocked for months. And, as was to be expected in the light of previous experience, many of their attempts to lay mines beneath the British trenches were detected and frustrated. Therefore, the amazing success of the British prompts this question: Why did not the Germans become cognizant of the counter activity of the enemy? Why did not their delicate microphones, those instruments which magnify and carry the slightest sounds underground, notify them that digging tools were being wielded in their vicinity?

The answer seems to be that Yankee ingenuity enabled the British to nullify every known means of detection. A Yankee invention utilized by them planted high explosives under the German trenches with a cunning that was almost human; in short, the British ran pipe lines of destruction just as a gang of workmen in the street in front of your home would run a gas pipe from their trench into your residence.

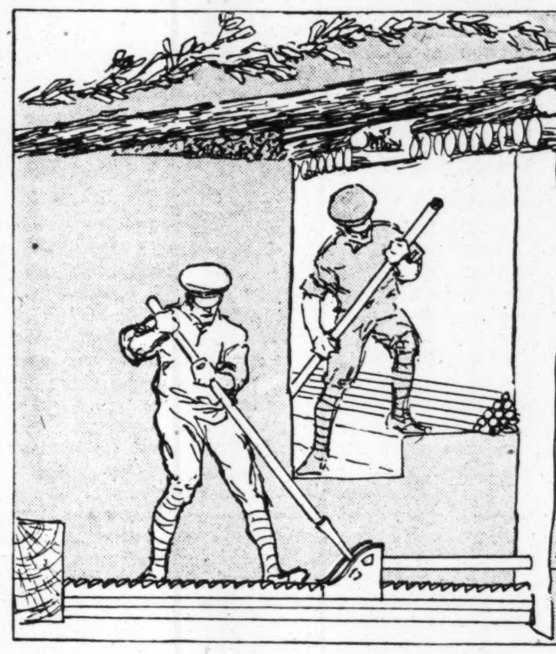
It is now believed that there is a close connection between the Ypres-Armentieres coup and the hurried filling of an order by a big Pittsburg manufacturing concern many months back. This concern makes what is known to the engineering profession as a pipe-forcing jack. Instead of operating vertically, as in the lifting jack, the ratchet and associate jack function horizontally, and the duty of the mechanism is to force or drive a pipe horizontally into and through the ground.

The method of operating this modified jack is simple. First, a trench must be dug to the depth at which the pipe is to be driven and long enough to accommodate the jack, the man or men operating it, and a unit length or section of pipe. When one of these sections has been forced forward into the earth the jack is pulled back to the end of the ratchet, a new section joined to the rear end of the buried pipe and the jack is again brought into play as before, a pumping or rocking movement of the lever forcing the pipe onward.

A short piece of slightly larger pipe, called the "pilot," and having a cutting edge, is joined to the forward end of the leading section. The edge is keen enough to bore through roots and the like and can easily overcome the resistance of ordinary soil. The only thing that will stop it is rock, but it is well known that the soil in Flanders is well adapted to the use of this machine. An ordinary jack of the same type has been used repeatedly to force pipe through the ground for a distance of 300 feet or more.

At the beginning of the war pipe-forcing jacks had been made strong enough to drive pipe up to four inches in diameter and with unit lengths of 14 feet. But since the early part of 1916 more powerful ones, said to be equal to handling pipe six inches in diameter, have been made and shipped abroad. Allowing, however, for the four-inch pipe, one of these sections would have an internal capacity of more than 2000 cubic inches, in which space could be packed nearly 126 pounds of dynamite. In order to intensify the explosion, that section, of course, would have to be sealed at both ends.

A prominent New York engineer, who some years ago learned the value of the pipe-forcing jack when engaged in subaqueous tunnel driving, recently proposed to the United States War Department that it consider this method of piping dynamite for the purpose of mining and countermining operations. In submitting his suggestion, he had this to say:



The pipe-forcing jack in operation. When one length of pipe has been driven forward, another can be put in its place.

"Why should the sappers, at a needless risk, try to dig their galleries the whole distance? Why not stop the tunnel work just outside of the detecting range of the listening microphones, say a distance of a couple of hundred feet away from the foe's position, and then force the explosives, packed in lengths of pipes, onward through the earth by means of these jacks?

"Of course, it may be objected that if it is desired to place tons of dynamite, trinitrotoluol, etc, a single length of pipe holding between 125 and 200 pounds of explosive would not suffice. But what is to prevent the grouping of a series of charged pipes? With one pipe already forced to its goal, others could be pushed into place and arranged concentrically about it, and there is little doubt in my mind that the succeeding operations would be measurably facilitated by reason of the initial or pioneer pipe line. Not only would a procedure of this sort reduce the amount of excavational work, with its peculiar perils where the earth is permeated with water, but it would make it possible to lay both mines and countermines with great rapidity. I am satisfied, too, that the explosive charges could thus be shoved noiselessly to the desired points. The foe's first-line trenches could be dealt with in this way without preliminary tunneling—the only digging being short excavations to accommodate the jacks and the unit lengths of pipe employed. This work could be carried on from our advance trenches.

"It seems to me that the defense of our own machine gun emplacements and field fortifications could be greatly strengthened by the planting of advance mines of this sort. The demoralizing effect of underground explosions is great, because there is no way to detect the mines except by running the saps of counter mines or camouflets in the ordinary way. I am sure that the terrain immediately in front of our trenches could be rapidly protected by a buried grid of this character, and the nature of the soil along much of the western front offers an ideal opportunity for this sort of attack and defense. Our engineers will have hard work and plenty of it at every turn of their task, and why not make this department of their problem easier by adopting facilities that have proved of so much value and practicality in commercial undertakings?

"Piping dynamite under the feet of the foe, to dislodge him and to drive him backward is by no means a fanciful dream. If it has not already been done, it can be done, and why not set the pace in the name of American ingenuity? The deep-planted mine will achieve what gunfire cannot do, and Gen. Haig knows today how many of his recent achievements have been made possible only by the preliminary upheavals of the earth itself. In that way he was able to break the firm and determined grip of his enemy upon ground held desperately and with the highest order of defensive weapons."

The limit at which pipe driven by a jack can be forced is not known, but they apparently have a range of from 50 to 100 yards, for this is the usual distance at which subterranean galleries on the war fronts have to be driven. It is on record, though, that in some of their previous operations on the western front, the British drove tunnels a mile in length. Progress in digging saps depends largely upon the nature of the soil, the nearness of water, and the vigilance of the enemy.

The work heretofore has been attended by many difficulties, and service in the engineer corps is by no means the most desirable of all the branches. The sappers, when digging in the old way, not only had to break their way forward with pick and shovel, as quietly as possible, but the galleries had to be supported with timbers to prevent the earth from caving in upon them. Moreover, all of the debris had to be carried back and out. Their labor was increased enormously and the task was rendered much more perilous if water happened to be present.

Often rival crews, working underground, have detected each other at the same instant, and then has begun a race, the attacking sappers striving to reach their goal under the enemy's position, and the defending sappers endeavoring to intercept them, to countermine and attempt to blow up the attackers' gallery before it is completed. Frequently, when rival headings have broken in upon each other, there have been underground battles, in utter darkness, in which the opposing forces have struggled back and forth, with pick and shovels for weapons instead of the rifles, bayonets and bombs of their fellows above ground.

The military world learned from the Russians and Japanese at Port Arthur what could be done in the way of mining and countermining during the attack and defense of a position generally assumed to be impregnable. The following description of a Japanese subterranean attack was written by an American officer who was one of this country's military observers in the Russo-Japanese War. It is illuminating in that it gives an idea of the great progress since made in this branch of military science:

"When the Japanese saps had reached the northwest corner of the ditch a mineshaft was sunk in the glacis and a gallery started toward the counterscarp. The Russians, meanwhile, started a countermine at this point, their gallery being a few feet lower than that of the Japanese. When the Japanese gallery reached the countermine the latter was fired, breaking into the Japanese gallery. The Japanese then took possession of the Russian countermine gallery and entered the counterscarp gallery at the salient.

"The Russians in the meantime had withdrawn to the reminded of my lowly state. Heaven knows I haven't been so terrifically pleased with myself! Of course, that South American trip was—well, gratifying. But I earned it. For 10 years I lived with head in a sample trunk, didn't I? I worked hard enough to win the love of all these Westerners. It wasn't all walking dreamily down Main street, strewing Featherlooms along my path."

The Story of Emma McChesney

Ethel Morrissey stirred her second cup of tea, sipped, stirred, smiled, then reached over and patted Emma McChesney's hand.

"Emma, I'm a wise old party, and I can see that it isn't all pique with you. It's something else—something deeper. Oh, yes it is! Now let me tell you what happened when T. A. Buck invaded your old-time territory. I was busy up in my department the morning he came in. I had my head in a rack of coats, and a henny customer waiting. But I sensed something stirring, and I stuck my head out of the coat rack in which I was fumbling. The department was aflutter like a poultry yard. Every woman in it, from the little new Swede stock girl to Gladys Hemmingway, who is only working to wear out her old clothes, was standing with her face toward the elevator, and on her face a look that would make the ordinary doormat marked 'Welcome' seem like an insult. I kind of smoothed my back hair, because I knew that only one thing could bring that look into a woman's face. And down the aisle came a tall, slim, distinguished-looking, wonderfully tailored, chamois-gloved, walking-sticked Fifth avenue person with eyes! Of course, I knew. But the other girls didn't. They just sort of fell back at his approach, smitten. He didn't even raise an eyebrow to do it. Now, Emma, I'm not exaggerating. I know what effect he had on me and my girls, and, for that matter, every other man or woman in the store. Why, he was a dream realized to most of 'em. These shrewd, clever buyer-girls know plenty of men—business men of the slap-bang, horn-blowing, bluff, good-natured, hello-kid kind—the kind that takes you out to dinner and blows cigar smoke in your face. Along comes this chap, elegant, well dressed and not even conscious of it, polished, suave, smooth, low-voiced, well bred. Why, when he spoke to a girl, it was the subtlest kind of flattery. Can you see little Sadie Harris of Duluth, drawing a mental comparison between Sam Bloom, the store manager, and this fascinating devil—Sam, red-faced, loud-mouthed, shirtsleeving it around the sample room, his hat pushed 'way back on his head, chewing his cigar like mad, and wild-eyed for fear he's buying wrong? Why, child, in our town, nobody carries a cane except the Elks when they have their annual parade, and old man Schwenkel, who's lame. And yet we all accepted that yellow walking stick of Buck's. It belonged to him. There isn't a skirt buyer in the Middle West that doesn't dream of him all night and push Featherlooms in the store all day. Emma, I'm old and fat and 50, but when I had dinner with him at the Manitoba House that evening, I caught myself making eyes at him, knowing that every woman in the dining room would have given her front teeth to be where I was."

After which extensive period, Ethel Morrissey helped herself to her third cup of tea. Emma McChesney relaxed a little and laughed a tremulous little laugh.

"Oh, well, I suppose I must not hope to combat such formidable rivals as walking sticks, chamois gloves and eyes. My business arguments are futile compared to those."

"You're wrong, Emma. Those things helped him, but they didn't sell his line. He sold Featherlooms out of salesmanship, and because he sounded convincing and sincere and business like—and he had the samples. It wasn't all bunk. It was three-quarters business. Those two make an invincible combination."

An hour later, Ethel Morrissey was shrewdly selecting her winter stock of Featherlooms from the stock in the showrooms of the T. A. Buck company. They went about their business transaction, these two, with the cool abruptness of men, speaking little, and then only of prices, discounts, dating, shipping. Their luncheon conversation of an hour before seemed an impossibility.

"You'll have dinner with me tonight?" Emma asked. "Up at my apartment, all cozy?"

"Not tonight, dearie. I'll be in bed by 8. I'm not the girl I used to be. Time was when a New York buying trip was a vacation. Now it's a chore."

She took Emma McChesney's hand and patted it.

"If you've got something real nice for dinner, though, and feel like company, why don't you ask—somebody else that's lonesome."

Emma McChesney, her color high, entered her office. It was 5 o'clock. She cleared her desk in half an hour, breathed a sigh of weariness, reached out for hat and jacket, donned them, and, turning out her lights, closed her door behind her for the day. At the same instant, T. A. Buck slammed his own door and walked briskly down the hall. They met at the elevator.

They descended in silence. The street gained, they paused uncertainly.

"Won't you stay down and have dinner with me tonight, Emma?"

"Thanks so much, T. A. Not tonight."

"I'm—sorry."

"Good-night."

"Good-night."

She turned away. He stood there, in the busy street, looking irresolutely and not at all eagerly in the direction of his club, perhaps, or his hotel, or whatever shelter he sought after business hours. Something in his attitude—the loneliness of it, the uncertainty, the indecision—smote Emma McChesney with a great pang. She came swiftly back.

"I wish you'd come home to dinner with me. I don't know what Annie'll give up. Probably bread pudding. She does when she's left to her own devices. But I—I wish you would." She looked up at him almost shyly.

T. A. Buck took Emma McChesney's arm in a rather unnecessarily firm grip and propelled her, surprised and protesting, in the direction of the nearest vacant taxi.

"But, T. A.! This is idiotic! Why take a cab to go home from the office on a—a week day?"

"In with you! Besides, I never have a chance to take one from the office on Sunday, do I? Does Annie always cook enough for two?"

Apparently Annie did. Annie was something of a witch, in her way. She whisked about, wrought certain changes, did things with asparagus and mayonnaise, lighted the rose-shaded table candles. No one noticed that dinner was 20 minutes late.

Together they admired the great mahogany buffet that Emma had miraculously found space for in the little dining room.

"It glows like a great, deep ruby, doesn't it?" she said proudly. "You should see Annie circle around it with the carpet sweeper. She knows one bump would be followed by instant death."

Looking back on it, afterward, they remembered that the dinner was a very silent one. They did not notice their wordlessness at the time. Once, when the chops came on, Buck said absently:

"Oh, I had those for l"—— Then he stopped abruptly. Emma McChesney smiled.

"Your mother trained you well," she said.

The October night had grown cool. Annie had lighted a wood fire in the living room.

"That was what attracted me to this apartment in the first place," Mrs. McChesney said, as they left the dining room. "A fireplace—a practical, real, wood-burning fireplace in a New York apartment! I'd have signed the lease if the plaster had been falling in chunks and the bathtub had been zinc."

"That's because fireplaces mean home—in our minds," said Buck.

He sat looking into the heart of the glow. There fell another of those comfortable silences.

"T. A., I—I want to tell you that I know I've been acting the cat ever since I got home from South America and found that you had taken charge. You see, you had spoiled me. The thing that has happened to me is the thing that always happens to those who assume to be dictators. I just want you to know, now, that I'm glad and proud and happy because you have come into your own. It hurt me just at first. That was the pride of me. I'm quite over that now. You're not only president of the T. A. Buck company in name. You're its actual head. And that's as it should be. Long live the king!"

Buck sat silent a moment. Then:

"I had to do it, Emma." She looked up. "You have a wonderful brain," said Buck then, and the two utterances seemed connected in his mind.

They seemed to bring no great satisfaction to the woman to whom he addressed them, however. She thanked him dryly, as women do when their brain is dragged into an intimate conversation.

"But," said Buck, and suddenly stood up, looking at her very intently, "it isn't for your mind that I love you this minute. I love you for your eyes, Emma, and for your mouth—you have the tenderest, most womanly-sweet mouth in the world—and for your hair, and the way your chin curves. I love you for your throat line and for the way you walk and talk and sit, for the way you look at me, and for the way you don't look at me."

He reached down and gathered Emma McChesney, the alert, the aggressive, the capable into his arms, quite as men gather the clingingest kind of woman. "And now suppose you tell me just why and how you love me."

And Emma McChesney told him.

When, at last, he was leaving:

"Don't you think," asked Emma McChesney, her hands on his shoulders, "that you overdid the fascination thing just the least leetle bit there on the road?"

"Well, you told me to entertain them, didn't you?"

"Yes," reluctantly; "but I didn't tell you to consecrate your life to 'em. The ordinary fat, middle-aged, everyday traveling man will never be able to sell Featherlooms in the Middle West again. They won't have 'em. They'll never be satisfied with anything less than John Drews after this."

"Emma McChesney, you're not marrying me because a lot of overdressed, giggling, skittish old girls have taken a fancy to make eyes at me, are you?"

Emma McChesney stood up very straight and tall.

"I'm marrying you, T. A., because you're a great, big, fine, upstanding, tender, wonderful"——

Emma McChesney's face grew serious.

"But promise me one thing, T. A. Promise me that when you come home for dinner at night, you'll never say, 'Good heavens, I had that for lunch!'"

How Yankee Invention Enabled British to Blow Up Hindenburg Line

further end of the counterscarp gallery along the east face, where they had erected a sandbag parapet, from which they fired along this gallery. To dislodge them the Japanese constructed a sandbag parapet at the front end of the gallery by tossing in sandbags, which were first built up by a single sapper, who started the parapet lying down on his back. After the parapet was finished a mountain gun was dragged up and mounted behind this parapet. Its heavy shells speedily drove out the Russians from their end and they retreated after mining their end of the gallery so as to cut off the communication into the fort under the ditch. * * * The Japanese then broke into the ditch at the northeast corner and mined across to the foot of the face scarp. A mine gallery was run under the northwest corner of the parapet and sprung on Nov. 26 (1914). This mine was the signal for the general assault of November.

"The assault proved a failure and fresh galleries were driven and two larger mines placed. These were fired Dec 18 and the works successfully assaulted. It was in this fort that Gen Kondratchenko and staff were killed on Dec. 3. It was also the first permanent work to fall into the hands of the Japanese. Among the spoils captured were five 8.7 cm. field guns, two 47 mm. rapid fire guns, two 24 mm. rapid fire guns and four machine guns."

Speaking of the physical conditions that confronted the Japanese sappers, and especially the task faced by the engineer force of the Ninth Division, he says:

"Except on the steep slopes immediately in front of the fort the soil was easily dug. On the steep slopes, however, the ground was practically solid rock, a rotten quartzite, which could be picked out rather easily, as it was full of seams. The shafts and galleries against North Tungchikuanshan, Erhlungshan and Sungshushan were all in solid rock and required no lining. Those directed against the Chinese wall from the two Panlungs had to be timbered, being in earth. The sapping operations in front of the Ninth Division alone involved the following casualties: Killed, 109 engineers, 201 infantry; wounded, 449 engineers, 923 infantry. The battalion commander is authoriey for the statement that only 14 or 15 soldiers remained in the engineer battalion of the Ninth Division out of the original complement that had departed from Japan.

"The average daily losses at each saphead were five or fifteen or twenty, according to the number of saps under construction. An engineer officer, assistant to the chief engineer, is authority for the statement that the aggregate losses by sapping, infantry and engineers, exceeded 2000 men. The mining operations of the Japanese presented no unusual features. At Erlungshan five galleries were driven under the front parapet and charges aggregating 5940 pounds of 'yellow powder,' or picric acid, were placed. In the case of Sungshushan two mine galleries were driven under the salient and about 14,000 pounds of black powder placed in the charges. The crater of Sungshushan was enormous, being about 80 feet in diameter and 127 feet on the axis. The Japanese excavated their galleries largely by chisels and picks, but resorted also to light blasts. The Russians do not appear to have engaged in countermining very actively."

The great craters which so often are referred to in dispatches from the front have for the most part been caused by the explosion of subterranean mines. While it is true that the shells of monster siege guns have blown great holes wherever they have fallen and burst, these are small when compared with the craters opened by the blasts of underground mines. Some of the single ones are from 40 to 50 yards in diameter and frequently a score or more mines, each charged with several tons of explosives, are set off simultaneously.

A Premium of $70,000,000 Upon Common Sense day, dissipated even this. It was found that a prenuptial agreement had been signed between Judge Bingham and his wife, by which he waived all claim to more than $5,000,000 of his wife's great property. He immediately announced that he would adhere to the agreement and not contest the will. Thus Louise Wise Lewis will shortly come into full possession of the great fortune, minus only the $5,000,000 provided in the nuptial contract.

On his death Henry M. Flagler left about seventy millions. He had previously given his wife four millions. Meantime, four years have elapsed and many of the Flagler holdings have made great advances, along with other war-boomed securities.

And now as to the young woman who is to administer so much money and power. She is of medium height, vivacious and pretty. But she is also serious and sensible. She has been carefully trained for the responsibility which devolves upon her. In spite of her youth she has been for several years interested in social work, in child's welfare propaganda and in relief efforts in France.

"Miss Wise is one of the few women among the many women I know who is capable of making great wealth do the most good. She is one of the brightest, sunniest young women you can imagine, but she possesses, I am glad to say, a wealth of common sense."

And for that she is mistress of the Flagler millions—a bride of 20.

HOW FAT FOLKS BECOME SLENDER

Eat All You Need; Get Fresh Air. Breathe Deeply. Try Oil of Korein

Fat persons, particularly those from ten to sixty pounds above normal weight, will be interested to learn how they may easily reduce their weight without starvation diet or tiresome exercise.

If you are overstout you are daily drawing on your reserve strength and are constantly lowering your vitality by carrying this excess burden, Don't jeopardize your health or be a laughing stock any longer.

Spend as much time as you can in the open air, practice deep breathing and get from any good druggist a box of oil of korein capsules; take one after each meal and one before retiring at night. Also follow the simple directions that come with the box.

Surprising reports of weight reduction come in even after just a few days' treatment. With proper reduction the flesh becomes firm, the skin smooth and the general health improved. Work seems easier and a lighter, more buoyant feeling takes possession of the whole being.

If you want to reduce ten or sixty pounds give this a trial. You will probably find it is just what you need. Start on the easy road to longer life and happiness today.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Blue satin afternoon gown with side draperies, which are popular this fall. Long, tightly cuffed sleeves add a finishing touch of smartness.

Somewhere in Some Kitchen

CHARACTER SKETCHES
BY W. E. HILL

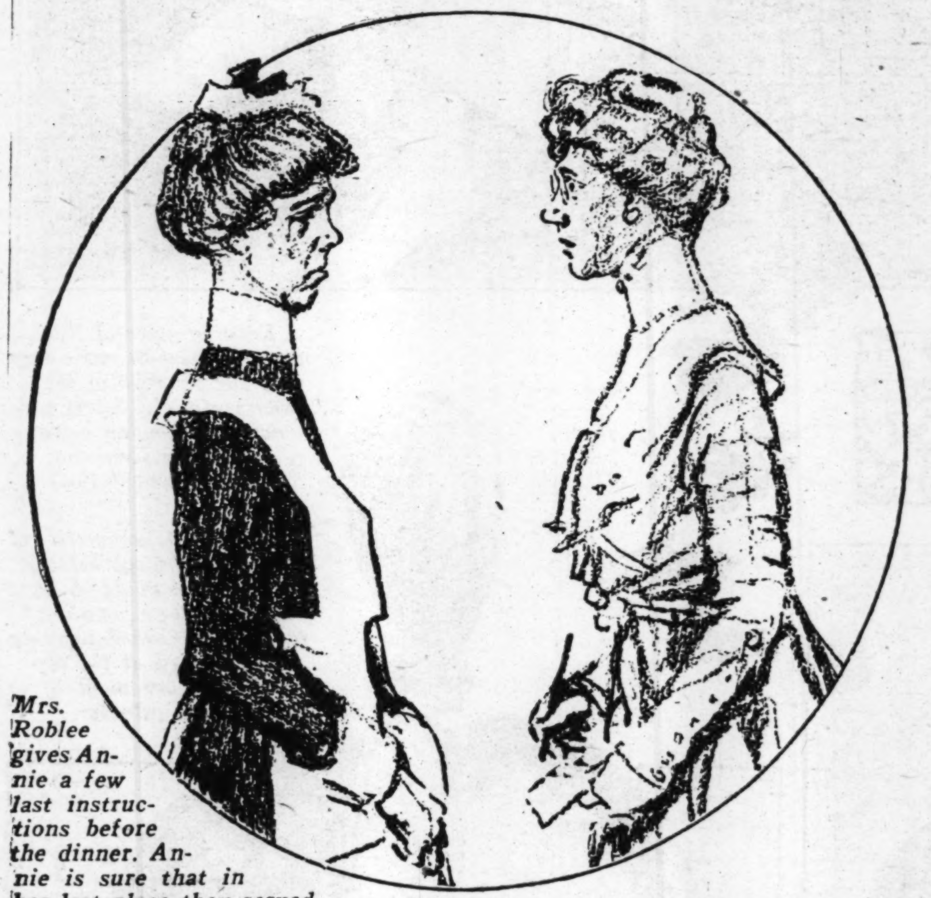
Cook, who is helping her sister's family over the hard times, finds it just as convenient not to meet any of the household on her way out.



Mrs. Roblee gives Annie a few last instructions before the dinner. Annie is sure that in her last place they served the salad and soup together—and why can't she do it that way here?

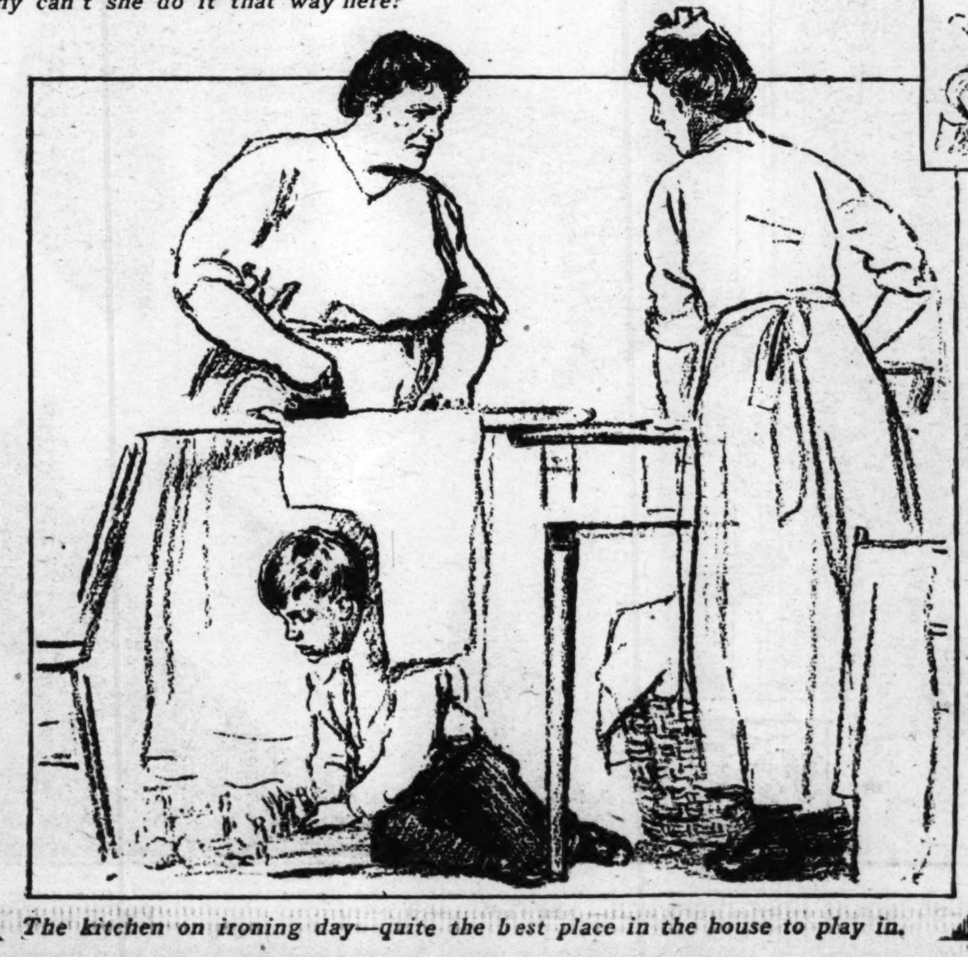
"Oh, he wants to know where his eggs is, does he? Well, you tell him, with my compliments, he'll get 'em when I get good an' ready!"



The kitchen on ironing day—quite the best place in the house to play in.

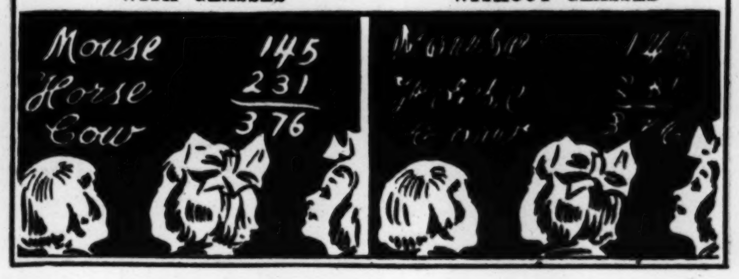
POOR SIGHT WITH GLASSES

POOR SIGHT WITHOUT GLASSES



"Are you sure it will launder?"

How many times have you hesitated over a charming blouse, and finally decided not to buy it!

You were afraid it would turn yellower and yellower each time it was laundered—that the lace would become coarsened and heavy looking—that it would never look really lovely after its first tubbing.

Now—you buy the daintiest, filmiest blouses—with only one comfortable thought about cleansing them. You know Lux will launder them perfectly. Chiffon cloth! Georgette crepe! Crepe de Chine! Time after time you send them to the thick Lux suds and they come back as white as when new.

Two things that ruin silk blouses

Alkali and rubbing are the two things that cause more casualties in the silk blouse family than all other things put together Alkali turns the silk yellow, rubbing coarsens and pulls it, and makes the lace heavy and rough.

Lux has absolutely no free Alkali. Use Lux for any fabric that can be washed in water.

Lux requires no rubbing, because the delicate flakes contain more real cleansing value than is possible in any other form of soap—they dissolve the dirt in a few minutes, and it drops out into the water, with a few dippings up and down.

Begin saving your waists now! Grocers, druggists and department stores have Lux. Lever Bros Co., Cambridge, Mass.

How to wash silk waists

Whisk a handful of Lux into a thick lather in very hot water. Add cold water till lukewarm. Dip your waist through the foamy lather many times—work it about in the suds—do not rub. Rinse in three waters, the first lukewarm, the second cooler, the last cold. Squeeze the water out—do not wring. Dry in the shade. When nearly dry, press with a warm iron—never a hot one. Georgette crepe waists should be gently pulled into shape as they dry, and also should be shaped as you iron.

LUX Won't turn silks yellow!
